PREFACE

CHRONOLOGY traces the order, History the connection, of Events; the one gathers the materials, the other digests them into that philosophic lesson, which educes from the changes of the past the progress of the future. Accuracy is therefore the first requisite: without this the stream of time is obstructed and diverted from its true course; students and writers are led to unsound deductions; research is bewildered and erudition unprofitable. Yet this element, all-important as it is, has been but negligently employed by most English Chronologists. While preparing the present volume, their productions have, of course, been consulted, examined, and tested; the result is surprise and shame at the slovenly negligence manifested in the treatment of this branch of our literature generally. To show that this charge is not advanced on slight grounds, the following illustrations are given of the manner in which the public has been misinformed by eleven of these writers, whom it would be invidious to name, unless the truth of the accusations be challenged; without going back to ancient times, these instances are taken from later periods, in which the present generation is most interested.

A.D. 710 we are told that Gebel al Tarik (that is, the mountain of Tarik, the rock itself of Gibraltar,) landed at Gibraltar, April 29.

In two different pages of one Chronology we find the following entries:—

A.D. 1228 The Sixth Crusade under the Emperor Frederic II.

- A.D. 1240 Richard earl of Cornwall heads the Sixth Crusade. (This last-mentioned prince visited Palestine that year, and paid a sum of money to ransom Jerusalem; but he led no Crusade.)
- In 1315 the dissection of dead bodies is said to have been forbidden in the anatomical school of Bologna by Pope Boniface VIII., who had then been dead twelve years.
- A.D. 1331 is given as the date of the settlement of the Teutonic knights in Prussia. This event, which is of importance as the origin of a great modern kingdom, took place a century earlier; the knights built the city of Thorn in 1231, and consolidated their power in 1237.
- A.D. 1349 the order of the Garter said to have been instituted by Edward III., in memory of his son's victories in Spain, which victories were not achieved till 1367, that is 18 years afterwards.
- A.D. 1421 an inundation at Dortrecht is said to have formed the Zuyder Zee, which is 50 miles distant from that place, and was created by an irruption of the sea into lake Flevo in 1231.
- A.D. 1692 According to Bishop Burnet, a contemporary writer, the massacre of Glencoe was perpetrated in the month of Feb., 1692, and was so notorious as to be made a subject of parliamentary inquiry; yet there is the following confusion in the dates assigned to it by different chronologists:—
 1691, March 9, by one; May 9, by another.
 1692, Jan. 31.
 1693, Jan. 31, by one; Feb. 12, by another.
- A.D. 1799 The death of Pope Pius VI. is stated by one Chronology to have taken place, Aug. 19, and in the next page, Sept. 11. Both dates are wrong, as he died Aug. 29.
- A.D. 1800 Stanislas Augustus is placed in the list of sovereigns as king of Poland, although his kingdom was finally dismembered and annihilated in 1795, and he himself died in 1798.
- A.D. 1807, July 18, Copenhagen bombarded by an English fleet under Parker and Nelson—an event well known to have occurred April 2, 1801, and that Nelson fell at Trafalgar, Oct. 21, 1805.

From 1799 to 1813, with the exception of the two years 1801 and 1806, Victor Amadeus is said to have been king of Sardinia, where no sovereign of that name had reigned since 1796.

A.D. 1814 Charles John is said to be king of Sweden; Charles XIII. was then king, and it was not till after his death in 1818, that Charles John succeeded.

In Portugal the following succession of sovereigns is given:

A.D. 1813 Maria Frances Isabella, queen.

A.D. 1814 John Maria Lewis Joseph, king.

A.D. 1815 Maria Lewis Joseph, king.

A.D. 1816 Maria Francis Isabella, queen.

During this period Maria Isabella was the reigning queen: but from her state of mental imbecility, her son was regent; on her death in 1816, he became King John VI.

From 1809 to 1814, Ferdinand IV. is called king of the Two Sicilies, during which period Joachim Murat was king of Naples, one of the Two Sicilies; after his expulsion and death in 1815, the two kingdoms were re-united, and Ferdinand IV. changed his title to Ferdinand I. king of the Two Sicilies.

In one Chronology we find

A.D. 1815, Feb. 8, an ambassador (Lord Amherst) sailed for China.

A.D. 1816, Feb. 8, Lord Amherst and suite sailed from Portsmouth on an embassy to China. (The last is the correct date.)

Even the civic dignitaries of London are misplaced with the same negligence. After having stated correctly that Ald. Birch was lord mayor in 1815 (1814—15) with Messrs. Leigh and Reay, as sheriffs, he is made to serve the office again with the same sheriffs, in 1816, which was the year of Ald. Wood's first mayoralty; and for a third time in 1818, when Ald. Christopher Smith filled the civic chair.

Sir Walter Scott is well known to have been born in 1771; yet in one Chronology 1751 is given as the year of his birth, and in another, 1769.

The Marquis of Londonderry committed suicide in 1822; a marked event, which, by introducing Mr. Canning into the Foreign Secretaryship, materially influenced the destinies of the world. Yet two of our highest authorities place it in 1824, a date which, if accepted, would involve all history from 1822 to 1827 in inextricable confusion.

The death of the Princess Sophia, which occurred May 27, 1848, is fixed by one Chronology at Nov. 29, 1844.

Even so late as 1853, we find Frederic, Viscount Melbourne, who died that year, mistaken for his brother William, the former prime minister, who died in 1848.

These are a few specimens out of many hundreds of similar errors, which are now in current circulation among us; some of them sanctioned by great names, whose authority the every-day consulter of their works accepts with habitual and implicit confidence. They are not errors of the press; but indicate a want of research, and a hasty, unscrutinizing adoption of presented allegations.

It would be presumptuous to arrogate infallibility in the volume now offered to the public; it may, it must, have the imperfections incidental to human weakness; but the vigilance which has detected so many grave anachronisms in others, may be accepted as a pledge, that it has been no less exerted to prevent a recurrence of them here. The most trustworthy authorities in our own, in ancient and in modern languages, have been consulted, mostly in the originals, to render this work at once comprehensive and accurate. The Fasti Hellenici and Romani of Clinton have been invaluable guides, and with Usher and Hales, and occasionally Pausanias and Herodotus, have furnished the chief materials for the chronology of Palestine and Early Greece. They have contributed, also, to that of the Primæval East and Egypt, assisted by and compared with the often contradictory, but always useful, information supplied by Ideler, Lepsius, Bunsen, Layard, and occasionally Eusebius. L'Art de vérifier les Dates has also been consulted, but not with such extensive advantage as its reputation promised. The early dates of Rome have been supplied by comparing Livy, Dionysius of Halicarnassus, and Niebuhr, with Clinton and other Chronologies. For the Roman and Byzantine Empires, Gibbon, Clinton (till A.D. 641), Eckhel, Niebuhr (in his Lectures till A.D. 478), Heeren, Finlay, and Koepfen, have furnished copious material, and for Gothic Italy, Cassiodorus. For the History of the Saracens, Ockley, and for the Crusades, Wilken, have been collated with Gibbon. For our own country, the Saxon Chronicle, Bede, Sharon Turner, Lappenberg, William of Malmesbury, Hume and Smollett, Burnet, Sir Harris Nicolas, and especially the Oxford Chronological Tables (which are deservedly exempted from our general censure). For the latter years, Annual Registers, contemporaneous Journals, and Newspapers, are the fund from which our stores have been drawn. The Uebersicht der Geschichte of Kruse has been all-sufficient for Germany and the North; and has also supplied much for France, aided by the Tablettes Chronologiques of Serieys, and the recently-published Chronologie Universelle of Dreyss. The indefatigable and honest Muratori has arranged, with admirable precision, in his Annali d'Italia, the transactions of a country, which was for ages the battle-field of Europe, and the wars of whose pettiest principalities were generally connected with those of the mightiest potentates then striving for mastery in Christendom. On the history of the Church, information has been principally derived from Neander's History of Christianity, Ranke's History of the Popes, and Riddle's Ecclesiastical Chronology. For Spain, Condé and Mariana have been collated and, wherever possible, reconciled. In addition to these main sources, many others have been referred to, as occasion required; and it will be found that the pith of more than 100 volumes of standard excellence has been compressed into these pages. If, therefore, any who have been accustomed to rely on other Chronologies, should here find dates or facts not in accordance with their favourite authorities, let them not ascribe such discrepancies to carelessness or ignorance; they have always been the result of investigation.

There are some points in History which never have been, never will be, and never can be, decided; on these, where forbearance ought to be most conciliative, disputation is too often most vehement, and acerbity most intolerant. One of these is the origin of the art of printing. After some investigation, the view here taken is that which ascribes the first rude idea of it to Laurence Koster, and the perfecting of his invention to Guttenberg, Fust, and Schoeffer. We are aware of the danger of this controversial ground, and must ask those who question our assertion, to hesitate in censuring what has not been adopted without inquiry. Connected with this, a minor debate has arisen on the printing of the Tractatus Petri Hispani by Fust, in 1442. Some bibliographers deny the fact, because no copy of such an edition has ever been found; but this negative evidence is no proof that it never existed, and we have, on the other hand, the positive testimony of Hadrian Junius, who says that Fust did print the work. Petrus Hispanus became, in 1276, Pope John XXI; Muratori celebrates his learning, especially in medicine ; and Mariana ascribes such popularity to his Tractatus de Medicina, that it was called Thesaurus pauperum. All this affords strong presumption in favour of the selection of such a work as one of the first to be issued from the press. Hadrian Junius was born in 1511, studied medicine at Paris and Bologna, practised in London, was physician to the king of Denmark, and finally settled, in 1560, at Haerlem, where he occupied a high station, and wrote his Batavia. His studies must have brought the Treatise of Petrus Hispanus under his notice ; he lived within the first century after the time when he says that the Tractatus Logici, which included this, were printed by Fust, and asserts that the fact, to which he assigns the date of 1442, was well known in his day. On these grounds it has been introduced into this Chronology.

Much confusion prevails in Chronology from Oct. 15, 1582, (when Gregory XIII. altered the calendar, and introduced his "New Style,") till Sept. 14, 1752, when it was adopted in Great Britain ; and this is increased by our having adhered, during the same period, to the practice of not commencing the legal year till March 25. It has, therefore, often been necessary to distinguish dates, by adding to them either o.s. (old style) or n.s. (new style). Discrepancies which have not been noticed, may be accounted for or corrected, by bearing in mind this variation, first of ten, and, after 1700, of eleven days. Thus the death of the Empress Elizabeth, of Russia, and the accession of Peter III., are placed by some chronologies in 1761, and by others in 1762 ; both are right, for according to the Russian o.s. calendar, these events took place Dec. 25, 1761, while the n.s. of other countries made it Jan. 5, 1762.

To have adapted the Mahometan Hegira to the Christian era with nice exactness, would have too much incumbered these Tables with figures and computations. The following course has therefore been adopted. Thirty-three Mahometan years contain 11,694 days, and are equal to thirty-two of ours, in which the number of days is 11,688. To bring these two terms into coincidence, the years of the former have been so distributed, that the thirty-third always expires with our thirty-second. The difference of six days, 11,694—11,688, in favour of this Mahometan cycle, amounts in ten centuries to about half a year ; to correct this, the term of dividing the years of the Hegira has been afterwards prolonged. That a sufficiently proximate date for all the common purposes of chronology has been thus obtained, may be seen in the present year; to A.D. 1856, these Tables assign the concluding part of A.H. 1272 and the commencement of 1273; the actual state of the case is, that 1 Moharrem 1273, the Mahometan New Year's Day, falls on Sept. 1.

In stating the ages of eminent persons at the time of their decease, the abbreviation æt. should always denote the current, not the completed, year of the individual's life. But hitherto it has been so indiscriminately used, that absolute precision has been found, in some cases, unattainable; where it could be obtained, the rule has been observed in these pages. On this point, the discordances of Biographical Dictionaries, Chronologies, Registers, Magazines, Journals, and Newspapers, are such as would be incredible to those who have not examined them. The sculptor Nollekens, for instance, is said by one authority to have died in 1772, at the age of 35; while others, correctly, prolong his life to his 86th year, in 1823. To settle such differences, more labour has sometimes been expended than the subject perhaps merited; but our principle has been to test every item, however trivial, as scrupulously as possible. And if, notwithstanding our care and diligence, some inaccuracies have arisen, they must be ascribed to the impossibility of always obtaining precise information.

The titles by which eminent public men are historically or popularly known, have in some instances been anticipated a few years, to avoid expletive repetition. For this reason, Sir Thomas Wentworth is styled Earl of Strafford in 1630, although he was then only a Baron, and not created Earl till 1639: and the Duke of Ormond is so called in 1646, although he was only an Earl, and did not become Duke till some time afterwards.

Slight variations in the names of persons or places will occasionally occur, where the authorities copied differ in their orthography. But whether the names are written Shakspeare, Shakespeare, Shakspeare, Shakespear, or any other way; Althorp or Althorpe; Folkstone or Folkestone; Maestrecht or Maestricht; Würtemberg or Wirtemberg; there can be no mistake in identity. This excuse for inconstancy in the spelling of some proper names, has been offered by the ablest of Chronologists. See Clinton, Preface to F. H. vol. iii.

Although, in compliance with the wish of the Publisher, we have adopted the title of "Blair's Chronological Tables," the student will readily perceive that all that remains of Blair is the general outline. The work has been entirely reconstructed, and every line tested by an examination with later and better authorities.

It would be unjust to the Publisher to conclude this Preface without acknowledging that the plan and arrangement of the work are exclusively his own. The repeating column of dates is a useful novelty of his invention, which obviates the inconvenience of having to follow long lines across opposite pages, often shifted by the binder to the great perplexity of the student.

Another ingenious novelty is the allocation of events to intermediate pages, so as to detach the historical matter from the Chronological Tables, which, while it preserves all the advantages of the old system, affords to the historical student the additional one of consecutive reading.

The present volume would have been incomplete without an Index, but it is already too bulky to admit of any addition. It is therefore the Publisher's intention to give this in a companion volume of equal dimensions, to be entitled A COMPLETE INDEX OF DATES, in which all that is contained in the Tables, with much that has necessarily been omitted, will be included in an alphabetical form.

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLES.

THE Chronology of the first ages of the world is full of uncertainty. Dr. Hales (Analysis of Chronology, vol. i. p. 3,) has enumerated 120 different "Epochs of the Creation,"—the earliest 6984, and the latest 3616 years B.C. The like confusion prevails as to the date of the Noachian Deluge, which is assigned to fifteen different periods between the years 3246 and 2104 B.C. From the best authorities we learn that Assyria and Egypt were the first seats of civilization; but respecting their early history we have no satisfactory information. That of Egypt is carried back, by some writers, to periods incredibly remote. Several of the dynasties registered by Manetho probably existed together, ruling in different divisions of the country. Neither Cecrops, nor Danaus, nor the rest of the Egyptian emigrants, carried with them into Greece any indications of their having lived among a people who had been progressing for 2000 years. From these two sources organized society spread into Phœnicia, Palestine, and Greece, and thence gradually onward. The following tables exhibit this progress in the most systematic order that can be ascertained. In the first three columns are shewn the various epochs given to them by our leading Chronologists, Usher, Hales, and Clinton. Their discrepancies are often considerable; but the general course of events is discernible through them.

culating. Some of them may be questionable: but we have no materials for a more correct system. In the Assyrian column are introduced the names and dates of monarchs, derived by Mr. Layard from inscriptions discovered by him. A still more regular chronology commences here. The Greeks measured the lapse of time by Olympiads of four years each, beginning with the games in which Coræbus was the conqueror, 776 B.C.; and to each of these terms is attached the name of its successful hero. The series of Latin kings, from Ascanius to Numitor, has been omitted in these Tables, as altogether fabulous, and connected with no great events. The first kings of Rome are almost as doubtful; but historians have marked the growth of that city and its empire from the date of its supposed foundation by Romulus (A.U.C. Anno Urbis Condite). For this event different years have been assigned, among which 753 B.C. is the most generally received, on the authority of Varro. In this computation, the names and acts of its earliest kings are conspicuous land-marks, and have therefore been preserved. With these guides, and assisted by Mr. Clinton and the Oxford Chron. Tables, we may proceed with sufficient accuracy.

Repetition Dates.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
327	Marriage of Alexander to Roxana; he invades India and defeats Porus; his soldiers refuse to proceed further. Ships are built to descend the Hydaspes and Indus, and facilitate the return of the army; comedies are represented in his camp to put the troops in good humour. The Romans besiege Palæopolis and Neapolis, which brings on the second Samnite war.
326	Descent of Alexander to the mouth of the Indus, and march thence overland to Carmania. Voyage of Nearchus. Oration of Demades in defence of his twelve years' administration at Athens. Apollodorus of Geia, com. poet, fl. Palæopolis and Neapolis betrayed into the hands of the proconsul, Publilius.
325	Alexander, after passing through Gedrosia, reaches Susiana, where Nearchus joins him. Winter-war with the Cossæi. Death of Hephæstion. Flight of Harpalus from Babylon, with large treasures, which he conveys to Athens. Demetrius Phalareus begins to interfere in Athenian politics. Q. Fabius, master of the horse, gains a victory over the Samnites, in the absence of the dictator, Papirius Cursor, and contrary to his orders, for which he is threatened with capital punishment.
324	Return of Alexander to Babylon. He issues a proclamation, allowing all exiles from Greek cities to return to their homes; he builds cities, plants colonies, and promotes intermarriages between Greeks and Persians. Embassies from Rome and many Italian States, seek to conciliate him. Dinarchus accuses many eminent Athenians of receiving bribes from Harpalus, and they are ridiculed by Timocles, in his comedies. Among others, Demosthenes is fined fifty talents; not being able to pay, he retires, first to Træzen, then to Ægina.
323	Death of Alexander, 21 April, (May or June, Clin.) æt. 33; his principal generals endeavour to obtain, each for himself, a portion of his empire. Ptolemy first secures Egypt, and establishes his dynasty firmly there. Philip Aridæus, half-brother of Alexander, succeeds him on the throne of Macedon, with Perdiccas as regent. Demosthenes returns to Athens, and rouses the Greek States to recover their freedom; under Leosthenes they overpower Antipater, who takes refuge in Lamia, whence this is called the Lamian War. Death of Diogenes, at Corinth, æt. 90, and of Lycurgus, the orator. Epicurus, æt. 18, comes to Athens. The Samnites sue for peace, but reject the terms on which it is offered by the Romans.
322	The body of Alexander is entombed in Alexandria. Craterus, with troops from Asia, relieves Antipater. The Athenians, totally defeated at Cranon, admit a Macedonian garrison into Munychia, and surrender their orators. Demosthenes poisons himself in the island of Calauria, near Træzen. Hyperides and others are cruelly put to death. Antipater transplants 3,000 of the citizens of Athens into Thrace, and subdues Ætolia. Aristotle retires to Chalcis and dies there, æt. 63; he is succeeded by Theophrastus. The victories of Fabius, now consul, bring the Samnites into great difficulties; their leader, Papus Brutulus, whom the Romans require to be given up to them, kills himself.
321	Perdiccas is defeated and slain in Egypt, where he had attacked Ptolemy. Antipater takes his place as regent in Macedon. Craterus, making war on Eumenes and Antigonus, loses his life in Asia Minor. Seleucus is appointed governor of Babylon. Menander's first comedy. The Roman consuls and army, surrounded by the Samnites under C. Pontius at Caudium, are saved by a treaty, which the senate afterwards breaks.
320	Ptolemy conquers Cyrene, Lybia, and Phœnicia. Antigonus defeats Eumenes, and extends his dominions in Asia Minor. The Romans make great efforts to retrieve their late disgrace; C. Pontius generously gives up the hostages, whom the Roman breach of faith had left in his power.
319	Eumenes is besieged by Antigonus in Nora. The Indian Provinces, which Alexander conquered, are incited by Sandrocottus to expel the Macedonians, and regain their freedom.

314	11 ———	Death of Æschines at Samos, æt. 75. Antigonos, at Tyre, declares war against Cassander. The Romans defeat the Samnites.
313	12 ———	Tyre surrenders to Antigonos,—but Ptolemy begins war against him, and conquers Cyprus. The Romans take Fregellæ and other towns from the Samnites.
312	13 ———	The army of Antigonos, under his son Demetrius Poliorcetes, defeated at Gaza by Ptolemy and Seleucus; the latter regains possession of Babylon, and founds his kingdom. The Era of the Seleucidæ begins. Ptolemy conquers Judæa, and transplants many thousand Jews to Alexandria and Cyrene, where their industry is encouraged and their religion protected. Appian Claudius, the blind, white censor, introduces many changes at Rome,—constructs the Via Appia, the first aqueduct, and a canal through the Pontine marshes.
311	14 ———	A temporary peace concluded among the competitors for power in Asia. Greece is declared to be free, and Ptolemy resigns Phœnicia to Antigonos. Cassander puts to death Roxana, the widow of Alexander the Great, and her young son, Alexander Aëgas. The consul Bubulcus penetrates into Samnium, where he is surrounded and cuts his way through with great courage and loss of men; he builds a temple to Salus , for a painting in which C. Fabius receives the surname of "Pictor."

Cassander is unsuccessful against Demetrius, but Lysimachus, who had for some years ruled in Thrace, leads an army into Asia; Seleucus advances from the east; and Ptolemy, coming up from the south, subdues Syria, Phœnicia and Palestine. Demochares is banished from Athens. The priesthood at Rome opened to the Plebea, by the Ogulnian law.
301	24 —	Q. Fabius Maximus, Dict. II. M. Valerius Corvus, Dict. II. M. Æmilius Paulus, Eq. Mag.	Demetrius is called into Asia to assist his father. Battle of Ipsus in Phrygia. Antigonus totally defeated and slain, set. 81: the allied kings divide his dominions. Syria, with its dependencies, is allotted to Seleucus and becomes his seat of empire. Demetrius escapes. Hieronymus of Cardia, one of the first Greek historians who mention Rome.
300	1 Simon the Just.	M. Valerius Corvus V. Q. Apuleius Pansa.	Commerce and learning are encouraged by Ptolemy in Egypt. Euclid, math. fl. at Alexandria. Seleucus Nicator builds Antioch for his residence, improves other cities, and consolidates his Syrian kingdom. Carthage rises in wealth and power. The Romans commence their third war with the Samnites.
299	2 —	M. Fulvius Pætinus. T. Manlius Torquatus.	Seleucus marries the daughter of Demetrius Pol., establishes him in Cilicia, and supplies him with the means for expelling from Athens Lachares, who had made himself master of the city, under the protection of Cassander. Zeno the stoic, Arcesilaus of the New Academy, and Demetrius, com. poet, fl. Lachares is assassinated in Boeotia. The Romans wage a war of extermination in Samnium: the Samnites maintain themselves bravely in their mountain-holds.
298	3 —	L. Cornelius Scipio. Cn. Fulvius Centumalus.	Ptolemy adorns Alexandria with the Museum, Serapeum, and other edifices, begins the library, and employs the architect Sostratus of Cnidus to build the Pharos; the high priest of the Jews is encouraged by him to complete the canon of the Old Testament. The Etrurians take the Senones into their pay, and league with the Samnites against Rome. The Chinese build their great wall.
297	4 —	Q. Fabius Maximus IV. P. Decius Mus, III.	Gellius Egnatius, the Samnite general, leads his army into Etruria to join his allies, while the Romans are ravaging Samnium.
296	5 —	Ap. Claudius Cæcilius II. L. Volturnius Flamma II.	Death of Cassander; his sons dispute the succession. Demetrius Phal., the former ruler of Athens, takes the chair of philosophy at Alexandria. Great efforts of the Romans to raise a force equal to that of their adversaries. Archidamus IV., one of the Proelidæ, is defeated by Demetrius Pol. The time of his accession is not known.

296	6 Simon the Just.	Q. Fabius Maximus V. P. Decius Mus. IV.	The sons of Cassander invite the support of Lysimachus, Pyrrhus of Epirus and Demetrius Pol. The Romans gain a decisive victory at Sentinum; the consul Decius, like his father, devotes himself to death. Gellius Egnatius is slain.
294	7 —	L. Postumius Megellus II. M. Atilius Regulus.	By violence or treachery, the sons of Cassander are killed, and Demetrius Pol. makes himself king of Macedon. The Samnites still continue to struggle for independence. There is a difference of two years between Cato and Varro in their chronologies of Rome at this period. Seleucus Nicator gives Upper Asia to his son Antiochus.
293	8 —	L. Papirius Cursor. Sp. Carvilius Maximus.	Many Samnite towns so destroyed by the Romans, that their sites are unknown; part of the spoil is framed into a brazen colossus, in front of the capitol. The census at Rome, 272,308 citizens. The first sun-dial at Rome, is placed by the consul Papirius on the temple of Quirinus.
292	1 Eleazar.	Q. Fabius Gurgus. D. Junius Brutus Scæva.	After an exile of fifteen years, the orator Dinarchus returns to Athens. The Samnites defeat Fabius Gurgus; his father, the veteran Fabius, takes a reinforcement to him, and gains a decisive victory, which brings the war to an end; he has a triumph on his return to Rome, but on the close of the ceremony, C. Pontius, who had so generously spared his captives at Caudium, is barbarously put to death.
291	2 —	L. Postumius Megellus III. C. Junius Bubnacus.	Mithridates III., of Pontus extends his kingdom over Cappadocia and Paphlagonia. Lysimachus grows more powerful in Thrace and Pyrrhus in Epirus. Death of Menander, æt. 51.
290	3 —	P. Cornelius Reginus. M. Curius Dentatus.	The Ætolians having seized the mountain-passes near Delphi, the Pythian Games are held at Athens. The Sabines, who had prepared to assist the Samnites, are subdued, and the dominion of Rome over central Italy assumes a settled character.
289	4 —	M. Valerius Corvinus. Q. Cædicius Noctua.	Agathocles, æt. 72, is poisoned by Mænon, who is expelled by Hicetas, and the Syracusans regain their freedom. Poudippus, com. poet, fl.
288	5 —	Q. Martius Tremulus II. P. Cornelius Arvinus II.	Rhodes prospers in commerce and promotes the fine arts. The Colossus is completed by its native artists, Chares and Laches. The canal from Lake Velinus cut by M. Curius.
287	6 —	M. Claudius Marcellus. C. Nautilus Rutilus.	Pyrrhus drives Demetrius Pol. from Macedon, and in his turn is expelled by Lysimachus, who remains king. Strato succeeds Theophrastus in the Peripatetic school. Birth of Archimedes. Crates, phil. academ. fl.
286	7 —	M. Valerius Potitius. C. Ælius Pætus.	Demetrius Pol. attempting to oppose Seleucus Nicator in Asia, is made a prisoner, and remains in captivity for the rest of his life. The vast efforts of Rome in the Samnite wars are followed by great distress; to relieve and appease the people, the Hortensian law is passed.
285	8 —	C. Claudius Cæcina. M. Æmilius Lepidus.	Ptolemy Soter raises his son, Philadelphus, to be co-regent with him in Egypt. The length of the solar year first accurately determined by Dionysius, in the Astronomical canon.

284	9 Eleazar.	C. Servilius Tucca. L. Cæcilius Metellus.	A league of the Ætolians, to withstand the oppressions of Lyximachus. The Tarentines become jealous of Rome, and secretly instigate the hostilities of other States. Battle of Arretium, in which the consul Metellus is defeated and slain by the Senones.
283	10 —	P. Cornelius Dolabella. Cn. Domitius Calvinus.	Death of Demetrius Pol. set. 54, after three years' captivity. Death of Ptolemy Soter, set. 54. Philadelphus, now sole monarch, completes the Pharos and other public works begun by his father; the favour shown by him to the Jews in Egypt induces many others to settle there voluntarily, and they prosper greatly; he directs the Greek Septuagint version of their Scriptures to be made; he encourages learning, but banishes Demetrius Phal. into Upper Egypt, where he soon dies. Philoterus, lieutenant of Lyximachus, erects an independent kingdom in Bithynia. Soter of Paphos, com. poet, fl. The consul Dolabella defeats and almost exterminates the Senones; he then gains a great victory, near the Vadimonian Lake, over the Etruscans and their Celtic allies.
282	11 —	C. Fabricius Luscinus. Q. Æmilius Papus.	The consul Fabricius saves Thurium from the Lucanians. The Tarentines attack a Roman fleet and insult the ambassadors, who demand satisfaction. Rome prepares for war, and the Tarentines engage Pyrrhus to assist them.
281	12 —	L. Æmilius Barbula. Q. Marcius Philippus.	Lyximachus, at war with Seleucus Nicator is defeated and slain, at Cyropedium, in Phrygia. Ptolemy Ceraunus, a son of Ptolemy Soter, makes himself king of Macedon. Thurium taken by the Lucanians. The Roman consul Æmilius invades the territory of Tarentum.
280	13 —	P. Valerius Lævinus. Tib. Coruncanius.	Seleucus Nicator is murdered by Ptol. Ceraunus; the two divisions of the kingdom of Syria are reunited by his son Antiochus. The Danubian Celts (Galatæ, mistaken by the Greeks for emigrants from Gaul) attack Macedon, and Ptol. Ceraunus is slain in battle against them; among several competitors, his general, Sostrates, acquires the largest share of authority. Gorgias, archon of Athens. A statue of Demosthenes is raised by the Athenians. Death of Praxiteles and birth of the Stoic, Chrysippus. The Achaean league revived. Pyrrhus in Italy, defeats the consul Valerius Lævinus at Heraclea, and offers to mediate between Rome and Tarentum. Census of Rome, 278,222 citizens.
279	14 —	P. Sulpicius Saverrio. P. Decius Mus.	The Celtic invaders push forward into Greece. Anaxicrates, archon of Athens. The pacific overtures of Pyrrhus having been rejected, he advances on Rome, but unable to make any impression, returns to Tarentum, followed by the Romans, over whom he gains an unprofitable victory at Asculum.

278	15 Eleazar.	C. Fabricius Luncinus II. Q. Æmilius Papus II.	Democles, archon of Athens. Slaughterous repulse of the Celts in their attack on Delphi. Nicomedes founds an independent kingdom in Bithynia; in his contest with Antiochus, he employs the descendants of the Cimmerici, who settled in Asia Minor, 635 B.C.; these are found to be Galatæ, and supposed to be "Gauls," who after the attack on Delphi had passed into Asia; their country has from this time the name of Galatia, and they become formidable. The four schools of Athens are headed by Strato, Zeno, Epicurus and Arcesilaus. Alliance of Rome and Carthage; Pyrrhus, unable to gain any advantages over the consul Fabricius, passes with his army into Sicily, leaving the small States in Southern Italy at the mercy of the Romans.
277	16 —	P. Cornelius Rufinus II. Cn. Junius Brutus Bubulcus II.	The Galatæ, on their retreat towards the Danube, are defeated in Macedonia by Sosthenes; but he is slain in battle against them. Antigonus Gonatas, son of Demetrius Pol., succeeds him as king. Pyrrhus expels the Carthaginians from most of their possessions in Sicily. The Romans take Crotona and Locri, and subdue the Lucanians and Bruttians. Death of Metrodorus, phil. epic. æt. 53.
276	17 —	Q. Fabius Gurgæ II. C. Genucius Clepsina.	Other cities in Greece join the Achaean league. Berosus dedicates to Antiochus his History of Chaldaea. Pyrrhus lays siege to the strong Carthaginian fortress of Lilybæum.
275	18 —	M. Cnrius Dentatus II. L. Cornelius Lentulus.	The Carthaginians send fresh troops to Sicily. Pyrrhus raises the siege of Lilybæum and returns to Italy; he is totally defeated at Beneventum by the consul Curius, who exhibits, in his triumph, the first elephants ever seen at Rome. Birth of Eratosthenes at Cyrene. Hiero II. prætor of Syracuse. The poet Blon fl.
274	19 —	M. Cnrius Dentatus III. Serv. Cornelius Merenda.	Pyrrhus, leaving a garrison in Tarentum, embarks with the rest of his forces for Epirus. Birth of the poet Euphorion, at Chalcis, afterwards Illyrian to Antiochus the Great.
273	20 —	C. Fabius Dorso. C. Claudius Cæcina II.	Ptolemy Philadelphus sends an embassy to congratulate the Romans on their victories, and contract an alliance with them. Pyrrhus seizes Macedonia. The Romans plant a colony at Posidonia, afterwards Paestum, and another at Cosa, in Etruria.
272	21 —	L. Papirius Cursor II. Sp. Carvilius Maximus II.	Cleonymus falls in his attempt to supplant his nephew, Areus, at Sparta; he is assisted by Pyrrhus, who is slain while storming Argos. Pyrrhus is succeeded by his son, Alexander II., but Epirus ceases to be important. Antigonus Gonatas regains Macedonia. The Romans send a friendly embassy to Egypt; Tarentum is betrayed into their hands by the Epirote, Milo; they complete the conquest of Samnium, and make further progress in Southern Italy. Theocritus greatly esteemed by Ptolemy Philadelphus, but retires to Syracuse, where he com-

Census of Rome, 282,234 citizens. The number of questors increased to eight.
263	30 —	M. Valerius Maximus Messalla. M. Otacilius Crassus.	Diognetus, archon of Athens. The record of the Parian Marble ends. Acrotatus falls in battle against Aristodemus of Megalopolis; he is succeeded by his posthumous son, Areus II., with Leonidas for regent. Magas, king of Cyrene, though supported by Antiochus Soter, is unsuccessful in a war against Egypt. Nicomedes founds the city of Nicomedia. Ap. Claudius conducts the first Roman army into Sicily, to succour the Mamertines in Messina; this is the commencement of the Punic wars. Gladiators introduced at Rome by M. and D. Brutus.
			Philæterus at his death appoints his nephew, Eumenes, king of Pergamus; the competition for books between him and Ptolemy Philad. causes the latter to prohibit the export of Papyrus from Egypt, which leads to the invention and use of parchment at Pergamus. Eumenes defeats Antiochus near Sardis, and adds Æolis to his dominions. The Romans defeat the Carthaginians and Hiero, and make themselves masters of Messina, whence the consul Valerius takes the surname of Messallius, which is perpetuated in his family; he introduces at Rome a more perfect

198	22 Simon II.	T. Quinctius Flaminius. Sex. Ælius Pætus Catus.	Flaminius takes the command; drives Philip from the defile of Antigonia, and enters Thessaly. He takes Elatea and Thebes and detaches the Achæans from Philip. Antiochus defeats Scopas and the Ætolian allies of Egypt at Panium, and conquers Coelosyria and Palestine. The historians Zeno and Antisthenes fl., and relate these events.
197	23 —	C. Cornelius Cethegus. Qu. Minucius Rufus.	Victory of Flaminius and his Ætolian allies at Cynoscephalæ. Philip submits to the peace dictated by Rome. The revolted Celts of Northern Italy are defeated by the two consuls, but not subdued. Two additional Prætors appointed for Spain, where the dominion of Rome is still resisted in many parts. Ptolemy Epiphanes is crowned at Memphis. Death of Attalus; his son, Eumenes II., maintains his alliance with Rome. The poet Alcæus of Messenia celebrates the events in Greece.
196	24 —	L. Furius Purpureo. M. Claudius Marcellus.	Flaminius proclaims, at the Isthmian Games, the decree of the Roman Senate, for the freedom of Greece. Hannibal withdraws from Carthage to Syria. Antiochus seizes the Thracian Chersonesus. Conference at Lysimachia. Hamilcar, a Carthaginian from Spain, disciplines the Celtic forces in Italy. Asclepiades of Myrlea, in Bithynia, fl.
195	1 Onias III.	M. Porcius Cato. L. Valerius Flaccus.	Cato proceeds, as consul, to regulate the affairs of Spain. The command of Flaminius in Greece is prolonged; he compels Nabis to submit, and sets Argos free to rejoin the Achæan League. Hannibal makes vain efforts to reform the Syrian army, and to instruct Antiochus in a prudent plan for war against Rome. Ptolemy of Megalopolis is the Egyptian governor of Cyprus. Birth of Terence.
194	2 —	P. Corn. Scipio Africanus II. Tib. Sempronius Longus.	Flaminius returns to Rome. Bloody conflicts with the Celts; no decisive results. Scipio unpopular for giving the senators separate benches in the Circus. Death of Eratosthenes; Apollonius Rhodius is appointed Librarian at Alexandria.
193	3 —	L. Cornelius Merula. Qu. Minucius Thermus.	Ptolemy Epiphanes marries Cleopatra, daughter of Antiochus; Coelosyria and Palestine are restored to Egypt. The Romans and Antiochus prepare for war; the former make an alliance with Philip of Macedon, and the latter with the Ætolians.
192	4 —	L. Quinctius Flaminius. Cu. Domitius Ahenobarbus.	Antiochus enters Greece and wastes his time in idle revelling at Chaïra. The Romans send the prætor Atilius, with Tib. Qu. Flaminius and other ambassadors into Greece. Philipopemen defeats Nabis, who is killed by the Ætolians; Lacedæmon joins the Achæan league.
191	5 —	Man. Acilius Glabrio. P. Corn. Scipio Nasica.	The consul Acilius and legate Flaminius defeat Antiochus at Thermopylæ. The Syrian navy is destroyed by the combined fleets of the Romans and Eumenes. Antiochus returns into Phrygia. Scipio Nasica subdues the Boians.
190	6 —	L. Corn. Scipio. C. Lælius.	L. Scipio takes the command in Greece, with his brother Africanus as his lieutenant. He grants a truce of six months to the Ætolians and passes into Asia, where he gains a decisive victory over Antiochus at Magnesia, near Mount Sipylus, and receives the surname of Asiaticus. The historian Cincius writes "De Re Militari." An eclipse of the sun, July 11th.

189	7 Onias III.	Cn. Manlius Vulso. M. Fulvius Nobilior.	The Consul Fulvius compels the Ætolians to make peace; they give up Ambracia and the island of Cephalonia, and pay a tribute. Manlius conquers the Galatæ of Asia Minor, subsidiaries of Antiochus. The Romans give them the name of Gallo-græci, and invent the fable of their migration from Gaul. Philopœmon, Achaean prætor, forces the Lacedæmonians to adopt the laws of the League and abrogate those of Lycurgus. Ennius, the poet, is with Fulvius in Greece. Census of Rome, 258,318 citizens.
188	8 —	C. Livins Salinator. M. Valerius Messala.	Peace between the Romans and Antiochus, by which he resigns to them all Asia Minor from the Taurus to the Ægean sea. The Greek cities are declared free, and Eumenes receives a large addition of territory. Caria and Lycia are given to the Rhodians. Altercations between the Lacedæmonians and Achæans; they send ambassadors to Rome; among those of the former, is Lycortas, the father of Polybius. The Scipios accused of peculation in Asia; Africanus retires in disgust to Liturnum.
187	9 —	M. Æmilius Lepidus. C. Flaminius.	Hannibal, to avoid being given up to the Romans, takes refuge with Prusias in Bithynia. Death of Antiochus. Achaean embassy to Ptolemy, who renews his alliance with the league.
186	10 —	Sp. Postumius Albinus. Qu. Marcus Philippus.	The Bacchanalian orgies interdicted by the senate, in Rome and all Italy. Athletic combats introduced by Fulvius. The consul Marcus worsted by the Ligurians.
185	11 —	Ap. Claudius Pulcher. M. Sempronius Tuditanus.	Mission of Cæcilius to check the growing power of Philip of Macedon. Hegesinus, the successor of Evander in the chair of the Academy.
184	12 —	P. Claudius Pulcher. L. Porcius Licinus.	The Ligurian is the only war in which the Romans are now engaged; it is maintained against them very obstinately. Cato, as censor, endeavours to repress the growing luxury of Rome. Philip sends his son Demetrius, to plead his cause before the senate. Death of P. Scipio. Prusias makes war on Eumenes, and gives the command to Hannibal.
183	13 —	Qu. Fabius Labeo. M. Clandius Marcellus.	Philopœmon, made prisoner by the Messenians, is put to death by them, æt. 69. Hannibal, whom the Romans require Prusias to give up to them, poisons himself, æt. 64. Scipio dies in retirement, æt. 52. Pharnaces of Pontus takes Sinope. Aristonymus succeeds Apollonius Rhodius, as librarian at Alexandria.
182	14 —	L. Æmilius Paulus. Cn. Baebius Tamphilus.	The Via Æmilia constructed from Ariminum to Piacentia. Lycortas, Achaean prætor, subdues Messenia, and brings back Lacedæmon into the league. His son, Polybius, bears the ashes of Philopœmon to Megalopolis. Nicander, poet, fl.
181	15 —	P. Cornelius Cethegus. M. Baebius Tamphilus.	Philip of Macedon puts his son Demetrius to death. Polybius is sent by the Achæans as ambassador to Egypt. Rome arbitrates between contending states. Ambassadors from Pontus, Cappadocia, Lacedæmon, and the Achæans are heard before the senate.
180	16 —	A. Postumius Albinus. C. Calpurnius Piso.	Many thousand Ligurians, with their families, are transferred to Samnium, and lands allotted to them for cultivation.

179	17 Onias III.	L. Manlius Acidinus Fulvianus. Qu. Fulvius Fiacus.	Death of Philip V., æt. 60. His son Perseus negotiates secretly with other states against Rome. The Celtiberians and Lusitanians lay down their arms. Census of Rome, 273,294 citizens. The comedies of Cæcilius acted at Rome.
178	18 —	M. Junius Brutus. A. Manlius Volso.	The Consuls sent to conduct the war in Istria; they winter at Aquileia.
177	19 —	C. Claudius Pulcher. Tib. Sempronius Gracchus.	Istria subdued. A revolt in Sardinia suppressed. A colony settled at Lucca. The Achæans contract an alliance with Rome. Thessaly relapses under the Macedonian influence.
176	20 —	Cn. Corn. Scipio Hispanus. Qu. Petilius Spurinus.	The consul Scipio dies, and C. Valerius Lævinus takes his place for the rest of the year. His colleague Petilius is slain in battle against the Ligurians. The Orchian and other sumptuary laws fail to repress the luxury of the Romans.
175	1 Jason.	P. Mucius Scaevola. M. Æmilius Lepidus.	Seleucus Philopator assassinated. Disgraceful struggles for the high-priesthood of Jerusalem. Antiochus sells it to Jason, the brother of Onias, who is deposed.
174	2 —	Sp. Postumius Albinus Paullus. Qu. Mucius Scaevola.	Masinissa, after many encroachments, seizes the Carthaginian province of Tyssa, with fifty cities; Roman ambassadors sent to settle the dispute. Others deputed to ascertain the intentions of Perseus. Mithridates VI. of the Arsacidæ begins his reign and prepares the elevation of Parthia to great power. Census of Rome, 269,015 citizens.
173	3 —	M. Popilius Lænas. L. Postumina Albinus.	The Roman ambassadors return, Perseus having refused to receive them. Death of Cleopatra, who, in the name of her young son, had been regent of Egypt. Eulæus and Læneus, who succeed to the administration of affairs, make war on Antiochus, and are defeated near the lake Sirbonis, between Pelusium and Mount Caslus.
172	1 Menelaus.	C. Popilius Lænas. P. Ælius Ligus.	The Ligurians are subdued and Northern Italy filled with Roman colonies. Eumenes honourably received at Rome; on his way back he is attacked by assassins near Delphi. Preparations made for war against Perseus. The Bæotian confederacy dissolved. Menelaus, another brother, supplants Jason in the High-priesthood of Jerusalem.
171	2 —	P. Licinius Crassus. C. Cassius Longinus.	Commencement of the third Macedonian war. Perseus gains some advantages over Licinius and makes offers of peace, which are rejected. Antiochus invades Egypt and takes Memphis.
170	3 —	A. Hostilius Mancinus. A. Atilius Serranus.	Hostilius, who takes the command in Macedon, makes no progress; the Roman fleet ravages the sea-coast. Perseus negotiates with Antiochus, Prusias, and many Greek states to form a coalition against Rome; even Eumenes begins to treat with him. Ptolemy Physcon is associated with his brother, as joint king of Egypt.
169	4 —	Qu. Marcius Philippus II. Cn. Servilius Cæpio.	The manœuvres of Marcius Philippus drive Perseus from his strong position in Tempe. Antiochus lays siege to Alexandria; the Egyptians apply to Rome for aid. Polybius commands the Achæan cavalry, and goes on an embassy to the Consul Marcius.

Death of the poet Ennius, æt. 70; he is laid in the tomb of the Scipios in the Appian Way. Census of Rome, 312,065 citizens. Battle of Pydna, June 22d. Perseus totally defeated by Æmilius Paullus; himself and his family become prisoners, and his kingdom a Roman province. Gentius, the Illyrian prince, who had taken up arms to support him, is overcome in thirty days. Antiochus, awed by the Roman ambassador, Popilius, and the fate of Persens, evacuates Egypt and restores Pelusium and Cyprus. In his retreat he plunders Jerusalem and despoils the Temple. Cæcilius, com. poet, ob. An eclipse of the moon, June 21st, predicted by C. S. Gallus.
167	6 —	Qu. Ælius Pætus. M. Junius Pennus.	Paulus Æmilius and ten commissioners organize the provincial government of Macedon and Illyria. On his return to Rome, his triumph, the most splendid yet seen, lasts three days. A thousand of the principal Achæans are taken to Rome; among them is Polybius, who finds there valuable patrons and friends. The states, which are suspected of having favoured Perseus, humbly implore the lenity of the senate.
166	7 —	C. Sulpicius Gallus. M. Claudius Marcellus.	The Jews under Mattathias and his son Judas Maccabæus, resist by force the oppressions of Antiochus, Terence produces his first play, "Andria."
165	8 —	T. Manlius Torquatus. Cn. Octavius.	Lysias, the Syrian general, defeated by the Jews. The "Hecyra" of Terence.
164	9 —	Aul. Manlius Torquatus. Qu. Cassius Longinus.	Antiochus Epiphanes, at his death, leaves his son Eupator, only nine years old, under the guardianship of Lysias. A large part of his kingdom is conquered by the Parthians. The two brothers, who reign in Egypt, refer their disputes to the Romans, who divide the kingdom between them, giving Cyrene, Libya, and Cyprus to Ptolemy, and Egypt Proper to Philometor. Census of Rome, 327,022 citizens.
163	10 —	Tib. Semp. Gracchus II. M. Juventius Thalna.	Demetrius, son of Seleucus Philopator, whom his father had sent to Rome, as an hostage, asserts his claim to the throne of Syria, but is detained in captivity. The "Heautontimoroumenos" (Self-tormentor) of Terence is brought out.
162	1 Judas Maccabæus.	P. Corn. Scipio Nasica. C. Marcius Figulus.	The Consuls, improperly elected, resign, and are replaced by P. Corn. Lentulus and Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus. Aided by Polybius, Demetrius effects his escape; he makes himself king of Syria, and murders Eupator with his guardian, Lysias. Hipparchus observes the autumnal equinox, Sept. 27th.
161	2 —	M. Valerius Messala. C. Fannius Strabo.	A decree of the Senate prohibits the teaching of philosophy and rhetoric at Rome. The "Eunnebus" and "Phormio" of Terence; the former acted twice on the first day.
160	L. Anicius Gallus. M. Corn. Cethegus.	The Jews are protected by the Romans. Judas Maccabæus falls in a battle against Bacchides. Death of Æmilius Paullus, æt. 69, at whose funeral games Terence's play of the "Adephi" is first exhibited. SATVRUS, phil. peripat. fl.

Eumenes, reconciled to Rome, at his death leaves the kingdom of Pergamus, powerful and flourishing, to his brother Attalus. Death of Terence, æt. 35. The autumnal equinox observed by Hipparchus, Sept. 27th, this year and the next.
158	M. Æmilius Lepidus. C. Popillius Lænas.	The Roman citizens are almost entirely relieved from direct taxation, by the permanent revenue derived from Macedon and their other conquests. Demetrius Soter expels Ariarathes V. from Cappadocia, and raises the pretender, Holophernes, to the throne.
157	Sex. Julius Cæsar. L. Aurellus Orestes.	Ariarathes, at Rome, obtains the support of the senate, and regains his kingdom.
156	L. Corn. Lentulus Lupus. C. Marcus Fulgulus II.	Roman war in Dalmatia. Attalus supported by the Romans in his war with Prusias. Aristarchus, the critic, educates the son of Ptolemy Philometor.
155	P. Corn. Scipio Nasica II. M. Claudius Marcellus II.	The consul Scipio terminates successfully the Dalmatian war. The philosophers, Carneades, Diogenes, and Critolaus, are sent as ambassadors from Athens to Rome, and obtain remission of a fine, that had been imposed. They also restore the study of philosophy. Another embassy, at the same time, from the Achæans, fails to obtain permission for the surviving exiles to return to their country.
154	Qu. Opimius. L. Postumius Albinus.	The Romans for the first time carry their arms beyond the Alps, to assist the Massilians in their struggle with some Gallic tribes. War between the two Ptolemys: Physcon is taken prisoner by his brother, released, and his dominions restored to him. Callistratus and the poet, Moschus, Æ. Pacuvius, the nephew of Ennius, distinguished for his paintings and tragedies.
153	Qu. Fulvius Nobilior. T. Annlus Luscius.	The time of inaugurating the consuls is altered to the 1st of January, on account of the war in Spain. Fulvius conducts this unsuccessfully. Cato, æt. 81, pleads, himself, in a suit which he had instituted. Rebellion of Alexander Bala in Syria.
152	1 Jonathan II.	M. Claudius Marcellus III. L. Valerius Flaccus.	Marcellus repairs the misfortunes of Fulvius, and winters at Cordova. Alexander Bala establishes himself at Ptolemais, is recognised by Rome, and supported by Jonathan, the brother of Judas Maccabæus. The Carthaginians, resisting the encroachments of Masinissa, are totally defeated by him.
151	2 —	L. Licinius Lucullus. A. Postumius Albinus.	Lucullus, by his cruelty, exasperates the Celtiberians. The prætor Galba is defeated by the Lusitanians. The Spanish war unpopular at Rome. P. Corn. Scipio offers to undertake it. Another application in favour of the Achæan exiles, is supported by him, and the survivors (about 300) allowed to return. Polybius, among them, revisits his country. The consul Albinus writes history in Greek.
150	3 —	T. Quinctius Flaminius. M. Acilius Balbus.	Galba is publicly impeached by Cato, for his slaughter of the Lusitanians, but acquitted. Viriathus, who escaped the massacre, becomes a deadly foe of the Romans. Demetrius Soter defeated and slain by Alexander Bala, who becomes king of Syria;

149	4 Jonathan II.	L. Marcius Censorinus. M. Manilius.	Ptol. Philometor gives him his daughter in marriage. The conflicting claims of the temples of Jerusalem and Mount Gerizim are referred to Philometor; his decision in favour of the former, makes the Jewish religion more familiarly known in Egypt. Cato, set. 84, concludes his "Origines." The Romans begin the third Punic war, by sending a large fleet and army to Africa. At first the Carthaginians submit to the hard conditions imposed on them, but at last are driven to a desperate resistance; the siege of their city is commenced. Death of Masinissa, set. 90. Nicomedes II. acquires the kingdom of Bithynia by murdering his father. The Achæans endeavour to renew their league, and appoint Dicus, one of the returned exiles, their prætor. The consul Manilius calls Polybius back to Rome. Andronicus, called Pseudo-philippus, pretends to be a son of Perseus, and lays claim to Macedonia. Death of Cato, set. 85. The first Roman law against bribery at elections; its author, L. Calpurnius Piso, also writes annals, &c.
148	5 —	Sp. Postumius Albinus Magnus. L. Calpurnius Piso Cæsoninus.	Calpurnius Piso continues the siege of Carthage, but without vigour. Andronicus, after having defeated and slain the prætor, P. Juventius, is overcome, made prisoner, and put to death by Metellus. The quarrels of the Lacedæmonians and Achæans afford a pretext for Roman interference. Heraclides Lembus, hist. fl. Birth of the poet Lucilius.
147	6 —	P. Corn. Scipio Africanus Æmilianus. C. Livius Drusus.	Scipio takes the command in Africa, and closely invests Carthage by sea and land. The Achæans retire to Corinth before Metellus, who wishes to treat Greece mildly. The autumnal equinox observed by Hipparchus, Sept. 26. Census of Rome, 322,000 citizens.
146	7 —	Cn. Corn. Lentinus, L. Mummius.	Fall and destruction of Carthage. Mummius has the command in Greece; he defeats Dicus and the Achæans at Leucopetra, takes Corinth and destroys it. The treasures of Grecian art are conveyed to Rome. Alexander Bala is slain in battle near Antioch, against Demetrius Nicator, who becomes king of Syria. Ptolemy Philometor, who had brought an army to support Demetrius, falls in the same battle, and his brother Physcon becomes king of all Egypt. Polybius is with Scipio at the taking of Carthage, and afterwards with Mummius at Corinth. The historian Fannius is also in the Roman army at Carthage. Cassius Hemina writes his history. Hipparchus observes the vernal equinox, March 23rd, and the autumnal, Sept. 27th.
145	8 —	Qu. Fabius Max. Æmilianus. L. Hostilius Mancinus.	Viriathus, originally a shepherd, becomes general of the Lusitanians, and conquers all the west of Spain. The prætor, Vetilius, is taken prisoner by him, and Plautius defeated. The Consul, Fabius, proceeds against him with a large army. Apollodorus, chronolog. fl.
144	9 —	Ser. Sulpicius Galba. L. Aurelius Cotta.	The senate, not able to decide which of the consuls should go into Spain, send Scipio Æmilianus to conduct the war. Antipater of Tarsus, the Stoic, succeeds Diogenes, and writes against Carneades.

143	1 Simon III.	Ap. Claudius Pulcher. Q. Cecilius Metellus Macedonicus.	The Salassi, a wild Alpine tribe, in what is now the valley of Aosta, are with great difficulty overcome by Ap. Claudius. His colleague, Metellus, is occupied in Spain. Another Pseudo-Philip in Macedon, is crushed by the Quæstor, Tremellius. Scipio Africanus, ambassador to Egypt, is received with great honour by Ptol. Physcon. He is accompanied by Panætius, the Stoic. Diodotus Trypho claims Syria for Antiochus, son of Alexander Bala. Jonathan Maccabeus is betrayed by him and put to death. Autumnal equinox observed by Hipparchus, Sept. 26th.
142	2 —	L. Cæcilius Metellus Calvus. Qu. Fabius Max. Servilius.	Metellus acts against the Celtiberi, and Fabius against Viriathus, but both ineffectually. The former, at the close of the campaign, weakens his army by dismissing many to their homes, when he finds that he is to be succeeded by his personal enemy, Qu. Pompeius. The historian, Fannius, son-in-law of Lælius, serves in Spain. Census of Rome, 328,442 citizens.
141	3 —	Cn. Servilius Cæpio. Qu. Pompeius Rufus.	Fabius, pro-consul, makes peace with Viriathus, whose independence he recognizes. Pompeius, unsuccessful against the Numantines, enters into a treaty with them. Silanus, accused by the Macedonians of corrupt practices, is condemned by his father, Torquatus, and puts an end to his own life.
140	4 —	C. Lælius Sapiens. Qu. Servilius Cæpio.	The treaties, made in Spain, are disavowed by the senate. The Consul Cæpio employs assassins to murder Viriathus, and refuses to give them the promised reward. The wars in Spain are continued. Pacuvius and Attius produce tragedies. Demetrius Nicator, and Eucratides of Bactria, invade the Parthian dominions.
139	5 —	Cn. Calpurnius Piso. M. Popillius Lænas.	Pompeius, pro-consul, again treats with the Numantines; Popillius dissents, and prosecutes the war. The Chaldean astrologers are driven out of Rome and Italy. Diodotus Trypho murders the young Antiochus, and is himself defeated and slain by Antiochus Sidetes.
138	6 —	P. Corn. Scipio Nasica. D. Junius Brutus.	Brutus conciliates the Lusitanians, and removes a large colony of them to eastern Spain. Popillius tries another treaty with the Numantines, which is again repudiated by the senate; after this, he is routed and put to flight. The Parthians conquer a large part of Bactria, and take Demetrius Nicator prisoner.
137	7 —	M. Æmilius Lepidus Porcina. C. Hostilius Mancinus.	Brutus remains, as pro-consul, in Lusitania, and extends the dominion of Rome to the Atlantic. Mancinus is reduced to make an ignominious peace with the Numantines, which is annulled by the senate. During the captivity of Demetrius, Antiochus Sidetes rules Syria.
136	8 —	P. Furius Philus. Sex. Atilius Serranus.	Brutus conquers the Gallicians. Lepidus is defeated by the Numantines, who nobly set Mancinus free, when he is given up to them, in atonement for the broken treaty. Roman census, 323,000 citizens.
135	1 John Hyrcanus.	Ser Fulvius Flaccus. Qu. Calpurnius Piso.	Fulvius conquers the Vardæi, in Dalmatia. Piso, sent against the Numantines, remains inactive in the country of the Pallantines. On the murder of Simon, John Hyrcanus, his son, succeeds as high priest and

134	2 John Hyrcanus.	P. Corn. Scipio Afric. Æmilianus II. C. Fulvius Flaccus.	ruler of the Jews. Vernal equinox obs. by Hipparchus, 23d March. The consular law is suspended, in order that Scipio may be elected and undertake the Numantine war; he proceeds to Spain; in his army are Marius, æt. 23. Jugurtha, nephew of the Numidian king, Micipsa, and the historian Sempronius Asellio. Revolt of the slaves in Sicily, which Fulvius is sent to put down.
133	3 —	P. Mucius Scaevola. L. Calpurnius Piso Frugi.	Scipio reduces Numantia by famine, and terminates the war. Attaius III. dies and bequeaths his kingdom and all his wealth to the Roman people; dissensions of the nobles and commonalty, in which the tribune, Tiberius Sempronius Gracchus, while advocating the rights of the latter, is slain, not yet thirty years old; Antiochus Sidetes endeavours to conciliate the Romans, by sending valuable gifts to Scipio; he is repulsed in an attack on Judea, after which he accords to the Jews peace and immunities, which they enjoy many years.
132	4 —	P. Popillius Lænas. P. Rupilius.	The servile war in Sicily ended by the consul Rupilius.
131	5 —	P. Licinius Crassus Mucianus. L. Valerius Flaccus.	Aristonicus claims the kingdom of Pergamus; the consul Crassus is sent against him. Two plebeian censors for the first time; one of them, Metellius, urges a law, to compel every Roman citizen to marry; he is threatened with death by the tribune, Atilius Labro, whom he had omitted, when selecting the senate; the other tribunes save him. Census of Rome, 317,823 citizens.
130	6 —	C. Claudius Pulcher. M. Perpenna.	Crassus is defeated by Aristonicus, and falls in the battle. The vices and cruelties of Ptolemy Physcon cause a rebellion in Egypt; he is driven from Alexandria, and takes refuge in Cyprus.
129	7 —	C. Sempronius Tuditanus. M. Aquillius Nepos.	Aristonicus is overcome by Perpenna, and put to death. Mithridates of Pontus receives Phrygia, in return for the services rendered by him to the Romans in this war. Antiochus Sidetes invades Parthia. John Hyrcanus enters into a league with the Romans and conquers Samaria. Death of Scipio Africanus, æt. 56. Carneades of Cyrene, oh. æt. 86; Clitomachus succeeds him in the New Academy.
128	8 —	Cn. Octavius Nepos. T. Annius Rufus.	The Parthian expedition of Antiochus Sidetes fails, and he is killed. Demetrius Nicator is restored to his throne. Phraates fails in a battle against the eastern nomade tribes. Continued obs. of Hipparchus; the vernal equ. March 22nd, and the sun at Rhodes, August 4th.
127	9 —	L. Cassius Longinus. L. Cornelius Cinna.	The Bactrian kingdom, already reduced by the Parthians, now finally succumbs to the wild Tartar tribes. Obs. of Hipparchus at Rhodes on the sun and moon, May 2d and July 7th.
126	10 —	M. Æmilius Lepidus. L. Aurelius Orestes.	The consul Aurelius is sent to suppress an insurrection in Sardinia; Caius Gracchus goes with him as questor, his first official appointment.
125	11 —	M. Plantius Hypsæus. M. Fulvius Flaccus.	The consul Fulvius succours the Massilians, by defeating the Transalpine Ligurians and the Salyans. Aurelius remains as proconsul in Sardinia, and C.

		Gracchus with him. The waters of Tepula are brought from the Lucullan lands to Rome by the consuls. Fregellæ, having revolted, is taken and razed to the ground, by the prætor, Opimius. Census of Rome, 390,736 citizens. Demetrius Nicator falls in a struggle against Alexander Zebina, whom Ptolemy Physcon sets up to claim the crown of Syria;—that kingdom is for some time distracted by this pretender and by the opposition of Cleopatra, the widow of Demetrius, to the succession of his son, Antiochus Grypus. Artabanus, the eighth of the Arsacids, is killed in a battle against the Tartars; his successor puts an end to these bloody wars. Africa is laid waste by swarms of locusts.
124	C. Cassius Longinus. C. Sextius Calvinus.	The consul Sextius takes the command in Gaul. C. Gracchus still in Sardinia, makes himself popular with the soldiers; his measures for promoting their comfort are thwarted by the senate.
123	Qu. Cæcilius Metellus. T. Quinctius Flaminius.	The Balearic Islands conquered by Metellus. C. Gracchus returns to Rome; complains to the people of the obstacles by which he has been impeded, and is elected tribune of the people; he begins his reforms. Zebina, the Syrian pretender, is slain. Cælius Antipater, hist. æ.; the future orator, L. Crassus, æt. 17, studies under him.
122	Cn. Domitius Ahenobarbus. C. Fannius Strabo.	C. Sextius, proconsul, defeats the Allobroges and Salpes, and founds Aquæ Sextiæ (Aix), the first Roman colony in Gaul. C. Gracchus is elected tribune again; he is active in carrying into effect his new laws, and goes over to Carthage, with a body of citizens, to establish them as a colony on the lands allotted to them; he returns in seventy days.
121	Qu. Fabius Maximus. L. Opimius.	Defeat of the Allobroges and Arverni, on the Isaras, near Vindalium; Bituitus, king of the latter, is persuaded by his conquerors, Domitius and Fabius, to go to Rome and make terms with the senate; he is detained for the rest of his life, at Alba, on the lake Fucinus, where Syphax and Persens had died. During the absence of C. Gracchus, a formidable opposition to him is organized by Livius Drusus; in the civil strife which ensues, Gracchus and many hundreds of his friends lose their lives. Antiochus Grypus puts his mother, Cleopatra, to death.
120	P. Manlius. C. Papirius Carbo.	Mithridates VI., surnamed Eupator, succeeds his father in Pontus, when only eleven years old; he becomes afterwards so distinguished as "the Great."
119	L. Cæcilius Metellus. L. Aurelius Cotta.	C. Marius, tribune of the people. L. Crassus begins his career as an orator, by accusing Papirius Carbo, the consul of the preceding year, who poisons himself.
118	M. Porcius Cato. C. Marcius Rex.	The dominion of Rome extended beyond the Rhone, and the colony of Narbo Martius (Narbonne) founded. Death of Micipsa, who leaves Numidia to his two sons and his nephew Jugurtha; the latter kills Hiempsal and expels Adherbal, who takes refuge at Rome.
117	L. Cæcilius Metellus. Qu. Mucius Sævola.	Adherbal is restored in Numidia by Roman ambassadors. Death of Ptolemy Physcon and accession of his son, Ptolemy Soter II.; his reign is troubled by his mother Cleopatra, and his brother Alexander, who often share the kingdom with him.
116	C. Licinius Geta. Qu. Fabius Maximus.	In the disordered state of Egypt, Ptolemy Apion, an illegitimate son of Physcon, acquires the kingdom of Cyrene. The Jews, having no external enemies, divide among themselves into sects. Birth of Varro.
115	M. Æmilius Scaurus. M. Cæcilius Metellus.	The censors L. Metellus and Cn. Domitius strike out thirty-two names from the list of senators, and interdict many popular amusements. Census of Rome, 394,336 citizens.

114	M. Acilius Balbus. C. Porcius Cato.	The advancing Goths impel the Celtic tribes on the newly-acquired Roman provinces. The Scordisci, from the banks of the Danube, penetrate into Thrace, and totally defeat the consul Cato. Antiochus Cyzicenus, youngest son of Ant. Sidetes, claims Syria. Birth of Hortensius. Oration of Crassus, in defence of Licinia, the vestal.
113	C. Cæcilius Metellus Caprius. Cn. Papirius Carbo.	Encouraged by the success of the Scordisci, many Celtic tribes unite in a general league, or Cumrhi , which the Romans mistake for the name of a people, and call them Cimbri; a similar confederacy of Gothic tribes (Denten . Lat. Teutones) acts in concert with them; they advance into Illyrium, and totally defeat the consul, Papirius Carbo. Agatharcides of Cnidus dedicates his history to Ptolemy Soter. Ant. Grypus is driven by Cyzicenus out of Syria to Aspendus.
112	M. Livius Drusus. L. Calpurnius Piso.	Drusus repulses the Celts in Thrace. Jugurtha kills Adherbal; the Roman Senate decrees war against him.
111	P. Corn. Scipio Nasica. L. Calpurnius Bestia.	The consul Calpurnius proceeds with an army into Numidia; he is bribed by Jugurtha to make peace and withdraw his forces. Crassus in Greece, as questor, hears the philosophers there, Philo, the successor of Clitomachus, in the New Academy, and Diodorus, who had followed Critolaus, as leader of the Peripatetics. Syria divided between Grypus and Cyzicenus.
110	M. Minucius Rufus. Sp. Postumius Albinus.	Jugurtha at Rome; after the murder of Massiva, escapes back to Africa; the war against him feebly conducted. Valerius Antias and Quadrigarius, hist. fl.
109	Qu. Cæcilius Metellus. M. Junius Silanus.	The treaties of Aulus and Albinus with Jugurtha are not ratified; Metellus prosecutes the Numidian war with varied success. The Cimbri request an allotment of lands, where they may settle; this being refused, they defeat the consul Silanus and ravage the country; they are checked by Minucius Rufus in Thrace. Birth of Atticus.
108	Ser. Sulpicius Galba. M. Aurelius Scaurus.	Metellus continues, as proconsul, the war in Africa. The Cimbri are again victorious, in a battle against the consul Scaurus. Mithridates of Pontus secretly prepares to regain by force the province of Phrygia, which the Romans gave to his father, but have taken from him during his minority; he acquires Paphlagonia and the Taurican Chersonesus.
107	L. Cassius Longinus. C. Marius.	The first consulate of Marius, who carries on the war against Jugurtha more vigorously; Sylla is his questor. A triumph is granted to Metellus. The army of the consul Cassius is cut to pieces and himself slain by the Tigurini, a Celtic tribe, whence the name of Zürich is derived. L. Crassus is tribune of the people. Licinius, poet, fl. Cleopatra gains such an ascendancy in Egypt, that she sends her eldest son, Ptolemy Soter, to Cyprus, and brings thence her youngest, Alexander, to reign under her. On the death of John Hyrcanus, his son, Aristobulus, takes the title of king of the Jews. Dionysius of Thrace, crit. fl.
106	C. Atilius Serranus. Qu. Servilius Cæpio.	Jugurtha is betrayed by Bocchus, king of Mauritania, into the hands of the Romans, and the war ended. Part of Numidia is added to the Roman province, part given to Bocchus, and the rest left nominally independent to the descendants of Masinissa. Crassus supports the judicial reform, proposed by the consul, Servilius (Lex Servilia). Birth of Cicero at Arpinum, Jan. 3d, and of Pompey, Sep. 30th.
105	P. Rutilius Rufus. C. Manlius.	The Cimbri and Teutones, forcing their way into Roman Gaul, defeat the consul Manlius and proconsul Cæpio, near the Rhone, with immense slaughter. Death of Aristobulus the Cruel, and accession of his brother, Alexander Jannæus.

104	Triumph of Marius; Jugurtha led in the procession, remains a prisoner till his death; terrified by their disasters and the loss of all their armies, except the Numidian, the Romans suspend the consular law and elect Marius, that he may command in Gaul: Sylla is his legate. The Cimbri and Teutones invade Spain.
103	Marius, elected consul for the third time in his absence, with Sylla for military tribune, employs the year in active preparations; remodels the army and introduces a new system of tactics. The Cimbri are driven out of Spain by the natives. Artemidorus, the Ephesian geog. fl. The "Tereus" of Attius. Death of Turpillius, com. poet, and of Lucilius, æt. 46.
102	Marius, a fourth time consul, encounters the Teutones, on their retreat from Spain, at Aquæ Sextiæ (Aix), and totally defeats them. A second revolt of the slaves in Sicily. The poet Archias, a native of Antioch, comes to Rome, a young man.
101	The Cimbri defeat the proconsul, Lutatius Catulus, and force a passage into Italy. Marius, again re-elected, meets them on the plain of Vercellæ; and completely crushes them, July 30; by these events, both the Gothic and Celtic leagues are dissolved, and the Teutones and Cimbri, being no more heard of, are supposed to be annihilated. The slaves in Sicily resist the consul Aquilius.
100	The services of Marius are rewarded by a sixth consulship and splendid triumph. Rome is disturbed by the factious violence of Apuleius Saturninus and Servilius Glaucia. Metellus Numidicus is outlawed and retires to Rhodes. Birth of Julius Cæsar. The Sicilian slaves, though often defeated, are still unconquered. Ælius Lanuvinus and Servius Claudius are eminent teachers at Rome; among the scholars of the former are Varro and Cicero.
99	Metellus is honourably recalled to Rome. Tranquillity is finally restored in Sicily by M. Aquilius, proconsul.
98	Lusitania is tranquillized by Dolabella, proconsul. Aquilius, accused of malversations in Sicily, is eloquently defended by the orator, Antonius.
97	The consul, Didius, in Spain, to control the Celtiberi; Sertorius is one of his officers. A decree of the senate forbids human sacrifices. The cruelties of Alex. Jannæus irritate the Jews. Siege and capture of Gaza.
96	Cyrene is bequeathed to the Romans by Ptol. Apion. Antiochus Grypus is slain in a contest with his brother. Tigranes reigns in Armenia.
95	Cyzicenus, defeated by Seleucus, son of Grypus, kills himself. Syria is distracted by rival claimants. Meleager collects the Anthologia. First oration of Hortensius in the Forum, æt. 19. Birth of Lucretius. Massacre of 1000 Pharisees by Alexander Jannæus.
94	Antiochus Eusebes, son of Cyzicenus, obtains the greater part of Syria. Seleucus is drowned in the Orontes, but his brothers continue a vain struggle for their inheritance. Mithridates makes his son king of Cappadocia.
93	The people of Cappadocia appeal to the Romans, who give them Ariobarzanes for their king. Mithridates seizes Galatia.
92	Sylla is sent into Cappadocia to observe the proceedings of Mithridates; he receives there ambassadors from Parthia. Banishment of the upright P. Rutilius, who writes at Smyrna Memoirs of his Life . The censors, of whom Crassus is one, issue an edict against rhetoricians, which drives Aurelius Opilius from Rome; he retires to Smyrna, and composes many works there.
91	M. Livius Drusus, tribune of the people, advocates, in concurrence with the consul Philippus, the admission of the allies of Rome to the right of citizens; he is assassinated. Death of Crassus, æt. 49; his last oration was delivered seven days before he died. Nicomedes II., who had fifty-eight years before obtained

Octavius arrives at Rome to claim his inheritance, which Antony attempts to detain from him; quarrel between them; Antony proceeds to make himself master of Cisalpine Gaul. Cicero's first Philippic, Sept. 2d; his second, written at home, never spoken; his third and fourth delivered in the senate, Dec. 20th, when Antony is declared an enemy of his country. Cratippus, preceptor of Cicero's son at Athens. Ptolemy, et. 15, claims his share of power in Egypt, on which he is poisoned by Cleopatra.
- 43 Antony besieges Mutina (Modena); Servius Sulpicius, authorized by the Senate to treat with him for peace, dies on his arrival in the camp, and the negotiation fails. Antony, defeated by the consuls and Octavius, joins Lepidus. The three hostile leaders are reconciled, and form the second triumvirate. They lead their united forces to Rome, and rule with absolute power. Bloody proscriptions follow. Cicero is one of the victims. His continued Philippics, delivered between Jan. 1st and April 22nd, irritate Antony, and he is murdered, Dec. 7th, et. 63. Varro also is proscribed, but escapes; his estates are seized. Birth of Ovid, March 21st. Diodorus Siculus begins to write his History, on which he is employed thirty years. The colony of Lugdunum (Lyons) founded by Munatius Plancus, when proconsul in Gaul.
- 42 Battles of Philippi. Deaths of Brutus and Cassius. Their army dispersed. The survivors repair to Sextus Pompeius, who has collected a strong fleet and is master of Sicily. Octavius returns to Rome. Antony remains in the East; he attacks and kills Ariobarzanes, king of Cappadocia, who had supported Brutus; the slain monarch is succeeded by his son. Horace, taken from his studies at Athens, is made a tribune by Brutus; he escapes by flight at Philippi, and returns to Rome, to be a better poet than a soldier.
- 41 Fulvia, the wife of Antony, and the consul, Lucius, his brother, oppose Octavius, who drives them from Rome. The former retires to Sicily, in Greece, where she dies; the latter is besieged in Perusia. Cleopatra is suspected of having assisted Brutus, and is summoned by Antony, to render an account of her conduct. They meet at Tarsus, where their fatal union begins; he consents to the murder of Arsinoë, Cleopatra's sister.

40	Antony accompanies Cleopatra to Egypt. During his absence, Labienus guides a Parthian army, under Pacorus, the son of Orodes, to invade Syria. They make Hyrcanus prisoner and depose him, setting up Antigonus as king of Judæa: but Herod is favoured by the Romans, and eventually obtains the throne by their support. Perusia is taken by Octavius, plundered and burnt: but L. Antonius is pardoned by the conqueror. After the death of Fulvia, Octavius, under the advice of Mæcenas, is reconciled to M. Antony and gives him his sister Octavia in marriage. Cornelius Nepos writes his "Lives." Catullus ob. æt. 47.
39	The treaty of Misenum, between Octavius, Antony, and Sextus Pompeius. Ventidius, Antony's lieutenant, defeats the Parthians, and Labienus is slain, while he himself passes his time at Athens, with his bride Octavia. He gives a part of Cilicia, with the title of king, to Polemo, son of Zeno of Apamea.
38	Octavius divorces Scribonia and marries Livia. He renews the war with Sex. Pompey, is defeated in a naval battle and loses all his fleet. Ventidius gains another victory over the Parthians, in which Pacorus is killed, on the anniversary of the great defeat of Crassus, June 9th; he is recalled in the midst of his successes, but allowed a triumph. Sosius conquers the refractory Jews, and sends Antigonus a prisoner to Rome: Herod is confirmed as king, and marries Mariamne, daughter of Hyrcanus; he begins his course of atrocious cruelty. Antony arrives in Italy to arrange with Octavius for a renewal of their triumvirate, the five years of which had expired. Horace begins to be distinguished for his talents, and obtains the friendship of Mæcenas, through Varius and Virgil.
37	The consul, Agrippa, crosses the Rhine, to secure the frontier of Gaul. Octavius active in fitting out another fleet; the harbour of Misenum is constructed. He concert with Antony, at a meeting near Tarentum, the means of opposing Sex. Pompey, and the prolongation of their Triumvirate for five years more. Orodes is strangled by his son Phraates, whom, on the death of Pacorus, he had named for his successor. Hyrcanus is murdered by Herod, and at his instigation, Antigonus is put to death at Rome. Varro, æt. 80, writes "De Re Rustica."
36	Total defeat of Sex. Pompey by Agrippa, who receives from Octavius a naval crown; Pompey escapes to Lesbos. Lepidus, aspiring to greater power, is deserted by his soldiers, and ejected from the triumvirate, but allowed to live in peace and remain Pontifex Maximus. Antony, after a winter passed with Cleopatra, advances into Media, where he is defeated by the Parthians, and an Armenian army under Artavasdes; he effects a most disastrous retreat into Egypt. Ariarathes is deposed by him, and Archelaus made king of Cappadocia, to whom Conon dedicates his history. The Furnii, father and son, distinguished as orators and historians. Propertius, losing his patrimony by the division of lands, applies early to poetry.
35	Sex. Pompeius, hearing of Antony's defeat, attempts another war; he is made prisoner, and put to death by M. Titius. Octavius keeps in subjection the Iapydes, Liburnians and other Illyrian tribes. The poet Bavus dies. Virgil writes his Georgics. Horace publishes his first book of Satires.
34	Antony invades provinces and kingdoms on Cleopatra; he invades Armenia, takes Artavasdes prisoner, and sends him in chains to Egypt. Octavius reduces the Dalmatians to obedience. Death of the historian, Sallust.
33	Octavius, indignant at Antony's conduct, sends Octavia to reclaim him; he dismisses and divorces her. The Parthians conquer Media and drive the Romans out of Armenia, when Artaxias is raised to the throne, vacant by his father's captivity. Agrippa, Ædile, restores the public edifices and fountains of Rome. The Octavian library is founded.
32	Antony detaches himself wholly from Rome, and celebrates a triumph in Egypt, in which Artavasdes is led in fetters of gold. He removes to Alexandria the library of Pergamus, said by Plutarch to have consisted of 200,000 volumes. Active preparations for war between him and Octavius. Antony conducts his forces as far as Coryra, and then passes the winter with Cleopatra at Patro. Death of Atticus, æt. 77.

31	Battle of Actium, Sept. 2nd. Octavius owes his victory to the skill of Agrippa and the rapid evolutions of the light ships of the Liburnians, which he had engaged in his service. From this time such vessels form an important part of the Roman navy. From pursuing Antony and Cleopatra, he is called back to Italy, by the news of discontent among the troops there. In twenty-seven days, at Brundisium, he pacifies them, and proceeds to Egypt. Horace, in Epod. 1 and 7, refers to this war; and his Ode i. 37 is wholly devoted to celebrate the victory. Tyrannio the younger is among the prisoners brought to Rome, where he afterwards teaches and writes. A destructive earthquake in Palestine.
30	Death of Antony, æt. 53, and of Cleopatra, æt. 39. Egypt a Roman province. Nicopolis founded by Octavius to commemorate his victory. His preceptor, Athenodorus, is made governor of Tarsus. Cornelius Gallus, the friend of Virgil, is prefect of Egypt. Horace publishes his second book of satires, and his Epodes .
29	Octavius returns to Rome, celebrates his triumph, and in token of universal peace, closes the temple of Janus. Dionysius of Halicarnassus comes to Italy. Mariamne falsely accused of infidelity, and condemned to death by Herod.
28	Assisted by Mæcenas and Agrippa, Octavius regulates the state and adorns the city. The franchise of Rome is widely extended: the census, taken this year, gives the number of citizens, 4,164,000, from which the whole population of the empire has been wrongly computed at only 16,500,000. (Gibbon, ch. 2, estimates it at 128,000,000.) Death of Varro, æt. 80.
27	Octavius resigns his power; it is given to him again by the Senate for ten years, with the titles of Imperator and Augustus. He visits Gaul and Spain, and projects, but does not execute, an incursion into Britain. Tiberius accompanies his patron Messalla and records his triumph, for settling some disturbances in Aquitania. Vitruvius writes on architecture.
26	Cornelius Gallus is disgraced for misgoverning Egypt, and kills himself; æt. 41. Elegies of Propertius composed.
25	Augustus, in person, checks a revolt of the Cantabri and Astures, while his generals overawe the Salassi. On his return to Rome the Temple of Janus is again closed. Munatius Plancus, the founder of Lyons (see B.C. 43), is eminent as an orator. The fourth book of Virgil's Georgics written. Agrippa builds the Pantheon. Tiridates raises a rebellion in Parthia; he is defeated by Phraates, and takes refuge at Rome.
24	Ælius Gallus, governor of Egypt, undertakes an expedition into Arabia, which fails. Strabo, æt. 30, visits him in Egypt. Death of Quintilius Varus of Cremona, a friend of Virgil and Horace; the latter laments his loss, Carm. i. 24. Virgil is employed on the Æneid . Horace collects and publishes the first three books of his Odes . Frankius .
23	The Triumvirian power is voted to Augustus for life. His success is clouded by the death of Marcellus, æt. 20, his nephew and son-in-law, whom he designed for his successor. Ambassadors from Parthia demand the reddition of Tiridates. Augustus refuses, and requires, that the ensigns and prisoners taken from Crassus and Antony should be given up. Nestor of Tarsus was the preceptor of Marcellus.
22	The abortive conspiracy of Murena and Cæpio, for which they are put to death. Candace, queen of Æthiopia, invades Egypt, and is repulsed by C. Petronius. Virgil recites Æn. VI. before Augustus and Octavius, who are overcome with grief at the mention of Marcellus, v. 882.
21	Augustus regulates the police of Rome; he appoints Agrippa prefect of the city, and gives him in marriage his daughter Julia, the widow of Marcellus. After this, he travels through Italy and Greece, and winters at Samos.

	The Jews are dispersed. Josephus is set at liberty, and highly favoured by Titus. The Batavi and their confederates, who had for some time resisted successfully, under Civilis, the Roman legions, are defeated by Cerealis. A treaty of peace acknowledges them as allies, not subjects, of Rome. Bishops preside over the principal Christian churches; Annianus at Alexandria, Ignatius at Antioch, and Simeon at Jerusalem or Pella. Revolt of Sabinus in Gaul.
71	Volgases, who had offered to Vespasian a subsidiary force of 40,000 Parthians, sends ambassadors to congratulate Titus and present him a crown of gold. On his way to Rome, Titus meets Apollonius of Tyana in Cilicia. The joint triumph of Vespasian and Titus. The Temple of Janus closed.
72	Antiochus, the nominal king of Commagene, is deposed, and sent with his family to reside in Rome; this country is made a Roman province. The fourteenth book of Pliny's Hist. Nat. written this year.
73	Julius Frontinus is now governor of Britain. Some of the Jews, who had been expelled from their country, excite disturbances and revolts among their brethren in Cyrene.
74	Helvidius Priscus, the Stoic, having offended Vespasian, is put to death, and all the philosophers, except Musonius Rufus (see A.D. 69), are ordered to leave Rome; among the expelled is Demetrius, (see A.D. 39 and 66). Agrippa brings to Rome his sister, Berenice, to whom Titus attaches himself.
75	Vespasian dedicates the Temple of Peace, and begins to build the Colosseum. Parthia is invaded by the Alani, and Volgases requests the Romans to afford him assistance against them.
76	Birth of Hadrian, Jan. 24. Plutarch is the preceptor of the future emperor, Trajan.
77	A destructive earthquake in Cyprus, and fatal pestilences in Rome. Parthia is again disturbed by intestine troubles. Pliny's Hist. Nat. is dedicated to Titus in his sixth consularship.
78	Agricola succeeds Julius Frontinus in Britain, completes the conquest of the island, and introduces useful arts.
79	Sabinus, discovered in the cavern, where he had been concealed nine years (see A.D. 70), is cruelly put to death. Cæcina and Marcellus, detected in a conspiracy, meet the same fate. Death of Vespasian, June 24th, æt. 69. Pompeii and Herculaneum destroyed by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius, Aug. 23rd. Pliny the Elder, approaching too near, is smothered by the ashes, Aug. 24th, æt. 56.
80	Rome is afflicted by a calamitous fire, followed by a pestilence. Titus restores the injured edifices and relieves the sufferers. The Colosseum being completed, he celebrates in it magnificent games. Splendid baths are built by him, adorned with numerous statues, among which is the Laocoon, sculptured by Agesander of Rhodes, Athenodorus, and Polydorus. Successful campaign of Agricola in Caledonia. Pliny the Younger, æt. 19, begins to plead, and Plutarch composes his first treatises.
81	Death of Titus, Sept. 13, æt. 40, lamented by his subjects, who attribute his death to poison. His brother Domitian, on his accession, represses for a time his violent passions. Valerius Flaccus writes his "Argonautica." Titus, in the last days of his life, restores the dilapidated aqueduct of the Aqua Curtia. Domitian is supposed to have written during the life of Titus, the Paraphrase on the Phænomena of Aratus, commonly ascribed to Germanicus. Nieb.
82	The reparation of the Capitol and other public works, commenced by Titus, are completed. The amphitheatre of Verona built. Domitian establishes a liberal endowment for rhetoricians, of which Quintilian is a partaker.
83	Expedition of Domitian against the Chatti, over whom he pretends to have gained great victories; he assumes the name of Germanicus and celebrates a triumph.
84	The Caledonians collect a great force, under Galgacus, to oppose Agricola, by whom they are totally defeated; he builds the wall between the Clyde and the Forth, and his fleet sails round the north of Scotland for the first time.
85	Domitian, jealous of Agricola, recalls him to Rome, and appoints Sallustius governor of Britain. Abilius is elected bishop of Alexandria.

Repetition Dates.
86	Institution of the Capitoline games by Domitian, in which a prize is given for poetry. Revolt of the Nasamones in Africa finally quelled. The Dacians invade Moesia and defeat the Roman general, Fuscus. Irritated by this disaster, Domitian begins his cruelties, and employs spies and informers to furnish pretexts for them. Birth of Antoninus Pius, Sept. 20.
87	The Romans sustain another defeat, and prevail upon the Dacians to retire, by paying them a large sum of money.
88	The secular games celebrated at Rome. Herennius Senecio writes the Life of Helvidius Priscus , and Arulenus Rusticus that of Thrasea Patus , for which they are among the victims of Domitian's tyranny. Tacitus is appointed Prætor .
89	Quintilian, after having taught rhetoric twenty years in Rome, begins his Treatise "De Institutione Rhetorica;" the nephews of Domitian are at this time under his care. Departure of Tacitus from Rome.
90	The deaths of Herennius and Arulenus are followed by an order for all philosophers and mathematicians to leave Rome and Italy. Epictetus withdraws to Nicopolis, and Dio Priscus (see A.D. 69), retires among the Goths, of whom he afterwards writes. Pliny is Prætor .
91	Domitian concludes a peace with the Dacians, and celebrates a triumph. Cornelia, chief of the Vestals, is buried alive, for having broken her vows. L. Antonius Saturninus revolts in Germany; he is defeated and slain by L. Apphus Maximus.
92	Domitian builds the Forum Palladium for Courts of Law and Government Offices. The mathematician, Agrippa, observes, in Bithynia, a conjunction of the moon with the Pleiades, Nov. 29, at 7 p.m.
93	An over-abundant vintage in the preceding year, causes Domitian to issue an edict against planting vines in cities. The emperor goes in person to repel an incroad of some Sarmatian tribe; particulars unknown, except that he is absent eight months and declines the triumph which is offered by the Senate. Death of Agricola, Aug. 23, æt. 56. Josephus completes his Ant. Jud. and dies soon afterwards, æt. 56. The first blue books of Martial's epigrams, and that " De Spectaculis ," are written during the reigns of Titus and Domitian. Apollonius of Tyana comes again to Rome, is accused of conspiracy, suffered to escape, and goes to the Olympic games. Scopellianus, the sophist of Clazomenæ, sent as ambassador from Asia, prevails upon Domitian to revoke his edict against planting vines.
94	Domitian's indiscriminate slaughter of his subjects fills all Rome with dismay. Juvenal is sent to Egypt, supposed by some, to have been the first exile to the Oasis. Clement, bishop of Rome, addresses an epistle to the church of Corinth, to heal their divisions, the earliest post-apostolic writing that is known.
95	Celsus Juventinus, detected in a conspiracy, is nevertheless pardoned. The Jews and Christians refusing to pay a tax levied for the expense of rebuilding the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus, are visited with severe punishments. This is called the second persecution. The consul Clemens, Domitian's nephew, is put to death, and the empress Flavia Domitilla banished to the isle of Pandataria, as is supposed, for their profession of Christianity. The apostle John is sent to Patmos. Statius writes the fourth book of his " Silvæ ."
96	The barbarities of Domitian provoke another conspiracy, and he is slain, Sept. 18, æt. 45. M. Cocceius Nerva is unanimously proclaimed emperor, and his reign commences a term of eighty-four happy years for the Romans. Pliny pleads before the new emperor, for the family of Helvidius Priscus. All exiles are recalled, and the imprisoned set free.
97	Virginus, the consul, dies in the first month of his office, and is succeeded by the historian, Tacitus. Discontent of the Prætorians repressed. Frontinus, the geometrician, has the care of the Roman aqueducts. Ælianus, tacticus , fl. Nicetes of Smyrna is sent into Gaul. Apollonius of Tyana dies about this time. Trajan is adopted by Nerva. Herodes Atticus, the father, a descendant of Mithrades, discovers the treasure, afterwards so munificently applied by his son. The Apostle John is recalled from banishment.
98	Death of Nerva in the gardens of Sallust, Jan. 25, æt. 72, Trajan being then at Colonia Agrippina. Pliny is the correspondent and favourite of the new emperor. Plutarch is highly distinguished by him. The only surviving apostle, St. John, now et. 90, at the earnest entreaty of the Asiatic bishops, writes his gospel. Transit of the moon over Spica Virginis, observed at Rome, Jan. 11, 7 a.m., by the Alexandrian mathematician, Menelaus. Cerdon is bishop of Alexandria.

99	Trajan, on his return from Germany, makes his entry into Rome, and distributes a liberal donation to the people and the army. Dio Pruseus is patronized by him; but Martial is treated with coldness, on account of his flattery of Domitian. Julius Severus, governor of Britain.
100	Pliny and Tacitus jointly prosecute Marius Priscus and some of his officers for extortion in Africa; after a trial of three days, they are condemned by Trajan to refund their gains, and are banished. Tacitus did not long survive this; but the time of his death is not known. The Panegyric of Trajan pronounced by Pliny. Martial retires to Bithilis in Spain, his native place. St. John dies at Ephesus, et. 92.
101	Trajan discontinues the annual payment to the Dacians, and on their invading the Roman provinces, he drives them back and pursues them over the Danube. He is accompanied on this expedition by Hadrian, as quaestor. Silius Italicus, after a long retirement at Naples, dies there, et. 75.
102	Trajan continues the war in Dacia. His empress, Plotina Pompeia, and his sister, Marciana, by their example, reform the manners and character of the Roman females.
103	The victories of Trajan compel Decebalus, the Dacian leader, to accept the treaty of peace, dictated by the conqueror. Trajan returns to Rome and celebrates his triumph. He constructs the harbour of Centumcellae (now Civita Vecchia). Pliny goes as pro-consul to Bithynia. Arrian studies under Epictetus at Nicopolis.
104	The Dacian war renewed. Trajan again commands, with Hadrian under him, praetor of the Minervian legion. Pliny writes to the emperor (Ep. x. 97, 98), respecting the Christians in his province. Martial, at Bithilis, et. 62, sends his twelfth book to Rome.
105	Trajan's bridge over the Danube, constructed by the architect, Apollodorus of Damascus. Plutarch governor of Illyricum. Violent earthquakes in Greece and Asia.
106	Decebalus having fallen in battle, the war is terminated, and Dacia forms a Roman province, beyond the Danube. Cornelius Palma conquers Petra and Bostra, with the surrounding part of Arabia Petrea. Trajan's second Dacian triumph, followed by a long succession of games and other festivities.
107	Trajan employs the leisure of peace in useful works; he drains the Pontine marshes and forms a road through them; constructs the harbour of Ancona, and founds schools for poor children. The progress of Christianity causes great discontent among the numerous classes whose means of livelihood are derived from the services and ceremonies of the heathen temples. Attempts are made to compel the Christians to offer sacrifices; those who refuse are punished; some suffer martyrdom. This is the beginning of the third persecution.
108	The writings of Dio Pruseus and Plutarch revive Greek literature among the Romans. Simeon, the bishop of Jerusalem or Pella, is put to death, and Justus succeeds him.
109	The road from Beneventum to Brundisium is constructed by Trajan. Primus succeeds Cerdon as bishop of Alexandria.
110	Completion of the works in the Pontine marshes, commenced A.D. 107. Papias, bishop of Hierapolis, in his "Expianation of the Oracles of our Lord," makes the earliest mention of the gospels of Matthew and Mark, the former being in Hebrew.
111	Saturninus, a disciple of Menander, teaches Gnostic doctrines.
112	Hadrian is Archon of Athens.

113	Trajan's column erected in Rome, in the forum, designed and executed by the architect, Apollodorus, who is also employed on the Odeum, temples, triumphal arches, and other works, with which Trajan and Hadrian adorn the city.
114	Trajan proceeds into the East to make war against the Parthians; he reaches Antioch and winters there.
115	Ignatius is brought before Trajan at Antioch, and sent to Rome, where he is torn by wild beasts in the amphitheatre. Heros succeeds him as bishop. A destructive earthquake at Antioch, by which many perish, and among them the consul, Peto. The Parthians are driven out of Armenia by Trajan, and Parthamasiris, whom they had made king there, is taken prisoner. The Jews of Cyprus, Egypt, and Cyrene rebel and slaughter many thousands.
116	Trajan takes Nisibis, Edessa and Ctesiphon, and penetrates as far as the Persian Gulf. He deposes Chosroes, who is soon afterwards restored to the throne. Florus composes his epitome of Roman History. Macrinus, Archon of Athens.
117	Death of Trajan at Selinus in Cilicia, Aug. 8, æt. 61. Hadrian proclaims himself emperor at Antioch, and is quickly acknowledged throughout the empire. He relinquishes all the conquests of Trajan in the East, and makes the Euphrates the limit of his dominions there. He retains Dacia. The rebellious Jews are quelled by Lucius Quietus.
118	Hadrian comes to Rome. A plot against him is discovered, and the conspirators, four senators, are put to death. He conciliates the people by a large donative (congiarium), and by remitting arrears of taxes. He then proceeds to Mesia, and repels an incursion of Sarmatæ and Roxolani. Epictetus returns to Rome, and is held in high estimation by Hadrian. Favorinus and Florus excite the jealousy of their Imperial competitor. Suetonius is appointed private secretary; but having offended the empress Sabina, he is dismissed and dies soon afterwards. Juvenal's thirteenth satire written. Valerius Pollio and the elder Scaurus Æ.
119	Hadrian visits Campania. Marcius Turbo and Septicius Clarus are appointed Prætorian Præfects; the latter is soon removed for disrespectful behaviour to the empress. Death of Enphrates, known as phil. stolo since A.D. 69. Dionysius Milesius excites Hadrian's jealousy.
120	Hadrian commences his personal survey of all the provinces of the empire, and first, of Gaul and Germany; he orders a fortified barrier, to protect the open frontier between the Neckar and the Danube. Justus, bishop of Alexandria.
121	Hadrian passes some months in Britain; the wall between Newcastle and Carlisle is built, under his directions. Birth of the future emperor, Marcus Aurelius, in the Gardens on Mount Cœlius, April 26. Antoninus, afterwards Pius, is pro-consul of Asia.
122	Hadrian travels in Spain, whence, making a short stay at Rome, he passes on to Greece and spends his winter at Athens.
123	Hadrian continues his progress in Greece, rebuilds a bridge over the Cephissus, which a flood had destroyed, orders other public works, and proceeds into Asia. Quadratus and others travel among the churches "to deliver to them the Scriptures of the Holy Gospels." (Euseb.)
124	Hadrian, journeying through the Asiatic provinces, restores Nicomedia, Cesarea, and other cities, which had suffered from recent earthquakes. Philo Biblius Æ.
125	After a voyage among the Greek Islands, Hadrian returns to Athens and winters there. He is initiated into the Eleusinian mysteries, and adorns the city with the Olympæum, theatres, and other edifices. Quadratus, and the philosopher Aristides, present to him an "Apology for Christianity;" on which he addresses a letter to Minucius Fundanus, Pro-consul of Asia, putting a stop to persecution. Pansanias Æ.
126	Hadrian presides at public games in Athens, after which he sails to Sicily, where he ascends Mount Ætna, and thence returns to Rome. Pertinax, the future emperor, born at Villa Martia, in the Apennines, Aug. 1. Dionysius of Halicarnassus, Junior, soph. and mus., and Cephallion, rhet. and hist. Æ.

128	Hadrian takes the title of Pater Patriæ. Death of Juvenal. Theon of Smyrna observes the aphelion of Venus, Oct. 10.
129	Hadrian sets out for the East, and passes the winter again at Athens, where he patronizes the learned and enlarges the libraries. Birth of Aristides, the heathen philosopher. Cornelius, bishop of Antioch.
130	After traversing Asia Minor, Syria, Palestine, and part of Arabia, Hadrian inspects Mount Casius, near the Sirbonian Lake, and in the autumn reaches Egypt. Sailing on the Nile, Oct. 30, his favourite, Antinous, is accidentally drowned, to whose memory he builds Antinopolis in Thebais, and a temple. Sculptors are employed on busts and statues of this youth. The poet Pancrates gives the name of Antinoëon to the red lotus. Applan of Alexandria becomes known to Hadrian, and follows him to Rome. Birth of Galen.
131	Hadrian returns into Syria. Out of the ruins of Jerusalem a city is built by him, named Ælia Capitolina, in which he dedicates a temple to Jupiter. This provokes a formidable rebellion of the Jews. Eumenes bishop of Alexandria. The aphelion of Mercury observed by Theon, July 5.
132	Barchochebas, the leader of the Jews, maintains a fierce conflict with Titinius Rufus, governor of the province. Adrian orders reinforcements. Salvianus Julianus prepares the "Perpetual Edict," and founds the later system of Roman jurisprudence. Lollianus, the Ephesian sophist, fl.
133	The coins of Hadrian (see Eckhel), commemorate the provinces visited by him. The education of M. Aurelius, now æt. 12, is principally confided to M. Fronto, with all the most celebrated teachers in Rome under him. Sextus of Chaeronea, Pintarch's grandson, instructs him in the philosophy of the Stoics.
134	Barchochebas persecutes the Christians, who refuse to join his army. Julius Severus is called from Britain to take the command against him. Basilides teaches his form of Gnosticism at Alexandria.
135	The war in Judæa is terminated by the complete suppression of the rebellion. All Jews are forbidden to approach the site of their former temple. Severus is appointed governor of Bithynia. Hadrian again visits Athens, dedicates the temple of Jupiter Olympius, and gives the island of Cephalonia to the Athenians. He adopts Ælius Verus as his successor. Arrian is governor of Cappadocia. Embassy of Volagases to Rome.
136	The title of Cæsar is given to Æl. Verus. Hadrian, through a gloomy jealousy, puts several members of his family to death; among them his brother-in-law, Servianus, 90 years old. The "Shepherd" of Hermas supposed to be written. After twelve Hebrew successors to Justus (see A.D. 108), Marcus, a Greek, is elected bishop of Jerusalem. He persuades many of his church to desist from observing the ceremonial law of Moses, so that they may leave Pella, and remove to the holy city as rebuilt by Hadrian.
137	Hadrian constructs a sepulchre or mausoleum for himself, called the Moles Hadriani , on the bank of the Tiber, where the castle of St. Angelo now stands. He retires to a magnificent palace, which he had built at Tibur, and is there attacked by the disease which at last proves fatal to him.
138	Death of Æl. Verus, Jan. 1st, and adoption of Antoninus Pius, Feb. 25, who becomes emperor on the death of Hadrian, at Bala, July 10, æt. 62. Phlegon of Tralles, a freed-man of Hadrian, writes history.
139	Claudius Ptolemy, the distinguished astronomer and geographer, observes the vernal equinox at Alexandria, March 22nd. M. Aurelius is adopted by Antoninus, with the title of Cæsar, and married to his daughter, Faustina. Lucius Verus also adopted.
140	Antoninus gives a king to the Armenians. (Eckhel .) Lollius Urbicus, governor of Britain, repels an invasion of the northern tribes, and constructs the wall of Antoninus. The aqueduct of New Athens, a work commenced by Hadrian, is completed. The heresiarchs Valentine and Cerdon visit Rome. Ptolemy observes the vernal equinox, March 22.
141	Death of the empress Faustina, wife of Antoninus. Justin Martyr, phil. Plat converted to Christianity, defends it by his writings; his Apology, addressed to the emperor, is dated in this year by Eusebius.

142	Festivals, called Pia, or Pitalia, held in honour of Hadrian, at Puteoli, in the second year of every Olympiad. Antoninus bestows salaries and honourable distinctions on the teachers of philosophy and rhetoric in the provinces.
143	Herodes Atticus, the son, celebrated for his munificence (see Gibbon), and for his learning, is consul this year. He had taken part in the education of M. Aurelius, with Fronto, now also consul suffectus . Polemo, the sophist, a friend of Fronto.
144	Marcus, 7th bishop of Alexandria and Eros, 5th of Antioch.
145	The beneficent government of Antoninus makes this the happiest period in Roman history. Aristoteles, soph. teaches at Pergamus. Valentine, disappointed in his expectation of a bishopric, becomes more vehement in his heresy. (Tertull.)
146	Antoninus dedicates a temple to Hadrian, and makes a liberal distribution of money to the people, on that occasion. Mesomedes of Crete, poet. lyr. fl.
147	Birth of Septimius Severus, April 11. The worship of Serapis allowed to be introduced into Rome. Calvisius Taurus of Berytus, phil. Plat. a friend of Herodes Atticus, and Aulus Gellius, fl.
148	M. Aurelius is invested with the Tribuneian power. The secular games are celebrated. Appian writes his history. Galen, æt. 17, begins to study medicine, under his first master, Satyrus.
149	Antoninus celebrates his decennalian games. Arrian and Maximus Tyrius are patronized by him.
150	Aulus Gellius fl. (Cln.) and Justin epitomizes the history of Trogon Pompeius. Apuleius leaves Madama, and after studying at Carthage and Athens, settles at Rome.
151	Telephus of Pergamus, gram. fl. Marcion teaches his heresy.
152	The proper date (sec. Cln.) of Justin Martyr's "Apology." An imperial edict forbids all persecution of the Christians.
153	An inundation at Rome. Rhodes suffers by an earthquake. Hegesippus, a converted Jew, comes to Rome, and from Hebrew and Syriac documents writes a history of the Church, of which Eusebius has only preserved a few fragments.
154	Crescens, phil. cyn. is the enemy of Justin Martyr. Celadion bishop of Alexandria.
156	The conspiracy of Atilius Titianus punished, in the due course of law, by his death; the only occurrence of the kind in the reign of Antoninus Pius.
157	Polycarp, bishop of Smyrna, visits Rome, and there meets with Marcion, from whose heresies, and those of Valentine, he converts many to the orthodox faith.
158	Artemidorus, of Daldis in Lydia, writes on dreams and auguries.
159	Galen rises in reputation at Pergamus.
161	Death of Antoninus Pius, March 7, æt. 75. The joint reign of M. Aurelius and L. Verus begins. Aristides visits Rome. Pausanias fl. Death of Ptolemy, æt. 70. Birth of Commodus, and his twin brother, Antoninus, at Lanuvium, Aug. 31.
162	Volagases, with a Parthian army, invades Syria and defeats the Roman governor, Avidius Cassius. The Emperor Verus takes the command against him, assisted by Statius Priscus and Avidius Cassius. The Chatti having attacked the provinces of the Rhine, Avidius Victorinus proceeds against them, and Calpurnius Agricola is sent to Britain to repel an incursion of the Brigantes. Galen's first visit to Rome.
163	Verus enjoys the luxuries of Antioch and Daphne, while his generals conduct the war successfully in Armenia and Media. Polyemus addresses his "Stratagemata" to the two emperors. Hermogenes, at the early age of fifteen, lectures before M. Aurelius.

164	M. Aurelius sends his daughter, Lucilla, to Ephesus, where she is married to Verus. Correspondence of Fronto with the emperor, his former pupil. Persecution of the Christians renewed, in which Justin Martyr suffers. Galen's second visit to Rome. The rhetorician, Nicostratus, fl.
165	The cities of Seleucia and Ctesiphon are taken, and the war terminated. Mesopotamia is retained by the Romans. Death of the eccentric philosopher, Peregrinus, witnessed and described by Lucian.
166	The two emperors celebrate a triumph for the Parthian war. Martyrdom of Polycarp at Smyrna. Jamblicus of Babylon, dramat. fl.
167	A pestilence, brought from the East, rages in Rome for three years. The Marcomanni having made inroads on the Roman provinces, the two emperors proceed to Aquileia, and prepare for war. Amyntianus, hist. dedicates to M. Aurelius.
168	The Marcomanni retire into their own lands. M. Aurelius perseveres in his preparations against them, and provides for the security of Italy. While he is at Sirmium, Herodes Atticus comes from Athens to repel a charge brought against him, and is acquitted by the emperor. Bassus is prætorian prefect. Athenagoras, the Christian Platonist, addresses his "Apology" to the two emperors. Agrippinus, bishop of Alexandria.
169	Sudden death of L. Verus, in his chariot, near Altinum in Venetia, while on his journey to Rome. Galen at Aquileia. Death of Fronto. Aulus Gellius writes his "Noctes Atticæ," Niebuhr . The over-indulgence of M. Aurelius hinders him in the bad passions of the empress Faustina and his son Commodus; a court-exclusiveness, before unknown, is introduced by her.
170	Continuation of the war against the Marcomanni. M. Aurelius resides at Carnuntum in Pannonia. He appoints Alexander of Cotyæum, the Galatian sophist, to be his Greek secretary. The patronage of learned men in this and the three preceding reigns does not prevent the decline of literary talent, which now becomes apparent.
171	Oppian, the poet of Cilicia, writes his "Halleutica." Theophilus, sixth bishop of Antioch.
172	Melito, bishop of Sardes, addresses his "Apology" for Christianity to the emperor. Apollinaris, bishop of Hierapolis.
173	Pausanias describes the splendid works of Herodes Atticus. Dionysius, bishop of Corinth and Pinytus of Crete. Montanus founds the sect of Montanists, and Tatian, a disciple of Justin Martyr, that of the Encratites. Herodian, the grammarian of Alexandria, fl. Hermogenes, so prematurely talented (see A.D. 163), loses his faculties.
174	M. Aurelius makes a short visit to Rome; after his return to the army, the German tribes are signally defeated, which gives occasion to the fable of the "Thundering Legion." Many of Galen's works composed. Apuleius fl.
175	Commodus, æt. 14, assumes the toga virilis, and is admitted into the college of priests. Avidius Cassius revolts in Syria, but is slain by his own soldiers; his family are spared, and tenderly treated. M. Aurelius goes into the East, accompanied by the empress, who dies in a village at the foot of Mount Taurus, where the city of Faustopolis is built in honour of her.
176	M. Aurelius at Smyrna, in the spring, settles the affairs of the East. He there desires the philosopher, Aristides, to be presented to him, and attends his lectures. Proceeding to Athens, he himself there delivers popular lectures, and thence returning to Rome, celebrates his victories by a triumph. Pollux, the Athenian professor, dedicates his "Onomasticon" to Commodus. Phrynichus, a sophist, born in Arabia, fl. Death of Herodes Atticus, æt. 76, and of Pausanias.
177	Commodus invested with the triunivital power; his nuptials with Crispina, daughter of Brutius Præsens, are celebrated by the Epithalamium of Pollux, by public games and by a remission of taxes to the people. Persecution of the Christians in Gaul. Pothinus, bishop of Lyons, suffers martyrdom, and is succeeded by Irenæus. Melito travels from Sardes into Judæa, to procure an accurate account of the Jewish Scriptures, and in the preface to his "Eclogæ," addresses a list of them to his friend, Onesimus.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

Repetition Dates.
178	The aggressions of the Germans require the emperor's presence again on the northern frontier. He purposes to keep them in check, by constituting two new provinces to the north of the Danube. Smyrna, Rhodes, and other cities in Asia suffer greatly from earthquakes. Aristides implores M. Aurelius to aid the rebuilding of them. Christianity is preached in Britain.
179	Successful campaign of M. Aurelius against the Marcomanni. Chrestus, the Athenian sophist, d. Mithriades writes his "Apology."
180	Death of M. Aurelius at Sirmium, March 17, æt 59. Commodus relinquishes the war and returns to Rome. Dion Cassius is from this time contemporary with the events described in his history. Death of Maximus Tyrius. Julianus, tenth bishop of Alexandria.
181	The evil counsellors, whom M. Aurelius had banished from the court, regain their ascendancy over Commodus. The Serapeum at Alexandria is burnt. Theophilus writes his three books "Ad Autolyceum." Perennis, Prætorian Prefect.
182	Troubles in Mauritania appeased. Lucian writes his "Alexander the Impostor;" soon after which he dies, æt 70.
183	Conspiracy and exile of Lælia, the sister of Commodus; he vents his rage on the senators. His generals, Albinus and Niger, settle some commotions in Dacia. Irenæus writes Adv. Hæres. Maximus I., the seventh bishop of Antioch.
184	The Caledonians break through the wall of Antoninus, and commit great outrages in Britain; they are driven back by Ulpius Marcellus. The baths of Commodus erected. The brothers, Maximus and Gordianus Quintillus, suffer death unjustly.
185	Fall and death of Perennis. Marcia, the favourite of Commodus, protects the Christians. Birth of Origen at Alexandria.
186	The empress Crispina banished to Caprea, and soon afterwards put to death. Many of the most eminent persons in Rome are victims of the wanton cruelty of Commodus. The frequent commotions at Alexandria being likely to stop the shipments of Egyptian corn, provision is made for obtaining supplies from the other provinces of Africa.
187	Commodus degrades himself by fighting with wild beasts in the circus, and acting as a gladiator. Oppressive administration of Cleander. Death of Byrrhus and Arius Antoninus.
188	The Capitol struck by lightning; the library and many neighbouring edifices burnt. Birth of Caracalla, son of Sept. Severus, at Lyons.
189	Revolt of Maternus in Spain and Gaul, defeated by Pescennius Niger. Pestilence and famine in Rome. Popular commotions. The city cohorts, having overcome the prætorian guards, pursue Commodus to Lannvium; they are appeased by the sacrifice of Cleander, who is given up to them and killed. Commodus places on a statue of Apollo a head resembling himself.
190	Commodus attempts to substitute the name of Colonia Commodiana for that of Rome. Dion Cassius is a senator. Pantænus, president of the Alexandrian school, travels into India. Serapion, eighth bishop of Antioch, Demetrius, eleventh of Alexandria, and Narcissus, thirtieth of Jerusalem.
191	A great fire at Rome; the temples of Vesta and of Peace are burnt, and many valuable libraries destroyed, in which some works of Galen are lost. Commodus assumes the name of Hercules.
192	Clodius Albinus, governor of Britain. Commodus suspects all who surround him, and slaughters so many, that his favourite Marcia and the prætorian prefect, Lætus, to save themselves, murder him, Dec. 31, æt 31. Birth of Philostratus of Lemnos.
193	Pertinax elected emperor by the Senate, Jan. 1; assassinated by the prætorians, March 28, æt 67. Sale of the empire to Didius Julianus, who is deposed and killed, June 2. Pescennius Niger is proclaimed by his troops in Syria, and Clodius Albinus by the army in Britain. Septimius Severus marches to Rome at the head of the Pannonian legions, is acknowledged by the senate, in thirty days confirms his authority, and then proceeds against Niger. Dion Cassius named prætor for the next year by Pertinax before his death.

	ter of the church at Rome, writes against heretics, but himself holds the Epistle of Paul to the Hebrews, not to have been written by the apostle. Caracalla attempts to assassinate his father, and seduce the allegiance of the army.
211	Death of Severus at York, Feb. 4, æt. 64. His two sons succeed as joint emperors. Oppian of Pella, or Apamea, dedicates to Caracalla a poem on Hunting. Tertullian addresses to Scapula, governor of Carthage, a Vindication of the Christians.
212	Murder of Geta, æt. 23. Papinian and others put to death. Olympic games at Antioch. Caracalla is offended by the pleading of Philiscus. Antipater writes a Monody on the death of Geta. Apollonius writes against the Montanists.
213	Caracalla, finding himself universally detested for his cruelties, goes into Gaul, where, having expelled some German marauders, he takes the surname of Germanicus. Heliodorus, soph. declaims before Caracalla in Gaul. Tertullian answers the attacks of Apollonius on the Montanists.
214	Caracalla invades the lands of the Allemanni, whom he defeats near the river Main. Proceeding thence through Dacia and Thrace, he winters at Nicomedia, where Dion Cassius has an interview with him. Philostratus of Lemnos, at the suggestion of Julia Domna, the widow of Severus, writes the Life of Apollonius of Tyana. Alexander succeeds Narcissus as bishop of Jerusalem, and founds a library there.
215	Arrival of Caracalla at Antioch, whence he visits Egypt, and orders a general massacre of the Alexandrians. Origen withdraws from Alexandria to Cæsarea, but is reballed by Demetrius.
216	By a delusive offer of marriage with the daughter of Artabanus, Caracalla decoys the Parthians into his camp, where he treacherously attacks them, and slaughters a great number. Artabanus, having escaped, collects an army, and invades Syria. To raise money, Caracalla issues an edict making all his provincial subjects citizens of Rome, so that they may be taxed in both capacities. He expels Abgarus from Osrhoene, which is made a Roman province.
217	Caracalla assassinated near Edessa, April 8, æt. 29. Macrinus, the prætor. pref., is proclaimed emperor, and purchases peace with the Parthians. Julia Domna, banished to Antioch, starves herself to death.
218	Messa, Julia Domna's sister, bribes a part of the army to proclaim her grandson, Elagabalus, a youth æt. 17, and high priest of the temple at Emesa. Macrinus is defeated, June 8, at Immæ, made prisoner and beheaded, æt. 54. His son, Diadumenianus, shares his fate. Dion Cassius is governor of Pergamus and Smyrna. Philetus, tenth bishop of Antioch.
219	Elagabalus arrives at Rome, bringing with him his Syrian idol, which he places in a stately temple. Death of Philiscus, who had obtained a professorship at Athens, through the interest of Julia Domna.
220	Elagabalus appoints his vilest associates to the highest offices in the state. His cousin, Alexianus, studies under Julius Frontinus, the rhetorician, and the most eminent philosophers at Rome.
221	Alexianus is declared Caesar, under the name of Alexander Severus. Elagabalus, jealous of his popularity, attempts in vain to depose him. The chronology of Julius Africanus terminates at Olym. 250.
222	Elagabalus slain by the prætorians, March 11, æt. 21, and his mother, Soemias, with him. Alexander Severus proclaimed emperor. Elian, soph. fl. Hippolytus, the disciple of Irenæus, writes many commentaries on the Scriptures, and a chronicle, which ends at this date.
223	Alexander, now about æt. 18, is prudently guided in his administration by his mother, Mamae, who is created Augusta, and selects for his counsellors the eminent lawyer, Ulpian, the most noted disciple of Papinian, with Julius Paulus, and other discreet Senators. All persecution of the Christians ceases.
224	The Peralana, under Ardisheer (called by the Greeks Artaxerxes), revolt against the Parthians, and contend vigorously for independence. Pisander of Laranda, poet, fl.
225	Marriage of Alexander to Sulpitia Memmia. Many good laws are framed by Ulpian and Julius Paulus. The restraints on teaching are revoked. Great earthquake and storm at Rome.

Repetition Dates.
226	The baths of Nero repaired, and henceforth called Alexander's. Final defeat and death of Artabanus, the last of the Arsacide; the Parthian empire is overthrown and the Persian begins. Interview of Origen with the empress-mother, Mamaea, at Antioch.
227	Artaxerxes extends his dominion over Media, Armenia, and the adjacent countries. Beryllus, bishop of Bostra, fl.
228	Ulpian, prætorian prefect, endeavours to restrain the licentiousness of the guards. They mutiny and put him to death. The ringleader, Epigathus, is sent to Egypt and thence to Crete, where he is executed for his crime.
229	Dion Cassius having, as governor of Dalmatia and Pannonia, offended the army by his strictness, the emperor testifies his approbation, by making him his colleague in the consulship; after this, Dion retires into Bithynia, and writes his history. Origen composes many of his works at Alexandria; some of his opinions are condemned by the bishop, Demetrius. Zebinus, eleventh bishop of Antioch.
230	Artaxerxes, now at the head of a powerful empire and formidable army, threatens Mesopotamia and Syria, and lays claim to all the former territories of Persia, as far as the Hellespont and Ægean sea.
231	Alexander Severus, at Antioch, prepares to resist the Persian demands by arms. Aspasius of Ravenna attends as the imperial secretary. Origen withdraws from Alexandria to Cesarea.
232	After a campaign in Mesopotamia, without any decisive results, but in which the Romans claim the victory, Alexander returns to Antioch. Ammonius Saccas teaches at Alexandria, where Plotinus is among his disciples. Theodorus (afterwards Gregory Thaumaturgus) and his brother, Athenodorus, become pupils of Origen at Cesarea.
233	Alexander celebrates a triumph at Rome, for the Persian war, and makes a distribution of money to the people. Birth of Porphyry. Heracles, twelfth bishop of Alexandria.
234	Alexander musters his forces in Gaul, to repel the German tribes, that had invaded the province.
235	Mutiny of the army assembled near Mentz, and murder of Alexander Severus, Feb. 10, æt. 38, with his mother Mamaea. Maximin is proclaimed emperor. Ambrosius, the friend and disciple of Origen, assists his labours, by paying clerks to copy for him. Pontianus, the bishop of Rome, is banished to Sardinia.
236	Maximin defeats the Germans, and pursues them across the Rhine into their own lands. Apsines of Gadara, soph. fl.
237	Maximin proceeds to Sirmium, with the design of attacking the Sarmatians. His ferocious tyranny excites universal horror.
238	The Gordians, proclaimed in Africa, are defeated by Capellianus, and slain. Maximus and Balbinus, elected by the senate, are murdered by the prætorians. Maximin, on his march to Rome, is assassinated by his soldiers, with his son, near Aquileia. The younger Gordian, æt. 13, is proclaimed emperor. Censorinus writes "De Die Natali." Herodian closes his history. Babylas, twelfth bishop of Antioch.
239	The young emperor, at first deceived by the eunuchs of the palace, is extricated from their pernicious influence by Misitheus. Philostratus of Lemnos writes his "Lives of the Sophists."
240	Revolt of Sabinianus in Africa. Various tribes, in the north-western parts of Germany, confederate, under the name of Franks. Theodorus (Greg. Thaummat.), on leaving Cesarea, addresses to a large assembly his oration in praise of Origen.
241	Wise administration of the prætorian prefect, Misitheus. Marriage of his daughter, Tranquillina, to the emperor. Active preparations made for war with Persia. Death of Artaxerxes and accession of his son Shapour, or Sapor I.
242	Misitheus conducts the war successfully; he recovers Mesopotamia, and drives the Persians beyond the Tigris. Plotinus accompanies the Roman army, in the hope of reaching India.
243	Death of Misitheus; Philip, the Arabian, is appointed prætorian prefect.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

Repetition Dates.
244	Murder of Gordian, æt. 19, near Circesium (Carchemish), where a lofty mound is raised to his memory. Philip becomes emperor; he makes peace with Sapor and returns to Rome. Plotinus gains popularity among the Romans, as a lecturer on the New Platonic doctrines.
245	Philip defeats a German tribe on the Danube (called Carpi by Zosimus). Nicagoras, soph. fl.
246	Origen, æt. 60, writes cont. Celsum.
247	Philip gives his son, æt. 10, the title of Augustus, and makes him consul with himself. Asilius Quadratus writes history.
248	Philip governs wisely. The Christians enjoy undisturbed security, and he is even said to have embraced their faith; but this does not accord with the ceremonial of the great secular games, celebrated by him this year, nor with the beathen emblems on his coins. The theatre of Pompey, and other buildings in Rome, destroyed by fire. Cyprian, bishop of Carthage.
249	The legions revolt in several provinces; some proclaim Jotapianus, and others Marinus, both of whom are killed by their own men. Decius, who is sent to appease the mutineers, is compelled by them to assume the purple and lead them into Italy. Battle of Verona. Philip is defeated and slain, and his son murdered at Rome. Decius is emperor. Dionysius thirteenth bishop of Alexandria. The Goths cross the Danube and ravage Thrace.
250	Persecution of the Christians. Fabian, bishop of Rome, is martyred: after an interval of some months, Cornelius is elected to succeed him. Babylas suffers at Antioch, and Alexander at Jerusalem; Fabius is elected in the place of the first, and Mazabanes in that of the last. Cyprian withdraws from Carthage and conceals himself. Decius sends his son to encounter the Goths, and then marches in person.
251	The Goths take Pbilippopolis, and defeat Decius in Mœsia, who falls in battle, æt. 50, and his son with him. Gallius is proclaimed emperor. The wealth and influence of the hierarchy give a great importance to the episcopal office, which begins to be an object of fierce contention. Hence arises the schism of Novatus. The Christian laity are required to submit implicitly to the discipline of the church. Valerian is elected censor.
252	Gallius, having paid the Goths a large sum of money to quit the empire, returns to Rome; Hostilianus, nephew of Decius, is appointed his colleague, but soon falls a victim to the general pestilence, which begins now and rages fifteen years. Cyprian holds a council of bishops at Carthage, by which stricter canons are enforced and the hierarchy rendered more despotic. Birth of Antony, the future founder of monachism. Demetrianus, fourteenth bishop of Antioch.
253	Other barbarians invade Mœsia and Pannonia; they are defeated by Æmilianus, who is saluted as emperor by his army; he marches against Gallius, who is assassinated, with his son, by his soldiers, at Interamnæ. On the approach of Valerian, at the head of the Gallic legions, Æmilianus is killed near Spoleto. Valerian, acknowledged as emperor, makes Gallienus his colleague. Cyprian writes "De Mortalitate." Death of Origen, æt. 69.
254	The Franks invade the northern provinces of Gaul. An eruption of Mount Ætna. Tryphon, a disciple of Origen, supposed to be the presbyter who wrote against Manes. The persecution of the Christians continues.
255	Gallienus takes the command of the forces for the protection of Gaul, and fixes his head-quarters at Treves. Minucianus, soph. fl.
256	The empire is assailed on all sides. The Franks penetrate through Gaul and enter Spain, where Tarraco is sacked by them. The Allemanni attack Italy. The Sarmatians and Quadi force their way into Pannonia. The Goths ravage Macedonia and Greece; the Persians invade Mesopotamia and Syria. Cyprian assembles another council at Carthage, and dictates articles, which provoke angry disputes.
257	Aurelianus, lieutenant of the emperors, repels the Goths. Correspondence of Dionysius and Sextus II. on the articles of Carthage. Cyprian banished to Curubis.

258	Valerian goes into the East, against the Persians. Postumus checks the invaders of Gaul. The Goths fit out naval armaments on the Euxine, and take Trebizond. Martyrdom of Sixtus II. at Rome, Aug. 6th, and of Cyprian, at Carthage, September 14th.
259	The Goths plunder Chalcedon, Nicomedia, Nice, and all the principal cities in Bithynia; Valerian marches as far as Cappadocia to oppose them. The empire is disturbed by a succession of pretenders to the throne called the "Thirty Tyrants;"—Cyriades, the first of them, joins Sapor, and is slain in the beginning of the Persian war. Postumus maintains his independence ten years in Gaul. After a vacancy of some months, Dionysius is elected twenty-fourth bishop of Rome. Pontius writes the "Life of Cyprian."
260	The Roman army totally routed by Sapor; Valerian is made prisoner, and dies in captivity. Saioninus, son of Gallienus, is taken by Postumus at Colonia Agrippina, and slain, with his governor Silvanus. Sapor extends his conquests; but his attack on Palmyra is successfully resisted by Odenathus. Ingenuus revolts in Illyrium; he is defeated and killed by Gallienus; his army rallies, and chooses Regalianus for emperor, who meets the same fate. Paul of Samosata is the fifteenth bishop of Antioch.
261	Macrianus assumes the purple in the East. Valens, who is sent against him, does the same in Greece, and puts to death Piso, who had aspired to the throne; after this, Valens is killed by his own troops. Gregory Thaumaturgus, the disciple of Origen, is bishop of Neo-Cæsarea in Pontus. Manes originates the Manichaean heresy.
262	Macrianus, having advanced as far as Thrace, to attack Gallienus, is defeated and slain, with his son, by Aureolus, who is then proclaimed emperor by his army. Balista takes the imperial title at Edessa, but is overcome by Odenathus. Æmillianus rebels in Egypt. The Goths pass the Bosphorus, ravage the coasts of Greece, and plunder and burn the Temple of Diana at Ephesus. Antioch is surprized and pillaged by the Persians. Earthquake and darkness for many days; the pestilence most fatal. Hymeneus bishop of Jerusalem.
263	Gallienus celebrates the tenth year of his reign by public shows and games. He treats with Aureolus and Odenathus. Saturninus, a meritorious officer, is slain in Pontus, by the soldiers who had compelled him to rebel. Theodotus is sent into Egypt, and puts Æmillianus to death. Tumults in Alexandria; the Bruchion destroyed. The Goths are expelled from Asia.
264	Nisibis, Carrhæ, Ctesiphon, with many other cities, are taken by Odenathus; he acquires a powerful kingdom, and is declared Augustus by Gallienus. Porphyry visits Rome. Plotinus is patronized by the emperor; his disciple Amellus writes Expositions of their philosophy. Paul of Samosata's doctrines are opposed by a council held at Antioch.
265	Postumus, who during seven years has maintained his independence and protected Gaul against the Germans, associates Victorinus with him in his power. Gallienus attacks them, but without success. Rebellion of Trebellianus in Isauria, suppressed by Caussioleus. Longinus fl. Death of Dionysius, who is succeeded by Maximus, fourteenth bishop of Alexandria.
266	Celsus, an African pretender to the imperial dignity, is killed by the people of Sicca, seven days after his proclamation. Callinicus, hist. fl.
267	Various Gothic bands, called by some, Scythians, by others, Heruli, &c., ravage Greece and Asia. After they had plundered Athens, Dexippus, having collected a force of 2000 men, attacks and defeats them. They are encountered again by Gallienus in Illyrienn, and routed. Odenathus drives another section out of Asia, soon after which he is assassinated by his nephew, Mæonius. His widow, Zenobia, avenges his death and fills with glory his vacant throne. Postumus, Victorinus, Lælianus, and Marius, are slain in succession. Tetricus takes their place and reigns in Gaul. Aureolus invades Italy and takes Milan.
268	Gallienus, while besieging Aureolus in Milan, is assassinated by his own troops, March 20, æt. 50. Claudius, proclaimed emperor, takes Milan and puts Aureolus to death. Amid these distractions, the Allemanni penetrate into Italy, and are defeated by Claudius, near Lake Benacus. Porphyry retires to Sicily.

Repetition Dates.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
269	The Goths are signally defeated by Claudius, at Naissus, in Mœsia. Zenobia rules in Egypt, in the name of Claudius. Longinus and Plotinus compose many of their works, and Dexippus his "Chronica." Paul of Samosata, condemned and deposed by another council, held at Antioch, refuses to give up his bishopric to Domnus.
270	Claudius again defeats the Goths, soon after which he dies of the plague at Sirmium, æt. 56. His brother Quintillus assumes the empire at Aquileia, but in seventeen days puts an end to his own life. Aurelian, universally acknowledged emperor, makes peace with the Goths, and relinquishes Dacia to them, transferring that name to another province, south of the Danube. Death of Plotinus, æt. 65. Aurelian confirms the decree of the council, and expels Paul of Samosata from Antioch, where Domnus, son of the former prelate, Demetrianns, becomes the sixteenth bishop.
271	Aurelian drives the Marcomanni and Gutungi over the Danube, and grants peace to the Vandals. The walls of Rome rebuilt. Longinus addresses his Epistle to Porphyry.
272	Aurelian, in his progress to the East against Zenobia, encounters some Gothic marauders in Thrace, and chases them out of the empire. He takes Tyana, Emesa, and Antioch, which attempt to withstand him. Zenobia retires into Palmyra. Death of Sapor, who is succeeded by his son. Timæus, seventeenth bishop of Antioch.
273	Surrender of Palmyra. Zenobia made prisoner. Longinus is put to death. The revolt of Firmus in Egypt suppressed. Having restored the authority of Rome in the East, Aurelian returns to Europe. Hormisdas dies after a short reign, and leaves the throne of Persia to his son.
274	Battle of Chalons and surrender of Tetricus, the last of the "Thirty Tyrants." Aurelian, having re-united all the broken-up parts of the empire, celebrates a splendid triumph at Rome. His captives, Zenobia and Tetricus, are generously treated, and pass the rest of their lives in peace and affluence. Aurelian dedicates a temple to the Sun, improves the city and regulates the general system of government. Birth of Constantine, the future emperor, at Naissus, in Mœsia, Feb. 27. Manes is put to death by Varanes.
275	Aurelian, on his march to attack Persia, is assassinated by Mneapor, between Hæcæa and Byzantium, about March 20, æt. 61. Tacitus is elected by the senate, Sept. 25. He orders ten copies of his ancestor's works to be deposited every year in the public libraries.
276	Tacitus punishes the murderers of Aurelian, and dies soon afterwards, while conducting an expedition against the Goths, who had invaded Asia. His brother, Florian, aspires to the empire, but is killed by the soldiers at Tarsus. Probus is proclaimed emperor by the army, and confirmed by the Senate. Varanes II. succeeds his father in Persia.
277	The Franks, Burgundians, and other German tribes, that had overrun a large part of Gaul, are driven back by Probus. Some of his prisoners, removed to Pontus, seize a fleet in the Euxine, escape through the Bosphorus, plunder many cities on the shores of the Mediterranean, and by a successful navigation reach Germany again.
278	Probus repairs the fortified line, from the Rhine to the Danube, expels the Goths from Thrace, represses the Isaurian robbers, and arrives in Syria, where ambassadors from Persia settle with him terms of peace. Archelaus, bishop of Mesopotamia, writes against Manichæism.
279	The Blemmyes are overthrown by Probus in Egypt. Anatolius, bishop of Laodicea, is noted for his study of philosophy.
280	Saturninus raises a rebellion in the East, and Bonosus and Proculus in Gaul; they are all defeated and suffer death. Cyrillus, eighteenth bishop of Antioch.
281	Probus celebrates the success of his arms by a triumph. He encourages the culture of vines in Gaul and Pannonia.

Repetition Dates.
282	Mutiny of the army at Sirmium; Probus is killed by them in Oct., et. 50. Carus is elected emperor, and gives the title of Caesar to each of his two sons, Carinus and Numerianus.
283	Having stationed Carinus in Gaul, Carus takes Numerianus with him into the East. repulses the Sarmatians in Thrace, advances victoriously into Persia, and makes himself master of Seleucia and Ctesiphon. Near the latter city, he dies mysteriously in his tent, during a violent storm, Dec. 25, et. 61. Calpurnius in his Hunting Eclogues , and Nemesianus in his " Haliæutica ," celebrate Carus and his sons. Pierius Script. Eccl. fl. Theonas, fifteenth bishop of Alexandria.
284	On the death of Carus, his sons succeed him. Numerianus is assassinated by Aper, who falls by the hand of Diocletian, proclaimed emperor by the eastern army. Carinus signalizes his accession by festivities at Rome, and then marches against Julianus, who is defeated and slain near Verona. He then proceeds to encounter Diocletian, who is advancing into Europe. Pamphilus fl. Arnobius teaches rhetoric at Sicca. The general decay of intellect is strongly marked. The Era of Diocletian, or of the Martyrs, dates from Aug. 29 of this year.
285	Defeat and death of Carinus at Margus in Moesia. Diocletian fixes his imperial residence at Nicomedia. The Bagaudæ of Gaul are repressed by Maximian. Theognostus, a disciple of Origen, fl.
286	Maximian obtains further victories in Gaul, and is associated by Diocletian, as joint emperor with him.
287	Carausius, commander of the Roman fleet at Gessoriacum (Boulogne), revolts, and establishes an independent sovereignty in Britain. The legions and public officers there submit to him. He rules the sea and guards the province against the incursions of the northern barbarians.
288	Maximian secures the repose of Gaul; the Franks send an embassy, with their king at its head, to beg for peace. Maximian prepares another fleet to attack Carausius. Diocletian confirms the tranquillity of the eastern frontier by a treaty with the Persians.
289	Carausius defeats Maximian, seizes Gessoriacum, and deprives the Romans of all resources for naval warfare. Mamertinus, Orat. Panegy. fl. Meeting of the two emperors at Milan.
290	Peace concluded with Carausius, who is acknowledged as the ruler of Britain. Lactantius, unsuccessful as a teacher of rhetoric at Nicomedia, applies himself to writing. Diocletian introduces the ceremonial and magnificence of Persia into his court.
291	The two emperors meet again at Milan, and settle their respective jurisdictions, Diocletian in the East, and Maximian in the West. Trebellius Pollio writes, and Flavius Vopiscus prepares to write, their parts of the Augustan histories. Maximian celebrates the close of the fifth year of his reign.
292	Constantius Chlorus and Galerius (surnamed Armentarius) are appointed to assist in administering the affairs, the former, of Thrace and Illyricum, and the latter of Gaul, Spain, and Mauritania.
293	Carausius is treacherously murdered by Allectus, who assumes the government of Britain. Claudius Eusthenius writes his history of the four princes, who now rule the empire. Death of Varanes II. His sons contend for the throne of Persia, which Varanes III. occupies for four months, and is then succeeded by his brother, Narses.
294	The German tribes are at this time in a very unsettled state. Better acquainted with the riches of the Roman provinces, their avidity for plunder is stimulated, and they often contend with each other for the possession of the frontier points, from which they can most easily break into the empire. Some of their leagues formed by the union of various tribes, like the Marcomanni, are dissolved, and their names disappear in history.
295	Victories of Galerius over the Carpi and Bastarnæ. Lands are assigned to them and others, in some of the depopulated districts of the empire.
296	Allectus is defeated and slain by Asclepiodotus, the lieutenant of Constantius, who regains possession of Britain. While Constantius resettles the government of the recovered province, Maximian commands on the Rhine. Arnobius writes " Adversus Gentes ."

297	The revolt of Achillens in Egypt is put down by Diocletian in person. Siege of Alexandria, and slaughter of its inhabitants. Busiris and Coptos destroyed. Julian, who had assumed the purple at Carthage, is overcome by Maximian, and order restored in Mauritania. The Persian war begins. Galerius is defeated by Narses and severely reprimanded by Diocletian. Constantine, æt. 23, accompanies Diocletian. Eunomius, Orat. Panegyric. Ælius Spartianus writes his Augustan history. He is supposed by Vossius and Fabricius to have been the author of that also which bears the name of Æli. Lampridius; and Salmacius ascribes to him the Life of Avidius Cassius, said to have been written by Vulcatius Gallicanus.
298	Galerius gains a complete victory over Narses in Armenia, who, by a treaty of peace, cedes Mesopotamia and five provinces beyond the Tigris. Meeting of Diocletian and Galerius at Nisibis. Tiridates is made king of Armenia, and his dominions enlarged. Zabdas, bishop of Jerusalem.
299	Eunomius, in a public oration at Augustodunum (Autun), before the president of the province, calls attention to the decay of the schools and general neglect of education, and offers to give up his own salary, as professor of rhetoric, towards the expense of repairing the dilapidated buildings.
300	Tranquil state of the empire. Methodius, bishop of Tyre, writes against Porphyry and Origen. Hermon succeeds Zabdas, as bishop of Jerusalem.
301	Death of Narses, who is succeeded by his son, Hormisdas II. Porphyry, æt. 68, writes his life of Plotinus. Petrus, the 16th bishop of Alexandria. From the accession of Diocletian to this time, the Christians had been unmolested by the civil power.
302	Diocletian issues an edict to regulate the prices of commodities, and falls in the attempt. He visits Rome for the first time, and celebrates a triumph there with Maximian. Galerius passes the winter with Diocletian at Nicomedia, and urges him to repress, by severe measures, the growing power of the Christian hierarchy. Meletius, bishop of Nicopolis, condemned and deposed for heresy, in a synod called by Petrus at Alexandria. Tyrannus, nineteenth bishop of Antioch.
303	The persecution of the Christians commences Feb. 23, the fiercest and most systematic which they had endured. The revolt of Eugenius suppressed by the inhabitants of Antioch. Diocletian celebrates the twentieth year of his reign by festivities at Rome. Disgusted by the free manner of the people, he departs abruptly, on the eve of his ninth consulship.
304	Severe illness of Diocletian, impeded to his long journey in the winter, but attributable rather to his vexation at the disorders caused by his change of policy towards the Christians, and to his finding it impossible to extirpate their religion.
305	The dilemma in which Diocletian is placed by the rash counsels of Galerius, determines him to abdicate. He resigns the purple, May 1, at Nicomedia, and persuades Maximian to follow his example on the same day, at Milan. The former retires to Salona, and the latter into Lucania. Constantius and Galerius take the title of Augustus, and that of Cæsar is given to Severus and Maximian. The monastic system introduced in Egypt by Antony.
306	Constantine joins his father, Constantius, in Britain, who dies, July 21, at York. On this the army proclaims Constantine emperor. Maxentius, son of Maximian, assumes the purple at Rome, and his father attempts to replace himself on the throne. Vopiscus publishes his history of Aurelian. Ormus founded by Hormisdas.
307	Severus endeavours to maintain himself against Maxentius, is deserted by all, flies to Ravenna, and is there put to death. Galerius invades Italy, and without fighting a battle, is obliged to retreat ignominiously. Constantine takes possession of Gaul; Maximian meets him at Aries and gives him his daughter, Fausta, in marriage. Licinius is declared emperor by Galerius. The persecution of the Christians, checked by Constantine in the west, is continued in the east. Pamphilus imprisoned.

308	Galerius acknowledges Constantine as Augustus, and allows the same title to Maximian in Syria. There are at this time five emperors actually ruling, with Maximian as a sixth, holding only nominal power, in the court of his son-in-law, Constantine. Africa, oppressed by Maxentius, proclaims Alexander, who falls A.D. 311, when the rebellion is finished by the plunder of Carthage and other cities. Helladius writes his Chrestomathia . Julian. Soph. fl. at Athens. Eusebius, bishop of Cæsarea. He and Pamphilus write "Apologies" for Origen.
309	Constantine averts from Gani the inroads of the Franks and Allemanni, and alleviates the weight of taxation by which the people are borne down. Death of Hormisdas. His infant son, Sapor II., succeeds him on the throne of Persia. Onasimus of Sparta, hist. et soph. fl.
310	Maximian, unsuccessful in an attempt against Constantine, is made prisoner at Marseilles, and strangled, æt. 60. Eumenius delivers his Orat. Panegyric at Autun, in the presence of Constantine. Galerius is attacked by the fatal disease which in the following year terminates his life. Julius Capitolinus writes his Augustan history .
311	Galerius issues an edict, April 30, to put a stop to the persecution of the Christians, and dies in the following month. His share of the empire is divided between Licinius and Maximian. Cruelty of the latter. Valeria, widow of Galerius, and daughter of Diocletian, having refused to marry him, is banished with her mother, to the desert of Syria, and their possessions all confiscated. Her father intercedes for them, but is treated with contempt. Eumenius obtains from Constantine, at Treves, a remission of taxation for Autun.
312	Maxentius, defeated by Constantine, in his flight is drowned in the Tiber, Oct. 27. Constantine enters Rome, disbands the prætorian guards, and is master of all western Europe. Maximian still persecutes the Christians. Methodius suffers martyrdom at Chalcis in Syria, and Petrus at Alexandria, where he is succeeded by Achillas, the seventeenth bishop. Iamblichus, disciple of Porphyry, fl. The Era of the Indictions commences Sept. 1.
313	Licinius marries Constantia, the sister of Constantine, at Milan, where the two emperors meet, and enter into a league of amity. An edict is issued in favour of the Christians. Death of Diocletian, æt. 68. Maximian, advancing to attack Licinius, is totally defeated near Heraclea, and dies soon after at Tarsus. Licinius, sole master of the east, rules tyrannically. Candidianus, a natural son of Galerius, is put to death, and Valeria and Prisca beheaded, at Thessalonica. Contest between Cecilianus and Donatus, for the bishopric of Carthage, which gives rise to the sect of the Donatists. Rheticius, bishop of Autun, known for his commentaries and controversial writings. Alexander, eighteenth bishop of Alexandria.
314	War between Constantine and Licinius. The latter defeated, Oct. 8, at Cibalis in Pannonia, and soon afterwards, on the plain of Mardia, in Thrace, agrees to a treaty of peace, by which he cedes to the conqueror most of his provinces in Europe, and the dominions of Constantine are extended to the extremity of the Peloponnese. Valens, whom Licinius had created Cæsar a few days before, loses his dignity and his life. Birth of Libanius. Council of Aries, against the Donatists.
315	Constantine issues an edict against infanticide, May 13, at his birth-place, Naissus in Mœsia; and another, Oct. 18, at Margilius, by which he condemns to be burnt alive any Jews who persecute or ill-treat converts from their sect to Christianity. Vitalis is the twentieth bishop of Antioch, during the first days when the church had peace.
316	The Donatists appeal to Constantine, who orders an inquiry, which terminates in favour of Cecilian. Arius preaches his doctrines, which are supported by most of the Asiatic bishops, especially by Eusebius of Cæsarea, and Eusebius of Nicomedia.
317	Crispus and Constantine, sons of the emperor of the west, and the younger Licinius in the east, receive the title of Cæsar. Lactantius is the tutor of Crispus. Birth of Constantius.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

Repetition Dates.
318	The church, enjoying external peace, is internally agitated by the rivalry of bishops, the persecution and zeal of the Donatists, and the disputatious fervour of the opponents of Arius.
319	The increasing pressure of the German tribes on the barriers of the empire demands the utmost vigilance of Constantine. He takes the command himself on the frontier of the Danube, where the Goths threaten irruption, while Crispus, on that of the Rhine, watches the Franks.
320	Crispus achieves his first victory, by defeating a vigorous effort of the Franks and Allemanni to enter Gaul. Philogonius, twenty-first bishop of Antioch.
321	Constantine defeats the Goths and Sarmatians at Campona, Margus, Bononia, and other places on the Danube. Nazarius delivers his Orat. Panegyric. at Rome. Alexander, at the instigation of Athanasius, calls the council of Alexandria, by which Arius is condemned for heresy and ejected from the church. Paulinus I. twenty-second bishop of Antioch. An edict of March 8, orders the Arians to be consulted in certain cases, according to the ancient forms; and two others, of March 7, and June 2, prescribe the due observance of the Sunday (Dies Solis), by cessation from all labour, except the culture of the fields, and by religious worship.
322	Constantine repairs the bridge of Trajan, and pursues the repulsed barbarians into the former province of Dacia, and compels them to make peace.
323	Hostilities renewed between Constantine and Licinius. Defeat of the latter near Hadrianople, July 8. He retires to Byzantium, where he is immediately besieged, and passes thence into Asia. Naval victory of Crispus in the Hellespont. Finally overcome in the battle of Chrysopolis, Sept. 28, Licinius resigns his imperial dignity at Nicomedia, and Constantine remains sole emperor. The intercession of Constantia obtains from her brother a promise to spare her husband's life; but he is sent a prisoner to Thessalonica. Constantius appointed Cæsar, Nov. 8. An edict of Constantine issued at Sirmium, May 25, inflicts punishment on all such as may exact from Christians an observance of heathen ceremonies.
324	Constantine violates his promise to his sister, and by his order, Licinius is put to death, æt. 60. Eustathius, bishop of Berræ, writes against the Arians; in the succeeding year he is elected the twenty-third bishop of Antioch. Foundation of Constantinople. Macarius, bishop of Jerusalem.
325	Council of Nice, attended by 318 bishops. Constantine is present at some of the debates; Hosius, bishop of Cordova, presides, and Athanasius, though only secretary to Alexander, distinguishes himself by his vehement opposition to the Arians, who are condemned by the majority. The Nicene creed is sanctioned by Constantine. Arius is banished to Illyricum, his writings publicly burned, and all in whose possession they are found, capitally punished. Eusebius ends his Chronicle, and completes his Hist. Ecc. Death of Lactantius. The combats of gladiators are prohibited by a law, enacted at Berytus, Oct. 1, but they are not suppressed. Marcellus, bishop of Ancyra, advocates Sabellianism.
326	Constantine celebrates at Rome the completion of twenty years of his reign. He orders his son, Crispus, to be put to death, on false accusations, and the younger Licinius. Helena visits Palestine and founds churches there. Sopater of Apamea, phil. ß. On the death of Alexander, Athanasius is elected the nineteenth bishop of Alexandria. Birth of Gregory of Nazianzus. Eusebius publishes his Hist. Ecc.
327	The empress Fausta is said to have been put to death. (This is doubted by Gibbon and Niebuhr.) Drepanum in Bithynia, made a city by Constantine, under the name of Helenopolis, in honour of his mother, Helena. By an edict, dated at Treves, Sept. 27, the writings of Julius Paulus (see A.D. 223) are ordered to be received as sound legal authority.
328	The severe laws against the Arians are relaxed and the exiles are recalled. They hold a synod at Antioch, when Eustathius is deposed, and Paulinus II. appointed twenty-fourth bishop of that diocese. Athanasius favours the monastic system, and patronizes Antony. Hilarion extends it in Palestine.

329	Frumentius preaches Christianity to the Abyssinians; he is recorded in their annals as Abba Salama, or Fremontos. Juvenius, a Spanish presbyter, writes a sacred poem explanatory of Christian doctrines. Enlalius, twenty-fifth bishop of Antioch. Death of Iamblichus; he is succeeded in the chair of philosophy by his pupil Ædesius.
330	Dedication of Constantinople, May 22. Metrodorus, phil. fl. Alexander is the first bishop of the new capital. Euphronius, twenty-sixth bishop of Antioch. Exuperius educates the two sons of Constantine's brother, Dalmatius, who are afterwards raised to the dignity of Cæsars.
331	Julian, the future emperor, son of Julius Constantius, the brother of the emperor Constantine, born at Constantinople. Birth of Hieronymus (St. Jerome).
332	The Sarmatians, unable to resist the Goths, implore the protection of the Romans. The Cæsar Constantine conducts the war successfully, and concludes a peace, for the observance of which, the Gothic chieftain, Araric, gives his son as a hostage. Placilius, the twenty-seventh bishop of Antioch.
333	Constantine gives the title of Cæsar to his youngest son, Constans. Syria and Cilicia are afflicted by pestilence and famine. The interposition of Constantine obtains for the Christians in Persia relief from the persecution caused by the Magi. An edict, dated Constantinople, Sept. 27, confirms the exemption from military service and all public offices, granted by former emperors to medical men and professors of literature.
334	Settlements granted in Thrace and Macedonia to many Sarmatian refugees. A revolt of Calocerus in Cyprus, repressed by Dalmatius, the emperor's nephew. The Arian prelates hold a council at Cæsarea, and vote the deposition of Athanasius, which he disregards.
335	Constantine's nephew, Dalmatius, is created Cæsar, and Hannibalianns, king of Pontus. Five young princes now hold that title, to each of whom the administration of certain provinces is assigned. The synods of Tyre and Jerusalem proceed more violently against Athanasius. He has an interview with Constantine at Constantinople. The sentence of deposition is not enforced, but he is ordered to reside at Treves. Asterius writes in favour of Arianism, which now prevails in the east. Constantine dedicates a church at Jerusalem.
336	First marriage of Constantius to his cousin, the sister of Julian. The synod of Constantinople re-admits Arius into the church, soon after which he dies; but the animosity of the two sects is not abated. Marcellus, bishop of Ancyra, is deposed, and Basilus appointed to take his place. Maximus, the fortieth bishop of Jerusalem.
337	Constantine is baptized by Ensehius, the Arian bishop of Nicomedia, near which city, in the village of Achyrone, he soon afterwards dies, May 22d, æt. 64; his three sons succeed him, and divide the empire among them. Preparations for war with Persia. Eusebius writes his Life of Constantine.
338	The three emperors meet in Pannonia and settle the extent of their respective jurisdictions. The two young princes, Dalmatius and Hannibalianns, are put to death, with all their relations, except Gallus and Julian, the sons of Julius Constantius; Ablavius, the prætorian prefect, and other ministers of the deceased emperor, share the same fate. Sapor invades Mesopotamia and besieges Nisibis. Athanasius returns to Alexandria. Jacobus, bishop of Nisibis, distinguishes himself during the siege of that city.
339	Unsuccessful campaign of Constantius against the Persians. He issues a decree at Antioch, March 31, prohibiting marriage between uncles and nieces as incestuous, and making it a capital crime.
340	Constantine, dissatisfied with his share in the partition of the empire, and attempting to obtain more by force of arms, is defeated and slain near Aquileia. His provinces are added to those of Constans, who reigns over all the west of Europe. Death of Eusebius of Cæsarea, who is succeeded by Acacius. Eusebius of Nicomedia is appointed bishop of Constantinople.
341	The Franks invade Gaul and resist Constans. An imperial edict prohibits pagan sacrifices. Violent earthquakes in Syria. The synod of Antioch assents to an Arian creed, deposes Athanasius, and appoints Gregory the twentieth bishop of

342	Alexandria. Athanasius takes refuge at Rome, where he introduces the monastic system into western Europe, and recommends its adoption. Marcellus, bishop of Ancyra, also repairs to Rome. Audeus propagates the Anthropomorphite heresy. Theodorus, bishop of Heraclea, writes his commentaries. The Franks are compelled to quit Gaul and sue for peace. The destruction of pagan temples forbidden by an edict. A synod held at Rome supports Athanasius. Julius addresses an epistle to the Arians of the East. Death of Eusebius, bishop of Constantinople. A long struggle commences between Paul and Macedonius for the vacant episcopal throne. Popular commotions and court intrigues alternately elevate and depose the two rivals. Photinus, bishop of Sir-mium, revives the Ebionite heresy. Stephen I, the twenty-eighth bishop of Antioch. Death of Tiridates, king of Armenia. The sophist Protercius at the court of Constans in Gaul.
343	Expedition of Constans into Britain. Titianus Prætorian prefect in Gaul. Constans exempts all ecclesiastics and their property from any new imposts.
344	Maximinus, bishop of Treves. Firmicus Maternus Æ. Neo-Cæsarea, in Pontus, nearly destroyed by an earthquake. The growth of hierarchical power, and the decay of intellectual energy, are now in uniform collateral progress. To promote the former, the education of all classes but the ecclesiastical is neglected.
345	Earthquakes in Epirus and Campania. Julian and his brother Gallus are kept six years in the secluded castle of Macellum, near Cæsarea, where they are strictly guarded, and have no other instructor than Mardonius, an aged slave of their mother's family. The Arian bishops assemble at Antioch and publish a confession of their faith.
346	Second ineffectual siege of Nisibis by Sapor. The bishops of the west meet at Milan, and declare their adherence to the Nicene creed, which begins the separation between the eastern and western churches. Libanius teaches rhetoric at Nicomedia. Tryphillius, bishop of Lencothea, in Cyprus, noted for his eloquence. A total eclipse of the sun, June 6th, during which the stars are visible.
347	Constantius prepares to resume hostilities against Sapor. A general council held at Sardica. The Nicene faith is approved by the majority; the deposition of Arian bishops voted, and the restoration of Athanasius and Marcellus to their episcopal honours; the minority secede to Philippopolis and annul their acts; the two bodies mutually excommunicate each other. Themistius makes his first oration before Constantius at Ancyra. Eusebius, bishop of Emesa, writes his Commentaries.
348	Victory of Sapor at Singara. Stephen is ejected at Antioch, and Leontius, the twenty-ninth bishop, succeeds him. Serapion, bishop of Thmus, supports the cause of Athanasius. Cyril is appointed bishop of Jerusalem, and Titus of Bostra. Birth of Prudentius.
349	Popular tumults excited at Alexandria by the sectarian factions, in which the bishop Gregory is killed. Constans threatens to restore Athanasius by force; he is permitted by Constantius to return, and is received in triumph by the Alexandrians. Libanius delivers his panegyric on the two emperors at Nicomedia. Cyril is deposed, and Eutychius made bishop of Jerusalem.
350	Magnentius revolts at Autun. Flight of Constans into Spain, where he is murdered near Helena (Illiberis), Feb. 27, æt. 30; Vetranio, sent to oppose the usurper, himself assumes the purple; Nepotianus is proclaimed at Rome and slain twenty-eight days afterwards; Constantius is called by these events into the west, and Sapor, having failed in his third siege of Nisibis, leaves Mesopotamia, to defend his eastern provinces against the tribes of central Asia. Conference between Constantius and Vetranio; the latter abdicates, and is allowed to retire into private life. Julian is brought to Constantinople, and studies under Nicocles and Eusebius; Constantius, jealous of his rising reputation, sends him to Nicomedia, where he becomes acquainted with Maximus and other philosophers. Jacobus animates the citizens of Nisibis again, during the third siege.

351	Gallus created Caesar, and sent to Antioch to rule the east. Magnentius gives the same title to his brother Decentius; he is defeated by Constantius at Mursa in Pannonia, Sep. 28, and escapes with difficulty into Italy. Julian visits Ephesus, where the conversations of the Ionian philosophers strengthen his prejudices against the religion of his father's murderers, and incline him secretly to favour paganism. A synod at Sirmium condemns the anti-trinitarian doctrines of Photinus. General education is so neglected, that Magnentius and Vetricio can neither read nor write, when they take upon themselves the imperial dignity.
352	Gallus suppresses a revolt in Judæa. Italy declares against Magnentius, who gains a useless victory at Pavia, and retires into Gaul. Libanius declines an invitation to Athens, and visits Antioch. Paul, bishop of Constantinople, banished to the deserts of Taurus, and there put to death; Macedonius seated in his place by force. Violent commotions and profuse bloodshed at Constantinople. Antony, the monk, æt. 100, is called by Athanasius to Alexandria, to assist in the conversion of Arians.
353	Magnentius totally defeated at Mount Selenicus; he and his brother Decentius put an end to their own lives. Marriage of Constantius and Eusebia. Gallus and his wife, Constantina, commit great cruelties in the east. The proconsul, Theophilus, massacred in a tumult at Antioch. Fruitless attempt of the Persians to invade Osrohoene. The Isaurians plunder Pamphylia. Ursicinus commands the Roman armies on the Euphrates, and Ammianus Marcellinus serves under him. Ætius instructs Eudomius in his doctrines. Council of Arles; the western bishops are prevailed on to condemn Athanasius.
354	The Allemanni, under Gundomad and Vadomar, infest Gaul; they are driven back by Constantine, and agree to a treaty of peace. Domitian and Montius, sent to inquire into the conduct of Gallus, are killed by the people at his instigation; he is called to the imperial court; Constantina dies during the journey; he is taken to Pola in Istria and beheaded. Julian is brought to Milan, where he is in great danger, but saved by the empress Eusebia, and permitted to go to Athens. Ursicinus is recalled from the east, and Ammianus Marcellinus accompanies him to Milan. Victorinus, rhetor, and Donatus, gramm. fl. A statue of the former is placed in the forum of Trajan. Birth of Augustine.
355	Julian is held in high esteem at Athens; he visits Ædesius at Pergamus, who instructs him in the new Platonism. Constantius, unable to contend alone with the enemies who on all sides assail the empire, is persuaded by Eusebia to recall Julian, who is appointed Caesar, Nov. 6. Sylvanus assumes the purple at Agrippina (Cologne), and is assassinated twenty-eight days afterwards by Ursicinus. Julian proceeds, Dec. 1, to take the command of the army in Gaul, where Ammianus Marc. serves under him. The council of Milan deposes Athanasius and all bishops who hold his opinions. Liberius is banished from Rome, and Felix II. takes his place. Gregory of Nazianzus and Basil of Cesarea are students at Athens. Death of Ædesius, æt. 80, soon after Julian's visit. Oribasius of Pergamus, med. fl.
356	Julian assembles his army at Rheims, but obtains no decisive success in his first campaign; in the winter he is surrounded at Sens by the Allemanni, who at the end of thirty days retire discomfited; Marcellus, having remained with his forces an idle spectator of the Caesar's danger, is dismissed from his post. Julian maintains a friendly and confidential correspondence with Oribasius. Athanasius expelled by violence from Alexandria, retires among the monks of Thebais, and Gregory of Cappadocia takes possession of his church. Hilary of Poitiers is deposed. Martin, afterwards bishop of Tours, serves in Julian's army.
357	Constantine visits Rome and presents to the city an obelisk from Egypt; he proceeds thence into Rhetia. Julian gains a great victory at Strasburg, crosses the Rhine and invades Germany; Chnodomar, chief of the Allemanni, is captured. Sallust, Julian's able adviser, is recalled. Synod of Sirmium. Hosius subscribes the Arian creed. Contest between Cyril of Jerusalem and Acacius of Cesarea. Death of Antony, the first monk, æt. 105. Julian's "Encomium" on the empress Eusebia.

358	Julian, after passing the winter at Paris, commences his third campaign by defeating the Franks, and pursuing them over the Rhine, where he makes the German tribes fear his prowess. Constantius crosses the Danube, and again concludes a treaty of peace with the Quadi and Sarmatians. Fruitless negotiations with Sapor, who prepares to resume hostile operations. Fearful earthquakes in Asia; Nicomedia nearly destroyed. Liberius deploras the calamity in his "Monodia." Aurelius Victor, fl. Liberius, having conformed to Arianism, is permitted to return to Rome. Eudoxius, thirtieth bishop of Antioch.
359	Julian crosses the Rhine again, and conquers wherever he is opposed. Sapor invades Mesopotamia, and takes Amida. Constantius sends Ursicinus into the east, who is attended by Ammianus Marcellinus. The two consuls are brothers of the empress Eusebia. Synods of Ariminum (Rimini) and Seleucia. Continued strife in the church, secret intrigues, deceptions, artifices, and open violence. On the deposition of Macedonius, Eudoxius is translated to Constantinople, and Anianus succeeds him as thirty-first bishop of Antioch.
360	Constantius sets out to take the command against Sapor, and orders a part of the army in Gaul to join him. The troops, unwilling to obey this order, proclaim Julian emperor. He endeavours to make an amicable arrangement with his cousin. During the negotiations, he crosses the Rhine, defeats the Allemanni, and takes their chief, Vadomar, prisoner. He sends Lupicinus into Britain, to repel the Scots and Picts. Death of his wife, Helena. Sapor takes Singara. Constantius is repulsed by him at Bezabde, and winters at Antioch. Aurelius Victor completes his "De Cæsariibus." The cathedral of St. Sophia is dedicated at Constantinople. Hilary permitted to return into Gaul. Meletius, thirty-second bishop of Antioch.
361	Julian's pacific overtures are rejected. After a short, but successful campaign against the Germans, he conveys his army down the Danube, to prepare for the expected civil war. Constantius, on his march towards Europe, dies at Mopsucene, Nov. 3, æt. 45. Julian is peaceably acknowledged by the whole empire. His letters to the Athenians and Corinthians are written from Pannonia, while the issue of the contest was yet doubtful. A synod, held at Antioch, deposes Meletius; Euzolus is the thirty-third bishop of that city. The second Meletian schism begins. Julian openly professes paganism.
362	Julian proclaims universal toleration, and reinstates the exiled bishops in their sees. George of Cappadocia, having been killed by the people of Alexandria, Athanasius is restored to his station; but his power is found to be so much greater than that of the civil governor, that he is almost immediately banished again. Titus, bishop of Rostra, accused of fomenting discord between Christians and Jews, is expelled from that city. Contest between Paulinus and Meletius, at Antioch, and between Cyril and Irenæus, at Jerusalem. Julian sets out on his Persian expedition and passes the winter at Antioch, where he writes his "Cæsars," "Misopogon," and other works. Ammianus Marcellinus and Eutropius are with the army, and soon after this time begin to compose their histories. Aurelius Victor is proconsul of Pannonia, and honoured by Julian with a bronze statue. Many orations of Libanius delivered at Antioch. Mamertinus, in a public speech, returns thanks for his appointment to the consulship. Himerius, orator, fl. Oribasius dedicates to Julian his "Epitomes of Galens." Eunapius, æt. 16, studies at Athens.
363	An attempt to rebuild the temple of Jerusalem, defeated by the ignition of foul air, which alarms the superstitious fears of the workmen. Julian crosses the Tigris, burns his ships and invades Assyria, where he is slain in battle, June 26, æt. 32. Jovian, elected emperor, makes an ignominious peace, and retreats. He allows equal freedom to all religions and sects. Athanasius returns to Alexandria, and Titus to Bostra. Meletius, restored at Antioch, holds a synod there. Gregory of Nazianzus composes two orations against Julian. Maximus, Priscus, and other philosophers accompany the Roman army. Monody of Libanius on the death of Julian.
364	The orator Themistius advocates religious liberty, in his address on Jovian's consulship. Death of Jovian on his way to Constantinople, at Dadastana, Feb. 17,

Rufus Festus writes his "Breviary." Maximus is fined and tortured. Priscus and the other philosophers are sent to Greece. Theon, math., takes observations at Alexandria, to regulate the calendar.
365	Gaul is harassed by the Allemanni, Britain by the Picts, Scots, and Saxons. Pannonia by the Quadi and Sarmatæ, and Thrace by the Goths. Sapor invades Armenia. Procopius revolts in the East. A violent earthquake, July 20, followed by a sudden rise of the sea on the coasts of Greece, Syria, and Egypt. Libanius composes his funeral oration on Julian.
366	Procopius is overcome by Valens, and beheaded. Jovinus defeats the Allemanni. On the death of Liberius, Damasus is appointed bishop of Rome, and violently opposed by Ursinus. Apollinarius, bishop of Laodicea, writes against Porphyry, and at last deviates into heresy. A Gothic force, marching to assist Procopius, is compelled to surrender. Africa is oppressed by the tyranny of Romanus.
367	Valentinian raises his son Gratian, et. 9, to be a partner in the empire, with the title of Augustus. Valens crosses the Danube with an army, but finds no enemies. Theodosius is sent to provide for the defence of Britain. Perfect religious freedom is allowed by Valentinian. Valens favours the Arians, and is accused of persecuting their opponents. Death of Hilary of Poitiers, et. 80. Eunolus of Cæsarea fl. Death of Proeresius, et. 91; his rival, Diophantus, makes his funeral oration.
368	Rando, chief of the Allemanni, surprises and pinnders Moguntiacum (Mentz), but is soon repulsed by Valentinian, who crosses the Rhine and defeats him at Sollicinium. Valens is inactive on the Danube. Theodosius waits at Rutupie (Richborough) for reinforcements, and on their arrival advances to London. Nice overthrown by an earthquake, Oct. 11.
369	Hermanric, the Gothic chieftain, resigns his power to Athanaric, who concludes a treaty of peace with Valens. Valentinian strengthens the fortifications along the Rhine. Theodosius, having put down a revolt in Britain, and secured the province against invasion, returns to Gaul. Gregory of Nazianzus writes his epitaphs on his brother and sister. Chrysostom is taught by Libanius.
370	The Saxons infest the coast of Gaul, and are driven back to their ships by Severus. Valentinian hires Burgundian mercenaries, who are employed under Theodosius to repel the Allemanni. Arinthæus is sent into Armenia to oppose the Persians. Maximinus, corn-prefect at Rome, excites great commotion by his cruelties. Valentinian issues an edict, to be read in all churches, July 29, prohibiting the arts practised by ecclesiastics to obtain wealth. Gregory Nazian. writes against the pride and luxury of the hierarchy. Damasus, bishop of Rome, is distinguished for his ostentation and arrogance. On the death of Eudoxius, Demophilus, an Arian, and Evagrius, a Nicænan, contend for the bishopric of Constantinople. Basilus, bishop of Cæsarea, Lucifer, bishop of Cagliari. Phrygia and Cappadocia visited by a severe famine. The poet Ausonius is preceptor of Gratian.
371	Sapor is kept in check by Connt Trajan; Vadomar, the former Allemannic chieftain (see A.D. 360), serves under him as a Roman general. Valentinian, attended by Theodosius and Severus, penetrates into Germany as far as Mattiacæ Aquæ (Wishaden). Optatus Milevitanus fl. Martin, bishop of Tours. Rufinus, the diligent translator of Greek writers, leaves Aquileia for the East. Birth of Sueton, afterwards Saint Patrick.
372	Cruelty of Valens at Antioch, under the pretence of suppressing magic. The philosopher Maximus put to death, with Theodorus and many others, and their writings destroyed. Revolt of Firmus in Africa; Theodosius is sent against him. Eunomius writes in defence of his doctrines. Basilus, Gregory Nanz., and Gregory of Nyssa reply to him.
373	Theodosius compels Firmus to seek refuge among the wild Moors. Death of Athanasius, May 2. Peter II., chosen as his successor, is opposed by Lucius, whom Valens nominates. Death of Faustinus, bishop of Iconium; Amphiochius is recommended as his successor, by Basilus. Ulphilas, bishop among the Goths in Mœsia, translates the Scriptures into their language.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

Repetition Dates.
374	The Quadi and Sarmatæ ravage Illyricum, and are repelled by Theodosius the Younger. Para, prince of Armenia, is murdered by order of Valens. Firmus, pursued in the desert, kills himself to avoid being surrendered by the Moors.
375	Valentinian attacks the Quadi in their own lands, and imposes on them terms of peace. After this expedition, he dies in his camp at Bergetio, Nov. 17, æt. 55. He is succeeded in the empire of the West by Gratian, who associates with him his younger brother, Valentinian II. Ambassadors are sent to treat with Sapor. Ambrose, bishop of Milan, and Gregory of Nyssa.
376	The Visigoths, pressed by the Huns, are allowed by Valens to settle on the southern bank of the Danube. The Ostrogoths force a passage for themselves and join their countrymen. Athanasius resigns the command to Frigern. The elder Theodosius, unjustly condemned by Gratian, is beheaded at Carthage. His son retires from the public service, to his estates in Spain. An imperial edict forbids heretics to have churches. Epiphanius, bishop of Salamis, in Cyprus, writes against the Manichæans. Hilarius, bishop of Jerusalem.
377	The Goths, oppressed and famished by the officers of Valens, plunder the Roman provinces, to obtain food and defeat the forces sent to restrain them. Gratian accords to the clergy more extensive immunities. On the death of Peter, his brother, Timothy I., is the twenty-fourth bishop of Alexandria.
378	The Allemanni renew their incursions in Gaul, are defeated by Gratian at Argentaria (Colmar), and compelled to make peace. Valens takes the field against the Goths, is defeated by them at Hadrianople, and falls in battle, Aug. 9, æt. 50; the conquerors are masters of the whole country to the gates of Constantinople. Massacre of the Gothic hostages in Asia. The History of Ammianus Marcellinus and Chronicle of Jerome terminate here. Greek philosophy is decried by the church. Disputes begin about the writings of Origen, which the orthodox condemn as heretical. Meletius, who had been supplanted at Antioch by Dorotheus, is reinstated. Diodorus, bishop of Tarsus, Æ.
379	Theodosius is called from his retirement in Spain, and appointed emperor of the East; by his prudent measures he checks the ravages of the Goths; the Longobardi appear for the first time on the frontiers of the empire. Death of Sapor II. king of Persia. Ausonius is prefect of Gaul, and consul. Congratulatory oration of Themistius addressed to Theodosius. The chronicles of Idatius and Marcellinus begin here. Gregory Naz. preaches the Nicene faith at Constantinople; he is deceived by the cynic philosopher, Maximus, who attempts to make himself bishop there.
380	Theodosius, taken ill at Thessalonica, is baptized by Acholius, bishop of the place; he proceeds, after this, against the Goths, whom he reduces to obedience; he opposes the Arians: banishes Demophilus, bishop of CP., and appoints Gregory in his place. Death of Basilins of Cæsarea. A council held at Antioch to depose all Arian bishops, and another at Cæsar-Augusta (Sarragossa) to condemn the doctrines of Priscillian, against whom and his adherents Gratian pronounces a sentence of banishment. Pappus, geog. Æ.
381	Athanasius, former chieftain of the Goths, visits Theodosius at CP. Jan. 11, and dies there on the 25th. General Council of CP. a scene of turbulence and ambitious strife. Gregory Naz. disgusted by the conduct of his brethren, and unwilling to co-operate in their projects, resigns his dignity and retires into Cappadocia; Nectarius is appointed in his place. Death of Meletius, who is succeeded by Flavianus, thirty-sixth bishop of Antioch. Cyril for the fourth time is reinstated at Jerusalem. Gelasius succeeds Euzolus at Cæsarea. A synod held at Aquileia by Ambrose of Milan against Patadius and Secundianus Chrysostom ordained deacon at Antioch.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
407	The Gothic tribes disperse themselves unresisted over Gaul. The legions in Britain choose Marcus and then Gratian for emperor. These are both killed, and Constantine appointed, who is acknowledged in Britain and in those parts of Gaul which are not occupied by the invaders from Germany. Chrysostom, unbroken by three years of exile, is ordered by his persecutors to be removed to Pityus; he dies on the journey, near Comana, Sept. 14, æt. 53. Olympiodorus commences his History. Idatius, in his youth, notices events afterwards recorded in his Chronicle. Death of Dorotheus, the deposed Arian bishop of Antioch (see A.D. 378), and of the Novatian, Sisinnius. Hypatia and her husband, Isidorus, teach philosophy at Alexandria.
408	Death of Arcadius, May 1, æt. 31. Accession of his son, Theodosius II., æt. 7, in whose name Anthemius administers the affairs of the East, with great ability. On the death of Maria, Honorius is married to her sister, Thermantia, but soon afterwards divorced. Alaric having recruited his forces, Stilicho negotiates amicably with him, is accused of treason and put to death, at Ravenna, through the intrigues of Olympius. His son, Eucherius, also is slain. After this event, Alaric penetrates into Italy, and besieges Rome. Constantine sends his son, Constans, to reduce Spain, who overcomes there the uncles of Honorius. Claudian is dismissed from his offices, and dies soon afterwards.
409	Alaric receives a large ransom from the citizens of Rome, and withdraws into Tuscany. Deceived in his negotiations with Honorius, he again lays siege to Rome, and takes possession of Ostia. The city is once more spared, on condition of accepting Attalus as emperor. Gerontius revolts in Spain, and proclaims Maximus; he advances into Gaul to attack Constantine. The passes of the Pyrenees being left unguarded, the Vandals, Suevi, and Alani, enter Spain; they first acknowledge Maximus, then give him up to the Romans, and establish kingdoms for themselves. Honorius, unable to protect Britain and Armorica, recognizes their independence. Pelagius teaches; Celestius is his disciple.
410	Alaric deposes Attalus. Unable to make any impression on Ravenna, he, after a third siege, takes Rome, Aug. 24, plunders it for five days, and on the 29th, marches for the south of Italy. Before the end of the year he dies, near Consentia, and is succeeded by Adolphus. Paulinus, bishop of Nola. Synesius unwillingly accepts the same dignity at Ptolemais, in the Pentapolis, a district of Cyrene. Placidia, sister of Honorius, is carried from Rome, a captive, by the Goths. Zosimus ends his History.
411	Gerontius makes Constans prisoner, and kills him; he besieges Constantine in Arles, where he is put to flight by Constantius, general of Honorius, and after being deserted by his soldiers, he stabs himself. Constantine surrenders to Constantius, is sent to Ravenna, and beheaded. Jovinus revolts at Mentz. Andronicus excommunicated by Synesius, for his oppressive government in Africa; he is recalled and punished. Conference between Catholics and Donatists at Carthage, after which more severe laws are enacted against the latter. Augustin begins to write "De Civitate Dei."
412	Jovinus makes his brother Sebastian his colleague. Adolphus leaves Italy, and fixes himself in the south of Gaul. Cyril succeeds Theophilus, as bishop of Alexandria. Jerome's Elegy on Marcella. Olympiodorus is sent ambassador to the Huns. Annianus and Panodorus, chronog. fl.
413	Heraclian rebels in Africa, is conquered and slain. Adolphus overcomes Jovinus and Sebastian, and sends their heads to Honorius. Julian, bishop of Capua, embraces and writes in defence of the doctrines of Pelagius. Alexander, thirty-eighth bishop of Antioch.
414	Marriage of Adolphus and Placidia. He founds the kingdom of the Goths in Spain. Pulcheria is declared Augusta, and governs the East, in the name of her brother, Theodosius.
415	Adolphus assassinated at Barcelona, by Sigeric, who usurps the throne, but is killed seven days afterwards, and Wallia chosen king by the Goths. Brutal murder of Hypatia at Alexandria; connivance of Cyril. The doctrines of Pelagius cause great excitement; they are discussed in the synods of Jerusalem and Diospolis. Augustin, Jerome, and Orosius, write against them. Death of Macrobius. The Hist. Ecc. of Sozomen concludes.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
416	Treaty between Wallia and Honorius. Placidia is restored to her brother, and Attalus sent prisoner to Ravenna; he is banished to Lipari. The "Itinerarium" of Rutilius Numantianus written. Pelagius visits Palestine; he is condemned by the synods of Carthage and Milevum. Praxilius, bishop of Jerusalem.
417	Marriage of Constantius and Placidia. Triumph of Honorius at Rome. Wallia attacks the Aiani and Suevi, in Spain. Orosius ends his History.
418	Wallia relinquishes part of his conquests in Spain to Honorius, and receives the province of Aquitaine in Gaul. Honorius attempts to convene an annual assembly of the seven provinces in Gani. Repeated synods at Carthage, against Pelagius and Celestius; their followers are expelled from Rome. The sun eclipsed, July 19.
419	Death of Wallia. Theodoric I. succeeds as king of the Visigoths. The Vandals prevail over the Aiani and Suevi, in Spain. Birth of Valentinian III. son of Constantius and Placidia. Death of Chrysanthus, the Novatian.
420	The persecution of Christians in Persia leads to a war between the new king, Varanes, and the Eastern empire; Ardaburius commands the Roman army. Asterius drives the Vandals out of Galicia, into the south of Spain. Treves pillaged by the Franks. The Burgundians rule peacefully and mildly in their part of Gaul. Palladius writes his "Historia Lausiaca." Death of Jerome, Sept. 30, æt. 90. Theodotus, thirty-ninth bishop of Antioch.
421	Constantius, joint emperor with Honorius, dies seven months afterwards. Marriage of Theodosius II. to Athenais, daughter of the philosopher Leontius; she takes the name of Eudoxia at her baptism. Ardaburius defeats the Persian general, Narses.
422	Peace concluded with Persia. Castinus and Bonifacius quarrel in Spain; the latter passes into Africa; the former is defeated by the Vandals, who become a formidable power. Incursions of the Huns in Thrace.
423	Honorius dismisses Placidia and her two children, who take refuge at Constantinople. He dies Aug. 15, æt. 39. His secretary, John Primmerius, usurps the throne, and is supported by Castinus and Aetius. Eudoxia, after giving birth to a daughter, is proclaimed Augusta. Theodoret, bishop of Cyrrhus.
424	Ardaburius and his son, Aspar, are sent by Theodosius with an army against the western usurper. Aetius engages a large body of Huns to support him.
425	Before the arrival of Aetius with his auxiliaries, Aspar takes Ravenna; John is made prisoner and beheaded. The young Valentinian is proclaimed Emperor, and his mother Regent. Aetius enters into their service, and the Huns return to their cantonments. The empress Eudoxia cultivates literature, writes poetical paraphrases of Scripture, and other works of no great merit; but at her instigation, Theodosius issues edicts, Feb. 27, for the encouragement of learning, and bestows dignities and rewards on professors. Olympiodorus and Philostorgius conclude their Histories. Juvenalis, bishop of Jerusalem. A synod at Carthage forbids appeals to the bishop of Rome. The revenues of the church are become very large.
426	Aries, besieged by Theodoric, is relieved by Aetius. The Vandals occupy the south of Spain and the Balearic islands. Sisinnius is appointed bishop of Constantinople, on the death of Atticus, in preference to Philippus of Side, his rival. Augustin, æt. 72, names Eradius as his coadjutor and successor.
427	Rivalry of Bonifacius and Aetius. The former, recalled from Africa, is secretly induced by the latter to remain there and defy the imperial orders. He defeats the commanders sent to compel him to obedience. Pannonia, after having been fifty years occupied by the Huns, is recovered by the generals of Theodosius. Idatius, bishop of Lemica, or Gallicia.
428	Clodion, king of the Franks, is defeated by Aetius, and driven out of the territories on which he had encroached. Genseric, king of the Vandals, succeeds Gunderic. He is invited by Bonifacius into Africa. Nestorius, bishop of Constantinople, founds the sect of Nestorians. Augustin completes his work "De Civitate Dei." (See a. 411.)

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
429	The Vandals land in Africa, and are joined by some wild Moors. The Donatists revenge themselves on their persecutors, by assisting the invaders. John I., fortieth bishop of Antioch. Agricola, son of Severian, preaches Pelagianism in Britain. Caelestin sends Germanus of Antislodorus (Anxerre) to controvert him. Marius Mercator writes against the Pelagians. Death of Theodorus of Mopsuesta. Theodoret's History ends.
430	The duplicity of Aetius is made known to Bonifacius; he returns to his allegiance, and makes unavailing efforts to dislodge the Vandals from Africa. They besiege Hippo Regius. Augustin dies there, in the third month of the siege, Aug. 28. æt. 76. Some German bands penetrate into Gaul, as far as Arles, where they are repulsed by Aetius. Cyril plots the expulsion of Nestorius from CP. Synods of Alexandria and Rome.
431	Bonifacius, reinforced by troops from CP. under Aspar, is defeated by the Vandals, and leaves Africa. Hippo Regius falls. Idatius is sent to implore the assistance of Aetius, against the Suevi in Gallicia. Turbulent assemblage of bishops at Ephesus, called the third General Council. Nestorius, deposed by the violence of Cyril, retires into a monastery at Antioch. Maximianus is appointed in his place. Death of Pintarchus, a noted teacher at Athens, and of Paulinus, bishop of Nola, June 22. Palladius sent, as bishop, to Scotland.
432	Bonifacius is favourably received at Ravenna. Aetius brings his army from Gani to attack him. Bonifacius conquers; but receives a wound, of which he dies in a few days. Aetius takes refuge among the Huns, and protected by them regains his power. Zosimus composes his History.
433	Peace between the Gallicians and Hermanric, king of the Suevi. Death of Rugilas, chief of the Huns. His nephews, Attila and Bleda, succeed to his power, and dictate terms of peace to the Eastern empire. A destructive fire rages three days in CP. Patricius (St. Patrick) preaches in Ireland. Joannes Cassianus founds monasteries at Marseilles, and teaches Semi-pelagianism.
434	Hlonoria, sister of Valentinian, sent in disgrace from Ravenna, to do penance at CP. Reconciliation between Cyril and John of Antioch, the friend of Nestorius. Procius, bishop of CP. Law of Theodosius, Dec. 15, in favour of church property. Vincent of Lerins, a Semi-pelagian, writes against other heretics.
435	The greater part of Africa assigned to Genseric by a treaty of peace. The city of Carthage not yet occupied by him. The Burgundians are defeated by Aetius; they make peace with him, and are then invaded by the Huns. Sebastian, son-in-law of Bonifacius, is driven into exile by Aetius. Theodosius, who at first favoured Nestorius, is moved by the influence of Pulcheria and the arts of Cyril, to banish him to the Oasis in the desert of Africa, and to issue a violent edict against his followers. Isidore of Pelusium censures the conduct of Cyril.
436	Narbonne, besieged by the Visigoths, is relieved by Littorius. The Burgundians repeat their attacks, and are repulsed by Aetius.
437	An auxiliary force of Huns is employed by Aetius in various conflicts with the Visigoths and Burgundians. Valentinian at CP., marries Eudoxia, daughter of Theodosius. Genseric appoints Arian bishops in Africa, and retaliates on the Catholics their own laws, which their writers call a persecution. Proclus, phil. at Athens, composes commentaries on Plato, and many works on astronomy, philology, &c.
438	The Theodosian Code published. The Visigoths continue to encroach on Southern Gaul, and the coasts are infested by pirates from the north. Hermanric, king of the Suevi, in Spain, resigns his power to his son Rechil. Valentinian brings his bride to Ravenna. Ammonius, a Greek poet, celebrates the war of Gainas (see A.D. 400). The remains of Chrysostom are brought from Comana, and honourably deposited in CP. Death of Paulus, the Novatian bishop. Pilgrimage of the Empress Eudoxia to Jerusalem. Paulinus, master of the offices in the East.
439	Battle of Thoulouse. The Romans and Huns defeated by the Visigoths, and Littorius slain. A treaty of peace ensues. Carthage taken by Genseric, Oct. 19. Sozomen dedicates his Hist. Ecc. to Theodosius; the preface not written till four years later. Socrates concludes his Hist. Ecc. Merida taken by Rechil. Hilary, bishop of Arles, d.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
440	Genseric invades Sicily. The exiles and fugitives from Carthage are kindly relieved by Theodoret, bishop of Cyrrhus; but the greater part of them, being Arians and other heretics, are refused hospitality at Rome, by the order of Leo, the newly-elected bishop. Salvianus of Marseilles in his writings exposes the avarice of the priesthood, and degeneracy of the age. Death of Varanes V. of Persia. Sebastian seeks an asylum among the Vandals in Africa.
441	Theodosius sends a fleet and army against the Vandals without success. An invasion of the Persians checked by Aspar and Anatolius. The Huns take Singidunum (Belgrade) and Naissus. Death of Ilernaric. Cassiodorus (proavus) defends Sicily against Genseric.
442	The forces sent against the Vandals are recalled to defend Thrace from the Huns. Valentinian, by a treaty of peace, cedes Africa to Genseric. A comet is seen. Domnus II., forty-first bishop of Antioch.
443	Merochaudes, soldier and poet, succeeds his father-in-law, Asturius, in the command of the Roman troops in Spain. He writes a panegyric on Aetius, and other poems (late discovered by Niebuhr in the monastery of St. Gall). Valentinian issues an edict, Dec. 23, for observing and preparing correct copies of the Theodosian code. Leo detects the Manicheans in Rome, and burns their books.
444	Retirement of Eudoxia to Jerusalem. Paulinus beheaded. Cyrus, dismissed from his office of praetorian prefect, becomes bishop of Cotyæmus, in Phrygia. Sebastian takes refuge among the Visigoths. Attila murders Bleda, and rules alone over the Huns. Death of Cyril; he is succeeded at Alexandria by Dioscorus.
445	Circus-factions at CP. slaughter each other. The Vandals, with their fleet, ravage the coast of Galicia. Sebastian, driven from Barcelona, joins them. Victor begins his Chronicle.
446	The Romans, under Vitus, defeated by the Suevi in Spain. CP. devastated by fire, pestilence, and famine. The Britons apply in vain to Aetius, in his third consulship, for assistance against the Scots and Picts. Leo assumes a tone of high authority, and asserts the supremacy of the Roman pontiff over all other bishops.
447	Theodosius suspends the ravages of the Huns, by a most humiliating treaty of peace. The miseries of CP. aggravated by an earthquake, which throws down a part of the wall and towers. Eutyches publishes his heresy. Flavianus, bishop of CP. The sun eclipsed, Dec. 24.
448	Embassies between Theodosius and Attila. Priscus accompanies Maximin on one of these, and relates the proceedings in his History. Richiarus, the young king of the Spanish Suevi, marries the daughter of Theodoric; on his return, he plunders Saragossa and Lerida. Synod of CP. against Eutyches. The Vandal fleets assail Sicily and the coast of Italy.
449	Plot to murder Attila, atoned for by a heavy tribute. The Saxons assist the Britons to repel the Scots and Picts. Eutyches formally condemned by a council at CP. The "Rohber-Synod" held at Ephesus. Violent measures of Dioscorus. Domnus II. is set aside, and replaced by Maximus II., forty-second bishop of Antioch. Flavian of CP. is deposed and banished. Anatolius succeeds him. Theodoret of Cyrrhus, Eusebius of Dorylæum, and other bishops are also deposed. Death of Hilary, bishop of Arles. A synod at Rome reverses the acts at Ephesus.
450	Death of Theodosius, July 28, æt. 50. By a nominal marriage, his sister Pulcheria raises Marcian to the throne. Attila demands the princess Honoria in marriage (see A.D. 434), and determines to support the claim made by a brother of Meroveus to the throne of the Franks. Cassiodorus (avus) is sent ambassador to him. Death of the Empress Placidia. Eucherius, bishop of Lyons.
451	Attila invades Gaul, commits great havoc, and besieges Orleans. Aetius prepares to oppose him, and forms an alliance with the Visigoths. Battle of Châlons (sur Marne); Attila defeated. Theodoric slain. Attila retires into Pannonia. Marcian calls the council of Chalcedon, at which the acts of the "Rohber-Synod" are annulled. Dioscorus is deposed and banished. Theodoret of Cyrrhus, Eusebius of Dorylæum, and other bishops are restored.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
452	Having recruited his army, Attila advances into Italy. Siege and destruction of Aquileia. Its inhabitants take refuge in the marshes on the shore of the Adriatic, and the foundation of Venice is (erroneously) ascribed to them. Leo, bishop of Rome, and two other ambassadors, by paying a large sum of money, induce Attila to withdraw beyond the Danube. Theodoric II. obtains the Visigothic throne by murdering his brother Thorismund. Proterius succeeds Dioscorus as bishop of Alexandria. Priscus visits Egypt and the Thebais.
453	Death of Pulcheria. Death of Attila. His son, Ellac, who succeeds him, falls in battle against the Ostrogoths; Dengazic takes the command of the shattered forces of the Huns, and leads them farther northward. Hyperechius of Alexandria writes on grammar and orthography. Stobæus fl.
454	Leo's influence over Valentinian employed to augment the power of the church, not to correct the emperor's bad passions. Aetius murdered, and his friends slaughtered. The wife of the senator, Maximus, violently dishonoured. The kingdom of Kent founded by Hengist.
455	Maximus revenges the disgrace of his wife by assassinating Valentinian, March 16, æt. 36, and usurps the throne. At the end of three months he is killed by the people, and Avitus, through the support of the Visigoths, is proclaimed emperor. Rome is taken and plundered by the Vandals. Many captives are carried away to Carthage, where the hishop Deogratias relieves their distress. Birth of Theodoric, son of Theodimir, the Ostrogoth. Battle of Aylesford; Horsa slain. Prosper of Aquitaine concludes his Chronicle.
456	Avitus sends Count Fronto to negotiate with the Spanish Suevi. Theodoric attacks them. Defeat and death of Rechiarius. Ricimer destroys a Vandal fleet near Corsica. He declares against Avitus, who abdicates, and dies soon afterwards. Some Heruli alarm the northern coast of Spain. Sidonius Apollinarius, son-in-law of Avitus, celebrates his consulsbip. Basilius, forty-third bishop of Antioch.
457	Majorian placed on the throne of the West by Ricimer and the senate. Death of Marcian, æt. 65. Leo, the Thracian, made emperor of the East, by the influence of Aspar. Candidus Isaurus begins his History (which is now lost), and Victorius Aquitanus, his Canon Paschalis. Victory of Hengist over the Britons, at Crayford. Timotheus II. bishop of Alexandria. Death of Theodoret.
458	The Vandals land in Italy, and are defeated. Majorian prepares a fleet to attack them in Africa. He enacts many salutary laws, for improving the condition of the people and preserving public edifices. Antioch suffers by an earthquake. Sidonius Apoll. addresses his panegyric to Majorian. Gennadius, hishop of CP., Anastasius of Jerusalem, and Acacius, forty-fourth bishop of Antioch. Death of Yezdejerd II. of Persia.
459	Treaty of peace between Majorian and Theodoric. The war against the Suevi continues in Spain. Martyrius, forty-fifth bishop of Antioch.
460	Genseric destroys Majorian's fleet in the harbour of Carthage. Peace is concluded between them. Death of Mairda. His son, Frumarius, invades Gallicia. Idatius, made prisoner, is released after three months' captivity. Timotheus III., bishop of Alexandria. Death of Eudoxia, Oct. 30, æt. 67.
461	Majorian is assassinated, Aug. 7, by Ricimer, who places Severus ostensibly on the throne, but exercises the imperial power himself. His authority is resisted by Marcellinus in Dalmatia, and Ægidius in Gaul.
462	Genseric restores Eudoxia, the widow of Valentinian III., who had been carried away by him from Rome, A.D. 455, on condition, that a large dowry be given with her daughter Eudocia, to his son Hunneric; her other daughter, Placidia, is married to the senator, Olybrius, of the Anician family. The Vandals ravage the coasts of Italy and Sicily, and make themselves masters of Sardinia. Marcellinus equips a fleet in Dalmatia. The Franks banish Childeric, and make Ægidius for a short time their king. Narbonne taken by the Visigoths.
463	Ægidius defeats the Visigoths, in a battle near Orleans, in which Frederic, the brother of Theodoric, falls. Theodoric, the Ostrogoth, is sent as an hostage to Constantinople, where he remains ten years. Moses of Chorene writes his Armenian History. Prosper of Aquitaine still fl.

464	Death of Ægidius. His son, Syagrius, inherits Soissons and a small territory around. Death of Frumarius. His brother, Remismund, unites the Spanish Sævi under his command. The Visigoths occupy the greater part of Gaul, Paris taken by Childeric. Marcellinus arrives in Sicily from Dalmatia, and expels the Vandals. The sun eclipsed, July 20.
465	Death of Severus. Ricimer governs without the title of emperor. A destructive fire at Constantinople, rages six days. Victory of Hengist over the Britons at Wippidsæst.
466	The emperor Leo prepares an expedition against the Vandals in Africa. Theodoric II. is murdered by his brother Euric, who succeeds him as king of the Visigoths, and conquers a large part of Spain.
467	Ricimer solicits Leo to name an emperor of the West. Anthemius is appointed, and his daughter married to Ricimer. His intended religious toleration is prevented by Hilary. Earthquakes at Ravenna and Coimbra. The Vandals ravage the Peloponnesus.
468	The two empires unite to attack Genserich. Heracius leads a large army from Egypt; Basiliscus commands the sea and land forces that proceed from CP. Marcellinus, who is reconciled to the emperors, assists with a numerous fleet from Dalmatia and Sicily. This formidable expedition totally fails. Misconduct of Basiliscus. Marcellinus assassinated. Panegyric of Anthemius by Sidonius Apollinaris. The Chronicle of Idatius ends. Death of pope Hilary.
469	Enric completes the conquest of Spain. The Suevi remain in Galicia, but subject to the Visigoths. Dengizic invades the Danubian provinces, where he is defeated and slain; the Huns cease to be a distinct power. Arvandus, prefect of Gaul, is banished for extortion and treachery. Sidonius Apollinaris becomes bishop of Clermont.
470	Arles and Marseilles taken by Euric. He defeats Riethamar, who had been hired by Anthemius to bring, for the defence of Gaul, 12,000 Bretons from Armorica, generally mistaken for an auxiliary force, from the island of Britain. The progress of Euric is checked in Auvergne by Ecdicius, son of the late emperor Avitus.
471	Aspar and his sons put to death by Leo. Ricimer quarrels with Anthemius, and withdraws to Milan. Epiphanius, bishop of Ticinum (Pavia), attempts to mediate between them. Acacius, bishop of CP., and Julianus forty-sixth of Antioch. Death of Orosius.
472	Walimir, advancing to support Anthemius with a body of Ostrogoths, is defeated and slain by Ricimer, who takes and plunders Rome. Anthemius is killed, July 11th, and the empire transferred to Olybrinus, who dies Oct. 23. Death of Ricimer, Aug. 20. A great eruption of Vesuvius, Nov. 6; the ashes are said to have fallen in CP.
473	Gundibald, Ricimer's nephew, proclaims Glycerius emperor of the West. Leo associates his grandson, Leo the younger, with him in the Eastern empire. Theodoric, the Ostrogoth, is restored to his nation, but after an education of ten years at CP. is unable to read or write. His uncle, Widimir, invades Italy, and is paid by Glycerius to retire; he joins the Visigoths in Gaul. Maichus begins his History, of which only fragments remain.
474	Leo appoints Julius Nepos, nephew of Marcellinus, to be emperor of the West. Glycerius resigns, and is made bishop of Salona. Epiphanius negotiates between Nepos and Enric. Auvergne ceded to the Visigoths; Ecdicius withdraws. Death of Leo, Feb. 3. His grandson dies in Nov., and Zeno becomes emperor of the East. Nestorianus concides his Chronology.
475	Orestes transfers the Western empire to his son, Romulus (called in derision Augustinus), and deposes Nepos, who retires into Dalmatia. Verina, widow of Leo, incites her brother Basiliscus to rebel. Flight of Zeno and his wife Ariadne into Isauria. Gelasius of Cyzicus, bishop of Cæsarea, writes his History of the Council of Nice.
476	Odoacer, with a promiscuous army, called Heruli, overthrows the Western empire, and makes himself king of Italy. Orestes defeated and slain at Piacentia. Romulus is sent into Campania and pensioned. Zeno is besieged in Isauria by troops from CP. under Illus and Trachondas. Peter the Fuller, forty-seventh bishop of Antioch.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
477	The army that was besieging Zeno, conducts him back to CP., and restores him to the throne. Basiliscus, banished to Cappadocia, dies there. Death of Genserich. Peter causes discord at Antioch, and is deposed. John II. forty-eighth bishop.
478	Theodoric, the Ostrogoth, is employed by Zeno against another body of Goths, under Theodoric, son of Triarius. When the two armies meet, they make peace and coalesce. Odoacer relinquishes to Euric all beyond the Alps, preserves the Roman laws in Italy, and governs with prudence and humanity. Martyrius, bishop of Jerusalem, and Stephen II. forty-ninth bishop of Antioch.
479	Marcian, son of Anthemius, and son-in-law of Leo, is encouraged by Verina to revolt against Zeno. Being defeated and made prisoner, he is allowed to retire into a monastery. Theodoric, son of Triarius, ravages the provinces to the gates of CP. The Ostrogoths take Epidamnus, and besiege Thessalonica, but are defeated by Sabinianus. Eustathius Syrus, hist. fl.
480	Julius Nepos, the ex-emperor, assassinated in Dalmatia. An earthquake of forty days' continuance, does great injury at CP. Stephen III. fiftieth bishop of Antioch.
481	Death of Theodoric, son of Triarius. All the Ostrogothic forces unite, under Theodoric, son of Theodemir. Odoacer conquers Dalmatia. Death of Childeric, king of the Franks. Accession of Clovis. Calandio, fifty-first bishop of Antioch.
482	Theodoric plunders Macedon and Thessaly. Death of Firoze, king of Persia. John Talais, bishop of Alexandria, is deposed immediately after his election by Zeno, who appoints Peter Mongus in his place, and endeavours, by his Henoticon, to unite all sects.
483	Zeno invites Theodoric to CP. and confers dignities on him, with many rich gifts. Hunneric issues his summons to the bishops of Africa, to meet in the following year at Carthage.
484	Verina instigates Leontius to rebel at Tarsus. Illus, sent against him, assumes the purple himself. Eugenius, bishop of Carthage, defends the Athanasian faith, at the meeting of bishops there. After the conference, Hunneric issues his edict in favour of Arianism, and punishes its opponents. The sun eclipsed April 10. Felix of Rome, and Acacius of CP. excommunicate each other.
485	Death of Euric; his son Alaric, a minor, succeeds. Longinus, brother of Zeno, is sent to suppress the rebellion of Illus, who defeats him and takes him prisoner. Peter the Fuller restored to the bishopric of Antioch. Death of Proclus (see A.D. 437). Marinus writes his Life.
486	Battle of Soissons. Clovis conquers the territories of Syngrius, who takes refuge among the Visigoths, by whom he is slain. Death of Palasch, king of Persia. Sabinus, bishop of Jerusalem.
487	Odoacer defeats the Rugi in Noricum, and takes their chieftain, Feva, prisoner. Theodoric, threatening to attack CP., is diverted to the conquest of Italy.
488	Leontius and Illus captured and put to death. March of Theodoric towards Italy. Death of Hengist. Palladius, fifty-second bishop of Antioch. Victor Vitensis writes his History of the Vandal persecution in Africa.
489	Theodoric defeats Odoacer at Aquileia, Aug. 28, and at Verona, Sept. 27, and takes Milan. Death of Acacius, bishop of CP. Fravitta, who succeeds him, dies in three months, and Ephremius is appointed.
490	Odoacer, defeated again, Aug. 11, on the banks of the Adda, retires into Ravenna. Zeno exercises great cruelties on those who are suspected of having favoured the late rebellion. Ælia having conquered Sussex, makes it a kingdom. Athanasius II. bishop of Alexandria. Cassiodorus, father of the senator, is Comes Sacrarum to Odoacer.
491	Death of Zeno, April 9, æt. 65. His widow, Ariadne, marries the Silentary, Anastasius, and makes him emperor. Odoacer sallies from Ravenna, and sustains another defeat. Tumults at CP.; the Hippodrome burnt. Andreasceaster taken by Ælia. Malchus and Candidus Syrus conclude their histories.
492	Rebellion of Zeno's brother, Longinus, in Isauria. Anastasius accords liberty of conscience, and remits oppressive taxes.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
493	Surrender and death of Odoacer. Theodoric is master of all Italy, and establishes the kingdom of the Ostrogoths. The statues of Anastasius thrown down at CP. Johannes Gibbus, or Scytha, conducts the war successfully against Longinus. Marriage of Clovis to Clotilda, niece of Gundibald, king of the Burgundians. Gennadius of Marseilles, script. ecc. fl.
494	The cities of Laodicea, Hierapolis, and Tripolis, are overthrown by an earthquake. Pope Gelasius asserts his divine right, as bishop of Rome, to universal supremacy. Timotheus of Gaza writes on Natural History. The distinction made by Gelasius, between the canonical and the apocryphal books of the Scriptures. Elias, bishop of Jerusalem.
495	Longinus protracts his rebellion in Isauria. Theudegotha, a natural daughter of Theodoric, is contracted in marriage to Alaric, the young king of the Visigoths, and her sister, Ostrogotha, to Sigismund, son of the Burgundian king. Cerdic and his son, Cyric, arrive with five ships, and land at Cerdice-ore (afterwards Cernemuth), now Charmonth, in Dorsetshire. Synods at Seleucia and other places, favour the marriages of priests.
496	Victory of Clovis over the Allemanni, at Tolbiac (Zulpich), followed by his conversion to Christianity and his baptism, by Remigius, bishop of Rheims. Deposition and banishment of Euphemius, bishop of CP.: Macedonius II. succeeds him. Avitus, bishop of Vienne, noted for his eloquent homilies, letters, and poems. John II. bishop of Alexandria. Theodoric marries Audefleda, sister of Clovis.
497	The war in Isauria is terminated by the capture and death of Athenodorus, the chief supporter of Longinus. Cabades expelled from the sovereignty of Persia, by Zamasphes, son of Firoze. Cassiodorus, æt. 18, secretary to Theodoric. The letter to Clovis (Variarum II. 41) written. The Arabs (Saracens) invade Syria, and are repulsed by Eugenius. Thorismund banishes many Athanasian bishops from Africa to Sardinia. Fulgentius Ruspensis is eminent among them.
498	Longinus made prisoner and killed. Tumults at CP. Violent contest between Symmachus and Laurentina, for the episcopal throne at Rome, decided by Theodoric in favour of the former. Flavianus II. fifty-third bishop of Antioch. Theodoric sends an expert harper to Clovis at his request. (Cassiod. Var. II. 39, 40.)
499	The Bulgarians invade Thrace, and defeat the forces sent against them; three counts of the empire are slain in battle. A violent earthquake in Pontus. Nestorianism prevails among the Christians of Persia and the adjacent provinces.
500	Theodoric visits Rome; he issues edicts to stop the demolition of public edifices and works of art, and appoints an officer, with funds to restore and preserve them. Clovis defeats the Burgundians, near Dijon, through the treachery of Godegesil, who is afterwards taken and killed by his brother, Gundibald. Basiliscus begins his controversial writings.
501	Strife of the Circus-factions at CP., 3000 slaughtered. Gundibald holds a conference of bishops at Lyons, without result. The Burgundian Code (Loy Gombette) is framed and issued by him. Cabades restored in Persia by the Nephthalites or White Huns. Port and his sons, Bleda and Mægias, bring a band of Saxons in two ships, and land at Portsmouth.
502	Thrace again ravaged by the Bulgarians, and Syria and Palestine by the Saracens. Cabades invades Mesopotamia, and takes Amida, which begins the Persian war. The aqueduct of Ravenna constructed by Theodoric.
503	Areobindus, son of Dsgalaiphna, is sent against the Persians, with Patricius, Hypatius, and Vitalianus. Their campaign is unsuccessful. A council held at Rome, declares the pope amenable to no human authority. Death of Eustathius. Theodoric sends to Gundibald a sun-dial and water-clock, made by Boethius. (Cassiod. Var. I. 45, 46.)
504	Tranquillity and prosperity of Italy, under the government of Theodoric. Boethius and Cassiodorus are his chief ministers. Ceier conducts another army against Cabades, and lays siege to Amida. Theodoric defeats the Bulgarians, and retakes Sirnium. Tutum, a Goth of the Amali race, is distinguished in this war.
505	Amida is recovered, and peace restored between the Eastern empire and Persia.

	The Gepidae occupy part of the former possessions of the Huns, north of the Danube. Mundo collects a force of Gothic stragglers, and is aided by Theodoric against Sabinianus, the general sent by Anastasius to oppose him. Death of Eugenius, bishop of Carthage. Julian resigns his episcopal office at Bostra.
506	Alaric legislates for his people, and employs Anianus to adapt the Theodosian code to his purpose. Preparations for war between him and Clovis. Theodoric mediates by friendly letters. See Cassiod. Var. III. 1-4. Council of Agde held under the sanction of Alaric, to check the growth of monachism and regulate the discipline of the clergy. John III. bishop of Alexandria. Anastasius remits all taxes to Amida, for seven years. Ælia king of Sussex, the first Bretwada, or wleider (chief) of Britain.
507	Battle of Vouglé, near Poitiers. Alaric defeated and slain, æt. 23, by Clovis, who conquers a great part of Aquitaine. Amalarich, the infant son of Alaric, and Giselich, his natural son, are proclaimed joint kings of the Visigoths, by Theodoric, who preserves for them all Spain and part of Gaul. He appoints Thiodas their guardian. Anastasius builds the "long wall," for the protection of CP., and fortifies Dara in Mesopotamia. Bloody encounters of the Circus-factions at CP. and Antioch.
508	Hibba, Theodoric's general, defeats Clovis near Arles. Romans and Rasticus, with a fleet and army from CP., attack Tarentum. Proposal of peace made by Theodoric to Anastasius (Cassiod. Var. I. 1), and a treaty is concluded. The British prince, Natanleod, defeated and slain in a bloody battle by Cerdic.
509	Mammo, with a Gothic force, commits depredations in Gaul. A calamitous and extensive fire at CP. Flight of Giselich into Africa.
510	Clovis, by force or fraud, sets aside the Riparian and other minor Frank princes, and adds their lands to his own; he makes Paris his residence. The ensigns of the consenship are sent to him by Anastasius; but his name appears in no list of consuls. Theodoric (Cassiod. Var. II. 1) announces to Anastasius, that he had appointed Felix consul for the ensuing year. Boethius, while consul, writes commentaries on Aristotle. Ennodius, bishop of Pavia, writes the Life of his predecessor, Epiphanius. Death of Giselich.
511	Death of Clovis at Paris, Nov. 27, æt. 45. His kingdom is divided equally among his four sons. Theodoric I. (Thierry) reigns at Metz, Chlodomer at Orleans, Childobert I. at Paris, and Chlotair, at Soissons. Theodoric remits a year's taxes to the citizens of Arles, for their fidelity (Cassiod. Var. III. 32). Joannes Lydus, æt. 21, comes to CP. The poet Christodorus of Coptos, and Agapinus, the disciple of Procius, fl. Anastasius expels and banishes Macedonius, and appoints Timotheus, bishop of CP. Council of Orleans, July 10.
512	A band of Heruli, under Rodolphus, permitted to settle in Thrace. Anastasius accused of heresy and persecution, because he checks the violence of the Athanasians. Flavius deposed, and Severus appointed fifty-fourth bishop of Antioch.
513	Anastasius, having relieved his subjects from many taxes, still by his economy accumulates a large sum in his treasury. Procopius of Gaza, sophist and scriptural commentator, writes a panegyric on him. Elias deposed at Jerusalem, and John II. made bishop in his place.
514	Vitalianus excites a religious war against Anastasius, and blockades CP. Priscian, the grammarian, fl.
515	Treaty between Anastasius and Vitalianus, who obtains the military prefecture of Thrace, and a promise to restore the deposed bishops. A body of Huns breaks through the Caspian gates and invades Cappadocia. Death of the empress Ariadne, æt. 60. Theodoric marries his daughter, Amalasontha, to Eutharic, of the race of the Amali. 516	Turns at Alexandria. Death of Gundabald, king of the Burgundians.
517	Troops of Goths ravage the country, from the Danube to Thermopyæ. Anastasius redeems the captives led away by them. Dioscorus II. bishop of Alexandria.
518	Death of Anastasius, July 9, æt. 88. His successor, Justin, puts to death Amantius for a conspiracy. Vitalianus is in favour. The Henoticon of Zeno revoked. John II. bishop of CP. A riotous synod held there, condemns all heretics.

A.D.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

- 519 The portion of Britain conquered by Cerdio is called Wessex, of which he takes the title of king. The Chironicon of Cassiodorus ends. The bishops who were banished by Anastasius are recalled. Severus is deposed, and Paulus II. is the fifty-fifth of Antioch, and Timotheus IV. replaces Dioscorus at Alexandria.
- 520 Justin, unable to read or write, yields to the influence of his nephew, Justinian. Vitalianus and his friends are assassinated. The Veneti, or blue faction of the circus, favoured at court, commit many acts of violence. These disorders cause an ordinance, which puts a stop to the Olympic games at Antioch. Basilus Cillix writes his Hist. Ecc. from the death of Simplicius (483) to that of Anastasius (518). Epiphanius, bishop of CP.
- 521 The consulship of Justinian celebrated with unusual pomp. Ineffectual negotiation with Cabades. Paul of Antioch abdicates, and Euphrasius succeeds, fifty-sixth bishop.
- 522 Sigismund, the Burgundian king, puts to death, unjustly, his son Segericus, and quiets his conscience by large donations to his monastery of St. Maurice. Tzathus, or Zathus, a chief of the Lazi, a tribe near the river Phasis, comes to CP. and is converted to Christianity.
- 523 Sigismund assumes the monastic habit, and is betrayed into the hands of the Franks, who throw him, with his wife and children, into a well at Orleans. His brother, Gondemar, is elected king by the Burgundians. Death of the Vandal king, Thorismund. His successor, Hilderic, grants religious freedom, and allows the people of Carthage to have Bonifacius for their bishop. The edicts of Justin against Arians, provoke Theodoric to retallate on the Catholics, and he suspects them of holding treasonable correspondence with the Eastern court. The senator, Albinus, is put to death, and Boethius arrested, who, while in prison writes "De Consolatione Philosophiæ." Eutharic dies about this time, leaving a son, Athalaric.
- 524 Chlodomir defeated and slain at Volron, by Gondemar; his dominions divided among his brothers. War with Persia. Belisarius first employed. Boethius strangled at Caivenzano, near Pavia. Theodoric sends the bishop of Rome and four senators to intercede for the Arians with Justin. Peter, bishop of Jerusalem.
- 525 The patrician, Symmachus, father-in-law of Boethius, beheaded at Ravenna. Theodoric imprisons his ambassadors on their return from CP. Edessa overwhelmed by a flood, and Anazarhus in Cilicia, by an earthquake. At Antioch, an earthquake begins in October, and continues till the following May. Death of Isidore, the philosopher of Alexandria. Damascius writes his Life.
- 526 Death of Theodoric, Aug. 30. Athalaric, son of Eutharic, succeeds, under the guardianship of his mother, Amalasontha. Cassiodorus is her chief minister and adviser. Belisarius conducts the war in Armenia; Procopius attends him, as secretary. Johannes, rhetor, concludes his history. John, bishop of Rome, dies in prison, soon after Theodoric. Euphrasius, bishop of Antioch, perishes in the earthquake.
- 527 Justinian proclaimed joint Augustus, soon after which, by the death of Justin, Aug. 1, at 77, he becomes sole emperor. Palmyra restored. Ephraimius, fifty-seventh bishop of Antioch. The use of the Christian Era, introduced by the monk, Dionysius Exiguus. Battle of Cerdicsea, between Cerdic and the Britons.
- 528 Unsuccessful campaign against the Persians; Belisarius is ordered to construct a strong fortress at Mindona. Justinian appoints Tribonian, the jurist, with eleven assistants, to prepare his code of laws. Another violent earthquake at Antioch. Amalarich marries Clotilda, daughter of Clovis, and makes Seville his residence.
- 529 The Saracens invade Syria. Julian, leader of a Jewish and Samaritan revolt, is made prisoner and beheaded. Cabades refuses to treat for peace. Justinian issues edicts against philosophers, heretics, and pagans. His code is promulgated, April 7, to be in force on the 16th. Benedict founds his new monastic order, the principal seat of which is Monte Casino, in Campania.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
530	Belisarius defeats the Persians at Dara. Mundo expels the Bulgarians from Thrace. Thierry conquers the Thuringians, and adds their lands to his own. The kingdom of the East Saxons (Essex) founded by Erchenwin. Cerdic conquers the Isle of Wight. Jornandes, bishop of Ravenna. A comet appears.
531	The Persians and Saracens, under Alamundarus, defeat Belisarius, who maintains his ground against their overwhelming force. Death of Cahades, Sept. 13, æt. 32. League of Justinian with the Abyssinians and Homerites. The progress of the Persians checked. Gelimer deposes and imprisons his brother Hilderic at Carthage. Justinian prepares for war against him, and gives the command to Belisarius. Amalarieh falls in battle against Childebert; Thiodas is chosen king of the Visigoths.
532	A truce of three months with Chosroes, leads to a treaty of peace. The violent contest of the circus-factions, called Nike , is quelled by the military forces of Belisarius and Mundo. Justinian employs the architect, Anthemius of Tralles, and Ildorus of Miletus, to build the new church of St. Sophia. Armenia plundered by the Huns, who are driven out by Dorotheus. Damascius, Simplicius, and other philosophers, expelled by Justinian's edict (see a. 529), seek a refuge at the court of Chosroes.
533	Justinian ratifies the treaty with Persia. Belisarius lands in Africa and achieves his first victories. He is accompanied by his wife, Antonina, and his secretary, Procopius. John of Cappadocia, prætorian prefect, oppresses the East by his rapacity. The Pandects and Institutes of Justinian published. Cassiodorus (Var. IX. 25), describes the twelve books of his Gothic history (afterwards abridged by Jornandes). The philosophers, disappointed, return from Persia.
534	Final defeat and surrender of Gelimer. Africa becomes a Roman province again. Return and triumph of Belisarius. Gelimer lives in retirement on an estate given to him in Galatia. Death of Athalaric. Amalasontha associates Theodatus with her in the kingdom of Italy; through her murder he becomes sole sovereign. Missions of Peter of Thessalonica to him from CP. Death of Thierry and accession of his son. The three kings of the Franks overpower Gondemar, king of the Burgundians, and divide his territories among them. Solomon, left by Belisarius to command in Africa, defeats the Moors. Death of Cerdic, king of Wessex. Cassiodorus, prætorian prefect; his official letters, Var. X. XI. XII. Marcellinus ends his Chronicle . Liberatus visits Rome. Justinianus, bishop of Valentia.
535	Belisarius occupies Sicily. Justinian's first Novellæ published. Anthimus, bishop of CP. through the influence of the empress Theodora. Justinian grants the demand of the council of Carthage, for the restitution of the church-property, which had been seized by the Vandals.
536	Belisarius quells a mutiny in Africa, returns to Sicily, takes Naples and enters Rome. Procopius joins him at Syracuse. Incapacity of Theodatus; he is deposed by his people and slain. Vitiges elected king of Italy. Cassiodorus is still the official secretary. Mission of Agapetus to CP. A council held there, deposes Anthimus, and appoints Menas in his place. Simplicius writes his commentaries on the Physics of Aristotle.
537	Belisarius besieged in Rome by Vitiges. Great distress of the city. The bishop Silverius is accused of treachery, deposed, and banished. Gaianus, bishop of Alexandria, after a few months succeeded by Theodosius.
538	Mission of Antonina and Procopius from Rome to Naples. Retreat of Vitiges. After an unsuccessful attack on Rimini, he takes shelter in Ravenna. Belisarius advances and makes himself master of Clusium and Urbino. A Gothic and Burgundian force besieges Milan. A council, held at Orleans, inflicts indignities on Jews. Theodosius banished, and Paulus, a monk of Tabenne, succeeds him as bishop of Alexandria. A large comet visible above forty days in Sagittarius. The sun eclipsed on the morning of Feb. 16. Chron. Sax.
539	Milan taken and pillaged. The Franks, under Theodebert, invade Italy and plunder Genoa; they are attacked by disease and return into Gaul. Fesulus and Auximom surrender to Belisarius; he prepares to besiege Ravenna. Chosroes collects his forces for war. Cassiodorus retires from the world to the monastery of Squillacæ.

A.D.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

- 540 Vitiges surrenders Ravenna, and is sent a prisoner to CP. Belisarius is recalled from Italy. The Ostrogoths elect Hildibald for their king. Chosroes invades Syria and takes Antioch. Solomon restores peace in Africa. Hesychius of Miletus, hist. fl. The parents of Evagrius, flying from Antioch, take their son, set. 15, to Apamea. A total eclipse of the sun, June 20. Chron. Sax.
- 541 Belisarius takes the command against the Persians. Hildibald is slain, and Totila made king of the Ostrogoths. Basilius the last consul appointed by Justinian; a series of years follows, dated from his consulship. Paulus is deposed by the council of Gaza, and Zolius appointed bishop of Alexandria. John of Cappadocia banished, and becomes a priest.
- 542 Totila recovers a great part of Italy. Belisarius compels the Persians to abandon their conquests and recross the Euphrates. The great plague spreads from Egypt and rages for many years in Asia and Europe. Evagrius studies at Antioch.
- 543 Naples surrenders to Totila, who then advances against Rome. Belisarius recalled from the East, after which the Persians again advance and defeat the Romans. The Moors renew the war in Africa; Solomon is slain in battle against them; incompetence of his successor, Sergius.
- 544 Perplexity of Justinian. Belisarius is sent again to Italy, but without supplies, and with very inadequate forces. Chosroes unsuccessful in his attack on Edessa. Stotzas, leader of the Moors, defeats the Romans, but fails in the battle. Edict of Justinian against the Origenists and the "Three Chapters." Macarius, bishop of Jerusalem.
- 545 While Belisarius is awaiting reinforcements, Totila takes Asenum and Spoletum, and lays siege to Rome. A truce for five years with Chosroes. Gontharis, the leader of the Moors, defeats and kills Areobindus; after which he is slain at a banquet by Artasires. The Turks begin their conquests in Asia. Facundus writes in defence of the "Three Chapters." Jacobus Baradaeus, bishop of Edessa, founds the sect of Jacobites. Domnus III. fifty-eighth bishop of Antioch.
- 546 Rome is betrayed to Totila, Dec. 17. Belisarius is joined by fresh troops, but arrives too late to prevent the capture.
- 547 Belisarius retakes Rome and repairs the walls; three attacks of Totila are repulsed. The Slavonians enter Illyricum. Ida founds the kingdom of Bernicia, in Northumberland, and builds Bamborough. Vigilus is summoned to CP. by Justinian, and prevailed upon to join in condemning the "Three Chapters."
- 548 Belisarius takes Crotona and Tarentum, after which he is recalled to CP. Ruscia surrenders to Totila. Death of the empress Theodora, June 28. Thiodes, king of the Visigoths, assassinated at Barcelona. Cosmus Indicopleustes writes his "Christian Topography." John of Cappadocia returns to CP., but is not restored to his office.
- 549 Ilauph, who had served under Belisarius, joins Totila, and conquers Dalmatia. Second capture of Rome by Totila. Ariminum, Tarentum, and Rhegium, submit to him. The army of the East occupies the country of the Laxi in Colchis. First siege of Petra.
- 550 Vigilina, still at CP., urges Justinian to rescue Italy from the dominion of Ariana. Another army is sent under Germanus, whose marriage with Theodoric's grand-daughter, Malasuentha, interests the Ostrogothic people in his favour. He dies at Sardica, on his march to the seat of war. The Slavonians are driven out of Illyricum. Lech the first duke of Poland. Totila prepares to invade Sicily. Chorianes leads a Persian expedition into Lazica. Bessus begins the second siege of Petra. Peter of Thessalonica sent to treat with Chosroes, for a renewal of the truce. Defeat of the Gepids by the Longobardi. Synod of Mopsesta. Vigilus binds himself by an oath to oppose the "Three Chapters."
- 551 Totila restores the senate at Rome. Narses is appointed to command the army of the East in Italy. Petra surrenders, after which another truce for five years is concluded between the Romans and Persians. Silk-worms said to have been first reared in Europe, from eggs brought from the East. Jornandes writes "de Regnorum Successione." The Western Church adheres to the "Three Chapters." Zolius is deposed and Apollinarius succeeds him as bishop of Alexandria.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
552	Totila defeated and slain by Narses, to whom the greater part of Italy submits. The Ostrogoths make Tetas their king. Battle of Searobyrg (Sarum), in which the Britons are put to flight by Cynric. Jornandes abridges the History of the Goths by Cassiodorus (see A.D. 533), and continues it to the death of Vitiges. Vigilius addresses his "Encyclic Letters" to the church. Euty chius, bishop of CP., and Eustathius of Jerusalem.
553	The kingdom of the Ostrogoths in Italy is terminated, by the defeat and death of Tetas. Narses restores and administers the government of Justinian. The Persian general, Mermeroes, conquers a great part of the country of the Lazi. Procopius ends, and Agathias begins, his History. Joannes Lydus writes "De Magist. Rom." The second council of CP. (5th general) condemns Origen and the "Three Chapters."
554	The Franks and Allemanni invade Italy, and are defeated by Narses. Gubazes, king of the Lazi, is treacherously slain by the Romans, who, after this, sustain another defeat. Death of Mermeroes. Earthquakes at CP., Nicomedia, and Antioch. Theodebald dies of the plague; his dominions are added to those of his uncle, Chlotair. Death of Agila. Athanagild makes Toledo the capital of the Visigothic kingdom. Vigilius, released from CP., is stopped in Sicily by disease.
555	Tzathes declared king of the Lazi. Nachoragan, the Persian general, defeated by the Romans at Phasis. War between Chlotair and the Saxons. Vigilius dies at Syracuse. Liberatus writes his "Breviarium." Victor Tununensis is banished and imprisoned for his defence of the "Three Chapters."
556	The Persians again invade Colchis, without effect, and retire into Iberia. Justinian punishes the assassin of Gubazes. Chlotair defeated by the Saxons. His natural son, Chramnus, rebels against him. Victory of Cynric and Ceawlin at Beranbyrig (Banbury).
557	Justin is appointed to command the Roman army in Colchis. Nachoragan is recalled, and put to death by Chosroes. The truce renewed between the Romans and Persians. Embassy of the Avars to Justinian. Another earthquake at CP.
558	The pestilence still rages. Pontus and Armenia are plundered by the Tzani. Death of Childebert; his daughters being excluded by the Salic law, his dominions are inherited by his brother Chlotair, who thus becomes sole king of the Franks. The restoration of the church of St. Sophia, by the architect Isidorus, is celebrated in hexameter verse by Paulus Silentiarius.
559	The Bulgarians advance to the river Atyras, within twenty miles of CP. The last achievement of Belisarius is the victory by which he expels these barbarians. Procopius writes his "Anecdota," and Agathias the fifth book of his History. Anastasius I, fifty-ninth bishop of Antioch.
560	Chramnus, in his rebellion, applies to the Bretons of Armorica for aid. He is made prisoner, and, with all his family, burnt alive by his father, Chlotair. Northumberland divided into two kingdoms; Bernicia, under Adda, and Deira, under Ella. Chosroes obtains the Fables of Pilpay from India.
561	The services of Belisarius excite the jealousy of Justinian and his courtiers. Death of Chlotair. His dominions are divided among his sons; Charibert has Paris, Gontran Orleans, Sigebert Metz, and Chilperic Soissons. Tumults of the blue and green factions at CP. Martin bishop of Braga.
562	Conspiracy of Marcellus and Sergius against Justinian; Belisarius falsely accused of having joined in the plot. Peter of Thessalonica negotiates a peace for fifty years, between the Romans and Persians. Cassiodorus prepares his "Computus Paschalis." The History of Agathias ends, and that of Menander begins. The Suevi, in Spain, renounce Arianism.
563	Belisarius is acquitted of the charge brought against him, and restored to his honour. Joannes Malalas of Antioch writes his History. Macarius is restored as bishop of Jerusalem.
564	Peter of Thessalonica, Master of the Offices; he dies soon after. Justinian is accused of heresy. Gildas Badonicus "De Excidio Britannie."
565	Death of Belisarius, March 13. Death of Justinian, November 13, æt. 83. He is succeeded by his nephew Justin, who receives an embassy from the Avars,

	seven days after his accession. Eutychius is deposed, and John III. appointed bishop of CP. The monastery of Iona founded by Columba.
566	Justin restores the office of consul for one year, from which another series of dates begins. He refuses to assist the Gepidæ in their wars with the Longohardi. Victor Tununensis ends his Chronicle and dies, still imprisoned in a monastery at CP. Corippus celebrates the praises and the consulship of Justin. Marriage of Sigebert to Brunehild, daughter of Athanagild, the Visigothic king.
567	Narses is deprived of his command, and retires to Naples. The Longohardi, under Alboin, overcome the Gepidæ; their king, Cunimund, falls, and his daughter, Rosamund, is married to the conqueror. Death of Charibert; his dominions are divided by his three brothers.
568	Alboin invades Italy, and founds the kingdom of Lombardy. The Avars succeed the Longohardi and Gepidæ in Pannonia. A Turkish envoy arrives at CP. Longinus, the successor of Narses, is styled Exarch of Ravenna. War in Britain, between the kings of Kent and Wessex. Battle of Wiltbandune (supposed to be Wimbledon). Liuva associates his brother Leovigild with him, in the Visigothic kingdom of Spain. Joannes Philoponus writes against Joannes, CP.
569	Alboin takes Milan and conquers Liguria. Mission of Zemarchus to the Turks of Mount Aital. Joannes Gerundensis, or Biclarensis, writes his chronicle. John III. bishop of Alexandria. Birth of Mohammed at Mecca.
570	The Avars invade Thrace, and are driven back by Tiberius, Justin's general. Ticinum (Pavia) still resists Alboin. Anastasius I. is banished, and Gregorius, the friend of Evagrins, is appointed sixtieth bishop of Antioch. Venantius Fortunatus, now a presbyter, addresses poems to Justin, to the empress Sophia, and to Childebert. Death of Narses (between 568 and 573).
571	The Armenians, persecuted by Chosroes, place themselves under the protection of Justin, which leads to a war between the Romans and Persians. Pavia is surrendered to Alboin. Ceawlin, king of Wessex, is the second Bretwalda. Uffa founds the kingdom of East Anglia. (Ost Engeland, the Eastern Narrows-land , between the fens of the Wash and the sea.) Theophanes Byzantinus writes his History.
572	Marcianus is sent to conduct the war against the Persians. By the death of Liuva, Leovigild becomes sole king of the Visigoths. Alboin grants to his chief captains, with the titles of princes or dukes, allotments of territory, for which they are bound to render military service.
573	The Persians take Dara and plunder Syria; Marcianus is recalled from the command against them. Alboin is murdered by Rosamund; she flies to Ravenna with her lover, Helmichis, where she poisons him; before he dies, he compels her to drain the cup. Cleoph is elected king of Lombardy. Cassiodorus, wt. 93 , writes "De Orthographia." After the death of Joannes III., Rome is nearly a year without a bishop. Another Joannes III. is bishop of Jerusalem.
574	Tiberius is appointed Cæsar, and concludes a truce with Chosroes. He sustains a defeat from the Avars on the Danube. Cleoph, king of Lombardy, is assassinated: his son, Autharis, being a child, many of the dukes assume royal power, and great anarchy prevails. Gregory of Tours enters on his episcopate. Benedictus I. is elected bishop of Rome.
575	Justinian, the son of Germanus, defeats the Persians, and advances to the Araxes. Chosroes agrees to a truce for three years. War between Sigebert and Chilperic: the former is slain, and succeeded by his son Childebert. Death of Cassiodorus, wt. 95 . (The kingdom of E. Anglia dates from this year, in Ox. Tables and Univ. Hist.)
576	Mission of Valentine to Dilzihulna, ruler of the Turks. The Persians occupy Armenia, which Justinian is too late to prevent.
577	Maurice is sent to command the Roman army in the East. Ceawlin extends the kingdom of Wessex, by taking Gloucester, Cirencester, and Bath. On the death of John III. Eutychius is restored to the bishopric of CP.
578	Death of Justin, Oct. 5. Negotiations between Tiberius and Chosroes. Columbanus founds his monastery of Luxovium.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
579	Victories of Maurice over the Persians. Death of Chosroes. Marriage of Hermenegild, son of Leovigild, with Ingundia, daughter of Sigebert and Brunehild.
580	Maurice obtains farther successes in Mesopotamia and Assyria. Death of Austregildis, Gontran's queen. Buzurg Mihir, the tutor and friend of Hormisdas, introduces into Persia from India, the game of chess. Eulogius, bishop of Alexandria.
581	Maurice concludes his fourth campaign, and returns to CP., where he is honourably welcomed.
582	Death of Tiberius, Aug. 14, having previously given his daughter Constantina in marriage to Maurice, and proclaimed him heir to the throne. Hermenegild, converted by his wife Ingundia, and by Leander, the bishop of Seville, renounces Arianism, and endeavours, by rebelling against his father, to establish the Nicene faith in Spain. John IV. succeeds Eutychius as bishop of CP. The five extant books of Agathias written.
583	The retirement of Buzurg Mihir leaves Hormisdas under the influence of evil counsellors. Menander writes his History.
584	Maurice appoints Philippius, the husband of his sister Gordia, to command the army in the East. The Dukes of Lombardy, distressed by ten years of anarchy, unite in recognizing Autharis as their king, and order is restored among them. Fredegonda kills her husband, Chilperic, and reigns in the name of her son, Chlotair. The Suevi of Spain are finally overcome, and their territories occupied, by Leovigild. He also puts an end to the rebellion of his son Hermenegild, who is put to death by him, and receives from the catholic church the honour of a martyr and saint. Longinus is recalled, and Smaragdus appointed exarch of Ravenna. The Latin language is modified in Italy, Gaul, and Spain, by admixture with Gothic dialects. Many native Gauls retire into Armorica, where they preserve their Celtic tongue. Ceawlin defeats the Britons at Fethanlea.
585	Philippius harasses the Persians, while on another side, their country is invaded by the Turks.
586	The Persian general, Bahram, repels the Turks. Death of Leovigild. Cridda founds the last Saxon kingdom of Mercia. The British warriors retire to the western side of the island, from Cornwall to the Clyde, and uniting in a general league, call themselves Cymri.
587	The Avars, under their chagan (khan) Balan, harass Thrace, and threaten the empire; Comentiolus is appointed to resist them. John of CP. assumes the title of "Œcumenical bishop," which leads to angry discussions between him and Pelagius of Rome. Gregory of Antioch tried and acquitted by a synod at CP.
588	Philippius is superseded by Priscus. War between Recared and Gontran; the Franks are defeated near Carcassone. A destructive fire at Paris. Ethelric, a son of Ida, succeeds in Bernicia; by the marriage of his son, Ethelfrid, with Acca, daughter of Ella, king of Deira, the two kingdoms are united, and form that of Northumberland. Death of Ella.
589	Comentiolus is placed at the head of the Roman army in the East, and Bahram at that of the Persians. The latter receives a total defeat, after which he revolts, in consequence of having been reproved and insulted by Hormouz. Council of Toledo; Recared and the Visigoths conform to the Nicene creed. Priests are forbidden to accuse each other before a civil magistrate.
590	Maurice crowns his son, Theodosius, æt. 9. Hormouz is deposed and slain, with many of his family. His eldest son, Chosroes, is saved and proclaimed king. He flies to Circesium, and places himself under the protection of Maurice. Bahram for a time usurps the regal power. Joannes Gerundensis, or Biclarenensis (see A.D. 569), ends his Chronicle.
591	A Roman army under Narses restores Chosroes, who makes peace with Maurice. Bahram retires among the Turks, and dies soon afterwards. Agilulph, duke of Turin, marries Theudelinda, widow of Autharis, and is acknowledged king of the Lombards.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
592	Maurice recalls his forces from the East, to strengthen his army in Thrace against the Avars. He marches with them as far as Anchialus, whence he retires to CP., and leaves Priscus to command. An eclipse of the sun, March 19. Gregory claims authority over foreign bishops and churches.
593	Priscus drives the Avars across the Danube, and compels Balan to make peace. Peter, the brother of Maurice, is sent to take the command. Evagrius concludes and publishes his history. Anastasius I. restored at Antioch (see A.D. 559, 570).
594	Peter breaks the peace with the Avars, and is defeated by them. Priscus is re-instated in the command. Maurice attempts to reduce the pay of the soldiers; their mutiny appeased by revoking the edict. Death of Gontran; his territories descend to Childebert. Amos, bishop of Jerusalem. Mohammed enters into the service of Cadijah, and soon afterwards marries her. Ethelbert is the third Bretwalda.
595	Conference between Priscus and Balan, after which hostilities are resumed; the Avars are defeated, and remain inactive for many months. The Lombards invade the country round Rome, and cause great distress in the city. Gregory prevails on them to withdraw. Cyriacus, bishop of CP. Venantius Fortunatus, bishop of Poitiers.
596	Gregory sends Augustin and a train of monks to preach Christianity in Britain (see his Ep. VI. 57, addressed to them, July 23); they are favourably received by Ethelbert, king of Kent, and his queen, Bertha, daughter of the late Frank king, Charibert (she being already a Christian). Dwellings are assigned to them in Canterbury. Death of Childebert; his dominions are divided between his two sons, under the tutelage of their grandmother, Brunehild. Cyriacus claims the title of "Ecumenical bishop," and is opposed by Gregory, who in his letters styles himself " Servant of the servants of God ." Isidore appointed bishop of Seville.
597	Ceolwulf, great grandson of Cerdic, regains the throne of Wessex, and Wibba that of Mercia. The missionaries make many converts in Kent and Essex. Augustin goes to Arles, and is ordained bishop of the English.
598	Balan attacks Tomi, which is defended by Priscus. Death of Fredegonda. Columbanus, expelled from Luxovium by Theodoris, takes refuge with Chlotair.
599	Comentiolus is defeated by the Avars. The Chagan offers to release twelve thousand prisoners for a ransom. Maurice refuses to pay this, on which they are massacred by their captors. Through the degeneracy of the Frank monarchs, the mayors of the palace gradually encroach on the royal authority. The Gregorian chant introduced. Anastasius II. sixty-first, and last bishop of Antioch.
600	Priscus defeats the Avars, but is again superseded in the command by Comentiolus. Marriage of the Cæsar, Theodosius, æt. 19. Death of Venantius Fortunatus.
601	Peter is again appointed to the command of the army on the Danube. Death of Recared. Paulinus, Mellitus, and others, are sent to assist in the conversion of Britain. Greg. Epist. xl. 76, June 17, to Mellitus, orders heathen temples not to be destroyed, but used as Christian churches; xl. 85, June 22, to Augustin (episc. Anglorum); xl. 86, same date, to Ethelbert; and xl. 68, same date, to Virgilius, bishop of Arles. Isidus, bishop of Jerusalem.
602	Revolt of Phocas; he is proclaimed emperor. Flight of Maurice with his family; they are taken and put to death; as also, are Peter, Comentiolus, Germanns, and others, Nov. 22. Maurice, æt. 63. Augustin founds the cathedral and abbey of Canterbury. Peter, the first abbot, is drowned on a voyage to France. Agilulph and the Lombards renounce Arianism.
603	Chosroes declares war against Phocas, to revenge the death of his benefactor, Maurice. Liuvva, a promising young prince, is assassinated, æt. 22, by Witteic, who usurps the Visigothic throne. Ethelfrid defeats the Scots at Degassatan, (Egesanstone, Chron. Sax.) and the Cymri, near Caerlegion (Chester). Gregory places the statues of Phocas and his empress, Leontia, in the Lateran, and congratulates him on his elevation, Epist. xlii. 31. " Phocas Augusto. Gloria in Excelsis ."

604	Chosroes invades the Roman provinces. Phocas gives his daughter in marriage to Priscus. Sabert and his subjects embrace Christianity. Mellitus, first bishop of London, and Justus of Rochester. The church of St. Paul, in London, built by Ethelbert. Augustin dies, May 26, and is succeeded by Laurentius. Death of Gregory I.
605	Phocas begins his cruelties. Constantina, the widow of Maurice, is tortured, and afterwards beheaded with her daughters. Narses is decoyed to CP. and burnt alive. The hippodrome is defaced by the heads and mangled bodies of the tyrant's numerous victims.
606	Chosroes conquers Mesopotamia. Columbanus visits Theodebert, and is protected by him. Ethelbert gives his people a code of laws.
607	Chosroes crosses the Euphrates and overruns Syria, Palestine, and Phœnicia. Phocas concedes to Boniface III. the supremacy of Rome over all Christian churches. Death of Cyriacus; Thomas, bishop of CP, and Theodorus succeeds Eulogius at Alexandria.
609	The Persians are masters of Asia Minor, and penetrate to the Bosphorus. The Avars occupy Thrace. The mal-administration and tyranny of Phocas produce universal misery. John IV. bishop of Alexandria, and Zacharias, of Jerusalem.
610	Heraclius proceeds to CP. with the African navy, and a part of the army; Nicetas marches with the remaining forces by land. On the arrival of the former, Phocas is given up to him and beheaded, Oct. 5. Heraclius is proclaimed Emperor. Priscus, at first entrusted with the command in Cappadocia, retires into a monastery. Nicetas is married to a daughter of Heraclius. Witteric is slain, and Gundemar succeeds him as king of the Visigoths. On the approach of the Persians, the Jews of Antioch attack the Christians, and kill the bishop, Anastasius; the see remains vacant nineteen years. Sergius succeeds Thomas, as bishop of CP. Theophylactus Simocatta writes his history; after the fall of Phocas, he recites a Monody on the death of Maurice, "interrupted by the tears of his audience." Mohammed announces himself as a prophet, and begins to teach Islamism.
611	The Persians take Apamea and Edessa. Birth of Epiphania, daughter of Heraclius and Eudocia. Joannes Philoponus (see A.D. 568) still writes on philosophy, astronomy, grammar, and theology.
612	Birth of Constantine, son of Heraclius. Death of the empress Eudocia. Coronation of the infant princess Epiphania. Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, taken by the Persians. Theodebert murdered at the instigation of Brunehild; his dominions seized by his brother Thierry. Columbanus, having reproved them for the bloody deed, saves his life by flight. Agilulf gives him the valley, in which he founds the monastery of Bobium. Isidore, bishop of Seville, writes his History.
613	Heraclius crowns his son Constantine. Syria is invaded by the Saracens. Death of Thierry. Chlotair unites under his government all the territories of the Franks; he puts to death the guilty Brunehild. The youthful Ail (et. 14) becomes Mohammed's vizir. The Koreish begin their opposition to the prophet.
614	Damascus and Jerusalem taken by the Persians. Distressed state of the Eastern empire. Heraclius makes an ineffectual attempt to negotiate with Chosroes. He marries his niece, Martina. Defeat of the Cymri at Beandune, by Cynegils and Cuicelm. On the death of Sabert, his three sons reign conjointly in Essex, and relapse into heathenism. Death of Columbanus in his retreat at Bobium.
615	Birth of another prince, to whom the name of Constantine is given. Death of Agilulph; his widow, Theudeinda, governs Lombardy in the name of their son Adalwald.
616	The Persians conquer Alexandria and Egypt, while another army encamps at Chalcedon. Their general, Saen, introduces to Chosroes an embassy from Heraclius, for which he is flayed alive, and the ambassador imprisoned. Death of Etheibert. His son, Eadwald, restores the Pagan worship. Redwald is the fourth Bretwalda. The bishops Mellitus and Justus leave England, but are recalled by Laurentius, who succeeds in converting Eadwald to Christianity. On the approach of the Persians, the bishop John flies from Alexandria to Cyprus, and George is appointed in his place.

617	The Persians take Chalcedon. Etheifrid is defeated and slain by Redwald, who places Edwin on the throne of Northumberland. Joannes Philoponus writes his Commentary on Aristotle, et. 92.
618	Heraclius, still inactive at CP., makes another vain effort to conclude a treaty of peace with Chosroes.
619	Heraclius, while holding a conference with Balan, is treacherously attacked by the Avars, and escapes with difficulty. The exarch Eleutherius falls in an attempt to make himself emperor, and is killed. On the death of Laurentius, Mellitus is the third archbishop of Canterbury.
620	Ancyra taken by the Persians. Peace concluded with the Avars. Death of Sisebert; he is succeeded on the throne of the Visigoths by his son Recared, yet a child.
621	Heraclius is roused from his inactivity by the danger of the empire, and makes vigorous efforts to contend with the Persians. Recared survives his father only seven months; the Visigoths elect Suintilla in his place.
622	Heraclius departs from CP. April 5, and lands at Alexandria on the Issus (Scanderoon), recovers Cilicia, defeats the Persians, places his army in secure winter quarters, on the banks of the Halys, and returns to CP. Flight of Mohammed from Mecca to Yathreb, afterwards called Medina, where he is received as a prophet and prince. The Era of the Hegira commences July 16. George of Pisidia, who was present in this year's campaign, celebrates the success of Heraclius.
623	Heraclius, accompanied by the empress Martina, leaves CP. In March, crosses the Euxine, lands at Trebizond, occupies Armenia, takes Thebarna (Ooramiah), the birth-place of Zoroaster, reconquers Colchis and Iberia, and winters in Albania, having released 50,000 captives. Chosroes declines either to fight or treat for peace. Mohammed achieves his first victory over the Koreish, in the vale of Beder; is afterwards defeated by them on Mount Ohud. He overcomes and expels the Jews of Medina. Suintilla takes the few remaining places in Spain, that were still held by the Greek empire. Edwin is the fifth Bretwalda.
624	Heraclius penetrates into Persia, and takes Ispahan; he surprizes and defeats Sarbaraza, at Salban, where he rests during the winter. On the death of Mellitus, Justus is translated to Cantherbury from Rochester, where Romanus succeeds him.
625	In the spring, Heraclius carries away an immense booty from Persia, crosses the Tigris and Euphrates, recovers Amida and Samosata, and returns to the banks of the Halys. The Koreish are foiled by Mohammed, in their third expedition of "the Nations," or "the Ditch." Paulinus, bishop of the Northumbrians. Letters of Boniface V. before his death, to Edwin and his queen Etheiberga. Isidore of Seville is still employed in writing his History.
626	Chosroes raises three armies, one of which, under Sarbar, encamps at Chalcedon, to besiege CP. On the other side, the Avars break through the long wall and advance to the gates of the city. After many unsuccessful assaults, the siege is abandoned, Aug. 8. Heraclius also divides his army into three parts, one of which, under his brother Theodorus, gains an important victory. He contracts an alliance with the Turks, who pass through the Caspian gates, and invade Persia. Eumer, a West Saxon, fails in his attempt to assassinate Edwin, king of Northumberland. George of Pisidia addresses to the patriarch Sergius his poem on the siege of CP.
627	Heraclius, with his Turkish allies, penetrates into Assyria, defeats and kills the Persian general, Rbazes, near the site of Nineveh, and occupies the palace of Dastagerd. Consternation and flight of Chosroes. Rebellion of his son, Siroes. Edwin, king of Northumberland, embraces Christianity, and builds the first minster of wood, at York. His example is followed by Eorpwald, of East Anglia, who is soon afterwards slain, and his throne usurped by the pagan, Richbert.

628	Chosroes deposed and slain, Feb. 28. Siroes, by a treaty of peace, restores to the Romans all that had been taken from them. Heraclius returns in triumph to CP. George of Pisidia writes his Hieracilad . Siroes, after a reign of seven months, is murdered, and Ardshir placed on the throne of Persia. Death of Chlotair; his son Dagobert refuses to divide the kingdom with his brothers. Battle of Cirencester, between the West Saxons and Mercians, followed by a treaty of peace.
629	Heraclius visits Jerusalem. Ardshir is slain by Shakriah, who in a few days meets the same fate, and Toorandokht, a daughter of Chosroes, is made queen of Persia. Mohammed conquers Mecca; many Arabian tribes submit to him; he invades Palestine; his first war against the Romans; battle of Muta. Sigbert, son of Redwald, recovers the throne of East Anglia; he introduces Christianity, and founds schools. Modestus succeeds Zacharias, bishop of Jerusalem.
630	Heraclius, in a conference at Hierapolis, originates the Monothelite controversy. Mohammed makes peace with Heraclius, and is acknowledged in all the country between the Euphrates and the Red Sea. Cyrus, the last bishop of Alexandria.
631	After many revolutions in Persia, Cesra is made king. Felix, bishop of East Anglia, fixes his see at Dnmoc (Dunwich). Fursey builds a monastery at Cnobersburg (Burgh Castle, in Suffolk).
632	Death of Mohammed, June 7, et. 63 . His successor, Abu Beker, sends an army into Syria, under Abu Obaidah and Caled. They reduce Anhar and Hira. Siege and capture of Bosra. The Persians depose Cesra and elect Yezdegerd for king. The Era of Yezdegerd commences, June 17, 3624 days after the Hegira. Sigbert, king of East Anglia, retires into a monastery, and is succeeded by Egrie.
633	The Mohammedans besiege Damascus, and defeat the army of Heraclius at Ajnadin. Penda the Mercian, and Cadwalla the Briton, make war on Edwin, king of Northumberland, who is defeated and slain, Oct. 12, in the battle of Hestfield (Hatfield Chase). His widow, Ethelberga, flies to her brother Eadwald in Kent, accompanied by Paulinus, who is appointed bishop of Rochester. Sophronius, the last bishop of Jerusalem.
634	Damascus taken by the Saracens. Death of Abu Beker, Aug. 23, et. 63 . On the death of Edwin, his nephew Osric, and Eanfrid, son of Ethelfrid, divide the kingdom of Northumberland, but are soon overcome and slain by Cadwalla. He, too, then falls in battle against Oswald, who, having rallied the Northumbrians, is, after his victory, made their king and the sixth Bretwalda. Birinus preaches Christianity to the West Saxons.
636	Abu Obaidah and Caled lay siege to Emesa. Their operations are stopped by a truce for a year, concluded with Heraclius. Penda attacks East Anglia; Sigbert is dragged from his monastery to take the field against him, and is slain in battle, together with Egrie. Anna succeeds to the throne. Oswald builds the first minster of stone in York. Cynegils, king of Wessex, is baptized, and makes Birinus bishop of Dorset (Dorchester, near Oxford). Oswald gives Lindisfarne or Holy Island, to be the see of bishop Aidan.
636	The Roman army destroyed by the Saracens in a battle of several days, near the river Hieromax, or Yermuk. The greatest part of Syria subdued. Another Moslem army defeats the Persians at Cadesia. Bassorah founded. The council of Toledo recognizes Chintilla king of the Visigoths, and fixes the successor in his family. On the death of Ariwald, his widow, Gundeburga, marries Rotharis, duke of Brescia, and raises him to the throne of Lombardy. Baptism and death of Unichelm, son of Cynegils. Death of Isidore of Seville, April 4.
637	Emesa, Balbec, and Jerusalem taken by the Saracens. Said crosses the Tigris and plunders Ctesiphon, or Modain, which is deserted for the new city of Cufa. The Persians are defeated near Jaloulah, and Yezdegerd retires to Ferganah.
638	Heraclius, unable to resist the Mohammedans, retires to CP. Antioch, Caesarea and Beræa (Aleppo) surrender; the conquest of Syria is completed. Heraclius occupies himself with the Monothelite controversy, and publishes his Ecthesis or Exposition of Faith. Rotharis takes Perugia, and in a bloody battle defeats the Exarch Isaac, who is replaced by Plato. Death of Dagobert; his two sons succeed, Clovis to Neustria and Burgundy, Sigebert to Austrasia. Death of Honorius, Oct. 16, after which Rome had no bishop for 19 months.

639	The plague rages in Syria; death of Ahu Obeldah, set. 58. Amrou invades Egypt; his progress is aided by the Jacobite or Monophysite Copts. The mayors of the palace are all-powerful in France. Anna enlarges and endows the monastery of Fursey at Cnobersburg. Pyrrhus, bishop of CP.
640	Alexandria taken by the Saracens, Dec. 22. (The reported interview between Amrou and Joannes Philoponus, and the destruction of the great library. Very doubtful .) Death of Eadbaud, king of Kent. His son, Earconbert, destroys all idols in his dominions. Severinus, consecrated bishop of Rome, May 28, resists the Ecthesis of Heraclius; he dies after a short pontificate, and is succeeded, with an interval of five months, by John IV. Omar forbids Mohammedans to navigate the sea.
641	Death of Heraclius, Feb. 10. His joint successors are Constantine III. (his son by Eudocia), and Heraclionas (his son by Martina). The former dies, May 24, supposed to have been poisoned: the latter is banished, with his mother, Oct. 5, and Constans II., son of Constantine III., is declared emperor, set. 12. Conquests of Rotharis in the north-western parts of Italy. Death of Arcthis or Arigius, who, during a reign of fifty years, had much enlarged the duchy of Beneventum. Pyrrhus deposed, and Paul appointed bishop of CP.
642	The Mohammedans continue their conquests in Persia, and defeat Yezdegerd at Nehavend. Istria and Dalmatia are invaded by the Sclavonians. Ajo, duke of Beneventum, is slain by them, and succeeded by Radoaldo, who repulses the invaders. Oswald, king of Northumberland, falls in battle against Penda; his brother, Oswy, succeeds him, and is the seventh Bretwalda.
643	Rotharis publishes his code of laws for the Lombards. Death of Cynegils, king of Wessex. His son, Kenwalk, succeeds him.
644	The Persian Mohammedans venerate Ali, and form the sect of Shiites , in opposition to the Sunnites , or orthodox Moslem. The caliph Omar assassinated by a Persian. Egypt flourishes under the administration of Amrou; he is recalled by the new caliph, Othman, and Abdallah appointed in his place. Oswin, son of Osric (see A.D. 634), claims the kingdom of Deiri; but finding himself unable to contend with Oswy, he disbands his forces and takes refuge with Earl Humwald. Death of Paulinus; Ithamar succeeds him as bishop of Rochester.
645	Constans and Paul favour the Monothelites. Pyrrhus, the deposed bishop of CP., recants his heresy at Rome. The reputation of Rotharis keeps the Avars and Slavonians quiet, and preserves peace in Italy. Penda conquers Wessex; Kenwalk takes refuge in East Anglia. Chintausinthus wishes to encourage learning in Spain, and deposes the bishop of Saragossa to obtain from Pope Theodorus the works of Gregory the Great: he reforms the Visigothic code.
646	Gregory, the pretorian prefect of Africa, assumes the purple. Theodorus excommunicates Paul of CP., and Cyrus, the expelled bishop of Alexandria.
647	Abdallah advances from Egypt into Roman Africa. Defeat and death of Gregory. Grimoald succeeds his brother Radoaldo, as duke of Beneventum.
648	Moawiyah conquers Cyprus. The Saracens advance into Khorasan. Constans issues his "Type," or model of faith. Kenwalk recovers Wessex, and builds Winchester cathedral. Sussex again independent under Ethelwalch. On the death of Felix, Thomas, from the province of the Gervii, is appointed bishop of the East Angles.
649	The island of Aradus, on the coast of Phoenicia, is taken by Moawiyah: Constans orders the new Exarch Olymplus, to enforce the adoption of his "Type," by the Western Church. It is rejected by the First Lateran Council, at which the celibacy of the clergy is also more strictly ordained.
650	Isauria subdued by the Saracens. Constans plunders many orthodox churches in Italy; his attempt on that of St. Michael, on Mount Garganus, in Apulia, is repelled by Grimoald, duke of Beneventum. Oswin, the titular king of Deiri, is murdered by Oswy, at Inceithingum (Gilling). Death of Aidan, bishop of Lindisfarne; Finan succeeds him. Agilbert made bishop of Doric, on the death of Birinus.

651	Death of Yezdegerd, and end of the Persian kingdom. Grasolfo, duke of Friuli, is succeeded by Ago; and Deodelapio, duke of Spoleto, by Azzo. Oswy sends to Kent for Eanflæda, daughter of his predecessor, Edwin, and marries her. Penda invades Northumberland, and retires, after a vain attempt to burn Bam-borough. Emmeran preaches Christianity to the Bavarians. Origin of the Panlician sect at Samosata.
652	Death of Rotharis, king of the Lombards. Kenwalk defeats the Britons at Brad-ford on the Avon. Olympius, having failed in his attempt to introduce the "Type," is recalled by Constans, and Theodorus re-appointed Exarch of Ra-venna.
653	Rhodes taken by the Mohammedans; the remains of the Colossus (erected a.c. 288, and thrown down a.c. 227) are broken up and carried away. Death of Chin-tasuinthus, king of Spain. Rodocald, son and successor of Rotharis, is assassinated by one of his subjects, whose wife he had violated; the Lombards elect Aribert, a Bavarian, for their king. The Exarch with an armed force seizes Martin, and conveys him to the island of Naxos. Penda, the eldest son of Penda, is converted to Christianity, with many of the Middle Saxons or Mer-cians; he marries Ellæda, daughter of Oswy. Honorius dies and is succeeded by Deus-dedit, sixth Archbishop of Canterbury. On the death of Themas, Bertigils, or Boniface, is appointed bishop of the East Angles. The eighth council of Toledo, composed of bishops and nobles, enacts, with the concurrence of the new king, Rechesuinthus, many laws both for Church and State.
654	Martin is conducted to CP., publicly stripped of his pontifical robes, and imprisoned. After long hesitation, the Roman clergy elect Eugenius in his place. The Sa-racens begin to be generally discontented with their caliph, Othman, many letters and orders having been forged in his name by his secretary Merwan. Anna, king of the East Angles, falls in battle against Penda. Botolph builds the church of Yceanho (Boston).
655	Constans is defeated by Moawiyah in a naval battle off the coast of Syria. The caliph, Othman, is assassinated June 18, a.c. 82. Ali is elected to succeed him. Martin is banished to Chersonesus, where he soon afterwards dies. Victory of Oswy at Winwidfield, near Leeds; Penda, king of Mercia, and Ethelhere of East Anglia, are slain. Penda succeeds to the throne of Mercia, and introduces Christianity there. He appoints Diuma bishop of Repton, and founds the monastery of Medeshamstede (Peterborough). Ninth council of Toledo. Pyr-rhus, restored as bishop of CP., dies in five months, and is succeeded by Peter.
656	Moawiyah revolts against Ali, and is supported by Ayesha, the widow of Mo-hammed, Amrou, Telha, and Zobeir. These dissensions suspend the conquests of the Saracens. Victory of Ali on "the day of the Camel." Telha and Zo-beir slain. Ayesha, made prisoner, is sent to Medina. Grimoald, mayor of the palace, endeavours to raise his son to the throne of Austrasia, on the death of Sigebert. This attempt involves him in destruction. Clovis II. dies soon after, and his son Chlotair III. is for a time sole king of France. The new pa-triarch of CP. sends to Eugenius an unsatisfactory exposition of his faith, which causes great commotions at Rome among priests and people.
657	Campaign of Ali and Moawiyah on the plain of Seffein. Vain efforts to settle their quarrel by single combat or arbitration. Insurrection of the Karegites against Ali. Penda treacherously murdered; his brother Wulphere becomes king of Mercia. Ildefonso appointed bishop of Toledo.
658	Constans takes the field against the Slavonians and repulses them. Amron is sent by Moawiyah into Egypt, and expels Ali's partizans. Kenwalk defeats the Britons at Peonna (Pen). The abbot Maximus, a zealous opponent of the Monothelites, is condemned by Constans to amputation of his tongue, and banishment.
659	Ali subdues the Karegites. Moawiyah falls in his attempt to take Bassorah; he offers terms of peace to the emperor Constans, which are rejected. The two rival caliphs publicly pray for each other, while they are waging fierce war. Cedd appointed bishop of the East Saxons by Sigebert; he builds churches at Tilshury (Tilbury), and Ythanceaster (probably Witham).

660	Constans, having first compelled his brother Theodosius to be ordained a deacon, puts him to death, and is ever after tormented by the keenest remorse. Ali, et. 63 , is assassinated by a Karezite; another attempts the life of Moawiyah, but fails. Hasan the eldest son of Ali, is elected caliph. Aribert finishes and endows the church of S. Salvatore at Pavia. Agilbert goes to France, and is made bishop of Paris. Winl succeeds him at Winchester; Colman is made bishop of Lindisfarne, on the death of Finan.
661	Hasan resigns the caliphate, and Moawiyah becomes the undisputed sovereign of the Saracenic empire. Another rebellion of the Karezites is quelled. Amrou governor of Egypt. Death of Aribert, and division of Lombardy between his two sons. Wuiphere takes the Isle of Wight, and gives it to Ethelwalch, king of Sussex; Eappa is sent to preach Christianity there.
662	Constans, detested by all classes, leaves CP. and goes to Italy. The Senate and people detain the empress and his sons. Strife between the two young kings of Lombardy. Gondibert applies to Grimoald, duke of Beneventum, for assistance, and is murdered by him. Bertaridus seeks the protection of the Avars in Pannonia. Grimoald, left master of Lombardy, is chosen king.
663	Constans collects an army and invades Beneventum. On the approach of Grimoald, he abandons the enterprise, but during his retreat, is attacked and defeated by Micola, Count of Capua. He after this visits Rome, and carries away whatever he can seize, among other things the brazen tiles of the Pantheon. With this booty he retires to Syracuse. Death of Amrou. Vitallianus enjoins the services of the church to be read in Latin, throughout all Christendom.
664	Bertaridus surrenders himself to Grimoald and is kindly received; but afterwards, fearing for his life, he withdraws secretly into France. The attendants, who had assisted his escape, are pardoned and rewarded by Grimoald, and allowed to follow their master. Moawiyah appoints as his lieutenant in Persia, India, and the East, his half-brother, Ziyad, "the greatest man of the age." Hilda, abbess of Streaneshalch (Sinus Fari, Bede . Littoris Angulus. Sommer : now Whitby). A Synod held in this abbey to fix the proper time for celebrating Easter. Colman's opinion being over-ruled there, he retires into Scotland. Tuda, who succeeds him as bishop of Lindisfarne, dies of the pestilence now raging in Britain. The kings Earconbert and Ethelwald, and Deus-dedit, archbishop of Canterbury, are carried off by it. The sun eclipsed, May 1st.
665	Chlotair attempting to restore Bertaridus is defeated near Asti, by Grimoald. Constans distresses Sicily and southern Italy by heavy taxes. Okbah or Akbah, sent by Moawiyah to conquer Africa. Wilfrid, abbot of Rhypum (Ripon), is ordained bishop of Lindisfarne, afterwards archbishop of York; Chad, abbot of Lestingham (Lastingham), bishop of Repton, and then removes the see to Lichfield.
666	Grimoald, having invited the Avars to repress the rebellion of Lupus, duke of Friuli, is obliged to expel these allies from his kingdom. During an altercation between Vitallianus and Maurus, bishop of Ravenna, Constans declares the latter exempt from the authority of Rome, and instructs the new Exarch, Gregory, to enforce his edict. Abdarrhaman, the son of Calad, is poisoned in Syria, and Hejer, a noted follower of Ali, beheaded. Council of Emerita (Merida), held by Ildefonso. Thomas II. patriarch of CP.
667	The Exarch Gregory fails, in an effort to arrest the progress of the Mohammedans in Africa; they conquer Numidia, and advance into Mauritania. Reche-suinthus reduces the Basque provinces in Spain, and revises the laws of his kingdom. Wighard is sent to Rome, to be consecrated archbishop of Canterbury, and dies there of the plague.
668	Moawiyah revokes Omar's interdiction against navigation, and sends his son Yezib, by sea, with a powerful army to besiege CP. In fruitless attacks, the Mohammedans lose many men, and among them Abn Jyub. On the approach of winter, they retire to Cyzicus. Constans assassinated in a bath at Syracuse, July 15, et. 56 . The Sicilians set up a handsome youth, named Mecezzus, as emperor. Grimoald revises and extends the code of Rotharis; his son, Romoald, adds Tarantum and Brundisium, to the duchy of Beneventum. Theodore, of Tarsus, consecrated at Rome, archbishop of Canterbury. John V. patriarch of CP.

- 699 The Berbers, or wild shepherds of Mount Atlas, resist successfully the progress of the Mohammedans. Beort, the ealdorman of Northumberland, defeated and slain by the Britons of Strathclynd.
- 700 Death of Cunibert; his young son, Lintbert, succeeds him, under the guardianship of Ansprando. The Mohammedans, repulsed from Antaratna, retire to Mopenastia.
- 701 Rebellion and death of Abdarrhaman. Ragimbert, son of Gondibert (see A.D. 662), expels Lintbert and seizes the throne of Lombardy; dying a few months after this, he is succeeded by his son Aribert.
- 702 Ansprando defeated in an attempt to expel Aribert; Lintbert made prisoner and put to death. Witiza renders himself unpopular by his vices. Gisolfo II., duke of Beneventum, invades Campania.
- 703 Aribert drives Ansprando from an island in the Lake of Como, to which he had fled; he is received, with his young son Lintprand, by the Bavarians and protected by them. Alfrid encourages learning. Adamnan, abbot of Iona, presents to him his book "On the Holy Places." On the death of Hedda his diocese is divided; Daniel succeeds him as Bishop of Winchester, and the new see of Sherborne is given to Aldhelm, abbot of Malmesbury, a noted scholar. Bede ordained priest.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
704	Justinian having escaped from Cherson, and passed through many adventures among the Chozars, takes refuge with the Bulgarians. Ethelred retires into a monastery, and leaves the crown of Mercia to Cædred. Alfrid resists the papal mandate to restore Wilfrid.
705	Terbelli, with an army of Bulgarians, restores Justinian to his throne; he inflicts bloody vengeance for his expulsion; Leontius and Abimar are beheaded. Death of Abdalmelik, æt. 60. Death of Alfrid, king of Northumberland. Calinicus deposed and banished by Justinian. Cyrus patriarch of CP. Wilfrid restored by Osred.
706	The pope John VII. refuses to accept, or even revise, the acts of the council of CP. (A.D. 691), which Justinian requires him to adopt. Ferduifo, duke of Friuli, slain in an encounter with a band of Slavonians.
707	The Mohammedans, under Mnsa, overcome the Berbers, and are masters of all Northern Africa; they establish themselves in the valley of the Indus under Catibah, conquer Kariame, Bokhara and Samarcand, whence they introduce the manufacture of paper. Aribert gives (or restores) the patrimony of the Cottian Alps to the church of Rome.
708	Justinian, unmindful of his obligations to Terbelli, attacks the Bulgarians, and is defeated by them at Anchialus. Sisinnius, elected pope on the death of John VII., dies, after holding the pontificate twenty days.
709	Theodorus, by order of Justinian, plunders Ravenna, and sends the principal citizens prisoners to CP., where they are cruelly murdered. Tyana taken by the Mohammedans. Offa, king of Essex, and Cædred of Mercia, abdicate and retire to Rome. Ina compiles his code of laws. Death of Aldhelm; Forthre bishop of Sherborne. Death of Wilfrid at Undalum (Oundle). Albinus, abbot of St. Augustin's, Canterbury, a friend of Bede.
710	First landing of the Mohammedans in Spain at Tarifa; after an inroad as far as Algeziras, they return to Ceuta. Pope Constantine, by order of Justinian, sets out for CP. Ina defeats the British chieftain, Geraint. Acca succeeds Wilfrid as bishop of Hagulstad, or Hexham. Naitan, a king of the North Britons, applies to Ceolfred, abbot of Wearmouth, for spiritual advice and architects to build churches.
711	Tarik, with a larger force, lands at Calpe, now called Gibraltar (Gebel at Tarik —the mountain of Tarik). Roderic, "the last of the Goths," succeeds Witiza, whose two sons, with their uncle, the archbishop of Toledo, and Count Julian, conspire against the new king and assist the invaders. Battle of Xeres, July 19—28. Death of Roderic and end of the Visigothic kingdom in Spain. The cruelties of Justinian provoke a revolt at Ravenna; he dispatches a fleet and army to destroy Cherson and massacre its inhabitants. Constantine, honourably received by the emperor, is dismissed back to Rome, without any apparent cause for his journey. The people of Cherson proclaim Bardanes emperor, under the name of Philippicus; the fleet and army espouse his cause, and conduct him to CP., where he is universally acknowledged, and Justinian put to death.
712	Aided by the oppressed and disaffected Jews, Tarik subdues Spain; Musa, jealous of his lieutenant's success, takes the command himself. Anasprando, with a Bavarian army, overcomes Aribert, who is drowned in his flight; after a reign of three months, the conqueror dies, and is succeeded by his son Liutprand. The emperor Philippicus causes great discontent by attempting to annul the acts of the sixth general council. Cyrus ejected from CP., and John VI. made patriarch.
713	Thrace plundered by the Bulgarians, and Pisidia conquered by the Mohammedans. Philippicus assassinated; his secretary Artemius raised to the throne with the name of Anastasius II. Musa crosses the Pyrenees and conquers as far as Narbonne; his son Abdelaziz obtains, by treaty with Theodemir of Murcia, full possession of Valencia, Alicante, and other neighbouring cities. The Gothic fugitives begin to collect and defend themselves in the mountains of the Asturias. Liutprand adds new laws to those of Rotharis and Grimoald. Abdelaziz marries Egilona, widow of Roderic.

714	Anastasius prepares an armament against the Saracens. Tarik and Mnsa recalled from Spain and disgraced; the command is given to Abdallah and Abdelaziz, sons of the latter. Death of Pepin of Heristal and Grimoald, the mayor of Neustria; strife and confusion prevail for some time in France. A conspiracy against Liutprand detected and foiled.
715	Death of Walid I. Charles Martel gains the ascendancy in Anstrasia, and contends against Childeric II., the successor of Dagobert in Neustria. Treaty between Liutprand and the doge of Venice. Winifred, a monk of Wessex, under the name of Boniface, proceeds on his first mission in Germany. Battle of Wanburg between Ina and Ceolred. Germanus I. patriarch of CP.
716	The fleet and army, sent by Anastasius against the Saracens, revolt at Rhodes, and proclaim Theodosius emperor; Anastasius resigns. Soliman sends his brother Mosleimah with a powerful army to besiege CP. First passage of the Hellespont by the Mohammedans. A new Nilometer erected by Asama. Abdelaziz assassinated at Cordova. The Asturian refugees choose Pelagius (Pelayo) of the royal Visigothic race, for their leader. Faroald, duke of Spoleto, seizes Classis, the port of Ravenna; the remonstrances of Liutprand make him relinquish his prize. Death of Ceolred, king of Mercia; Osred of Northumberland falls in battle. Rsdhod achieves the independence of the Frisians. Charles Martel defeats Raginfried, mayor of Neustria, at Amblef.
717	Theodosius retires into a monastery, and Leo the Isaurian becomes emperor. He defends CP. vigorously. A powerful fleet, sent to assist in the siege, is totally destroyed by the Greek fire-ships. Death of Soliman. Liutprand submits further improvements in the laws for the approbation of his subjects; the happiness of his people contrasts strikingly with the wretched condition of the Roman empire. Charles Martel, by his victory at Vincy, establishes his authority over Neustria. Aquitain an independent duchy under Eudes.
718	After suffering from a severe winter, and losing another fleet, the Mohammedans abandon the siege of CP. The empire of the caliphs extends two hundred days' journey, from Tartary and India in the East, to the shores of the Atlantic. Birth of the emperor Leo's son, Constantine, afterwards surnamed Copronymus. Pelayo begins a regular system of government, and receives the title of king. Gregory II. restores the original Benedictine monastery of Monte Casino. Cuthburga, Ina's sister, founds that of Wimburn, and Ina the minister of Glastonbury.
719	Anastasia, attempting, by the aid of the Bulgarians, to regain his throne, is given up by them to Leo and put to death. Aichama and archbishop Oppas (Witiza's brother) proceed against Pelayo, who obtains his first victory and takes Gijon; Aichama is slain, and Oppas made prisoner. Zama has the command of the Saracenic or Moorish forces in Spain. Boniface preaches in Hesse and Thuringia.
720	Leo crowns his young son Constantine. Omar II. poisoned by his own family, for favouring the descendants and sect of Ali. Zama invades Southern Gaul. Death of Chilperic II. Thierry IV. is allowed by Charles Martel to assume the title of King of Neustria.
721	Zama defeated and slain in the battle of Tonlouse by Eudes, duke of Aquitain. Pelayo recovers parts of Galicia and Leon. Egbert, abbot of Iona, translates the four Gospels into Anglo-Saxon. Wilfrid II. archbishop of York.
722	Pelayo takes the city of Leon. Alfonso, a descendant of king Recared, brings a band from Cantabria (Biscay) to join the Asturians, and marries Pelayo's daughter, Ormlinda. In this and the preceding year, Liutprand adds thirty-five new laws to his code. Ina defeats an attempt of Eadbert to restore the kingdom of Sussex. Iva Vidfame, a petty Scandinavian prince, conquers Upsal, and founds a kingdom, which afterwards becomes Sweden. Yezid prohibits images in Christian churches.
723	The Slavonians defeated by Pemmon, duke of Frinli. Boniface created archbishop by the pope, and supported in his mission by Charles Martel.
724	Death of the caliph Yezid II. Liutprand promulgates the sixth book of his laws.

725	Expedition of Charles Martel against the Bavarians. The Saracens renew their attacks on Gaul, and reduce Autun; Eudes prevents their passing the Rhone: their leader, Amhisa, is slain; Hodeira succeeds him. Death of Wictrid, king of Kent, April 23. Ealdbert loses his life in again attempting to recover Sussex from Ina.
726	Leo issues his edict against the worship of images; he is suspected also of discrediting the virtue of relics and the intercession of saints. Great agitation in the church, followed by commotions of the superstitious people. The islands of the Cyclades rebel and set up an emperor; their fleet is destroyed by the Greek fire, and their mock Augustus beheaded. Death of Marceilo, or Marco Tagliano, doge of Venice; he is succeeded by Orso Ipato, a courageous and prudent ruler. A submarine volcano throws up a small island near Thera, in the Archipelago. A rapid succession of Arab governors in Spain, through their own and the caliph's jealousies.
727	Germanus, patriarch of CP., and pope Gregory resist the edict of Leo; he attempts to enforce the observance of it, and sends a new exarch to depose the pope. The Mohammedans besiege Nice in Bithynia. Death of Tobias, bishop of Rochester; Aidulf succeeds him.
728	Continued tumults in Italy against the Iconoclasts. The exarch Paul is killed at Ravenna, and Esilarato, duke of Naples, at Rome. Lintprand takes Ravenna and most part of the Exarchate. Ina resigns the crown of Wessex and goes to Rome, where he endows an Anglo-Saxon school.
729	Lintprand restores Ravenna to the exarch Entyebius; they unite their forces to attack Rome, but are persuaded by Gregory to abandon their design. Death of Oeric, king of Northumberland, and Egbert, abbot of Iona. A comet appears.
730	Leo confiscates the patrimony of the church of Rome, wherever his power extends, deposes Germanus, and appoints Anastasius I. patriarch of CP. Eudes gives his daughter in marriage to Munusa, a Saracen chief in the Pyrenees, and enters into a league with him for the protection of their mutual independence. John of Damascus, surnamed Chrysorrhoas, writes against Leo and the Iconoclasts, and cultivates the philosophy of Aristotle. Felix writes a history of Croyland Abbey. Corbinian, bishop of Utrecht.
731	Munusa overcomes and slays Abderahman at Cerdagne. Endes sustains a great defeat at Arles, and having collected another army near Bordeaux, is again routed. The Saracens occupy Angoulême, Perigord, Salntonges, and Polton. Bede concludes his Hist. Ecc. Death of Berthwald, archbishop of Canterbury: Tatwine succeeds him. Fredegarius continues the History left by Gregory of Tours.
732	Charles Martel and Endes unite their forces, and give battle to the Saracens between Tons and Poitiers. Abderahman signally defeated and killed. The Mohammedans are arrested in their course of conquest and driven out of Aquitaine. Gregory III. assembles a council at Rome, in which all Iconoclasts are excommunicated. Death of the Abbot Albinus, Bede's friend.
733	Leo marries his son Constantine to a Tartar, or Turkish, princess, who at her baptism takes the name of Irene. A fleet, dispatched by him against the Pope and the refractory Italians, is destroyed by a storm in the Adriatic. Abdelmelik, the successor of Abderahman, remains inactive in Spain. Acca expelled from his bishopric of Hexham. The sun eclipsed, Aug. 15. Aldwich, bishop of Sidnaceaster and Sigfrid of Selsey.
734	Death of Tatwine, archbishop of Canterbury; Nothelm is appointed in his place. Egbert succeeds Wilfrid II. at York.
735	Death of Eudes; his sons make an ineffectual resistance to the occupation of Aquitaine and Gascony by Charles Martel. Pepin visits Pavia, and is adopted by Luitprand. Death of Bede in the monastery of Jarrow, May 26, set. 62. Birth of Alculn. Frithwald, bishop of Whitberne.
736	Luitprand being attacked by a dangerous illness, his nephew, Hildebrand, is elected for his colleague by the Lombard diet. Hunaid, son of Eudes, is allowed the title of Duke of Aquitaine, on his doing homage to Charles Martel and his sons.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN,
737	Death of Pelayo; his son, Favila, succeeds him. Aznar, a son of Eudes, drives out the Saracens, and erects an independent power in Arragon. Death of Thierry IV. Charles Martel rules France without any nominal king. Okbah makes an effort to retrieve the late disasters of the Saracens, and gains possession of Avignon, but is expelled by Charles Martel, who defeats him in a great battle in Languedoc, takes Nîmes, and lays siege to Narbonne. Popular tumults at Venice. The doge Orso killed. The republic is thenceforth governed for several years by an annually elected "Master of the military." Ceolwulf retires into a monastery, and leaves the kingdom of Northumberland to his nephew Eadbert. Death of Ethelwald, bishop of Lindisfarne; Cenwulf consecrated in his place. Death of Acca, late bishop of Hexham.
738	Boniface visits Rome for the third time, and is honourably entertained by Liutprand at Pavia. Deusdedit, or Diodato, son of the murdered doge, is recalled from exile, and returns to Venice. Charles Martel exacts a tribute from the Saxons of the Lippe.
739	Favila, a weak prince, is killed by a bear while hunting. Alfonso is elected chief of the Asturians. Charles Martel and Liutprand unite their forces against the Saracens, and expel them from the greatest part of France. Rachis, duke of Friuli, successfully attacks the Slavonians in Carniola. Abbo, a private citizen, founds and richly endows the monastery of Novalesa, at the foot of Mount Cenis. Death of Wilbrord, the apostle of the Frisians.
740	Disturbed state of Italy, through the rebellion of Trasmond, duke of Spoleto, against Liutprand. The Saracens in Spain are weakened by intestine factions. Alfonso extends his little kingdom in Galicia and Castile.
741	Death of the Emperor Leo, June 18. His son and successor, Constantine, is troubled by the rebellion of Artavasdus. The dukes of Spoleto and Beneventum being supported by the pope, Liutprand invades the Roman State. Gregory invites the protection of Charles Martel, but dying at this crisis, his successor, Zachary, assists the Lombard king in reducing his two rebellious vassals, and peace is restored in Italy. Death of Charles Martel, Oct. 22. His sons, Carloman and Pepin, divide between them the government of France, leaving only a few small domains to their half-brother, Griffo. Death of Ethelard, king of Wessex. War between his successor Cuthred and Ethelwald, king of Mercia. Death of Nothelm; Cuthbert is consecrated archbishop of Canterbury, and Dun, bishop of Rochester. York burnt.
742	Interview between Liutprand and pope Zachary at Terni. Godescalc, duke of Beneventum, murdered by his people. Chilperic III. made nominal king of France. Birth of Charles, son of Pepin and Bertha, afterwards called Charlemagne. Synod of Cloveshoe. The office of doge restored at Venice, with the title attached to it of Ipatro or Consul.
743	Final defeat of Artavasdus. Zachary prevails on Liutprand to abandon his design of annexing Ravenna and the Exarchate to his kingdom. Constantine forbids the worship of images; but Rome still maintains allegiance to him in civil matters. Continued discord among the Saracens in Spain; Abdelmelek put to death at Cordova. A council held by Boniface at Leptines (now Eutnes, in Hainault). The kings of Mercia and Wessex unite their arms against the Cymri of Wales.
744	The caliph Walid II. slain by conspirators. His successor, Yezid III., dies in five months of the plague. Then, Ibrahim, after a reign of three months, is deposed, and Merwan II. occupies his throne. Death of Liutprand. His nephew, Hildebrand, after holding the government seven months, is set aside, and Rachis, duke of Friuli, elected by the Lombard nobles. The History of Paul Warnefrid (Paulus Diaconus) closes. Council of Soissons presided over by Pepin. The abbey of Fula built by Sturmio. Daniel resigns the see of Winchester, and is succeeded by Hunferth.
745	Victories of Carloman in Saxony, and of Pepin in Southern Germany. The archbishopric of Mentz founded by Boniface. Death of Daniel, ex-bishop of Winchester.

746	Italy tranquil. Rachis legislates for his people. Ansprando, duke of Spoleto, succeeded by Lupo, whom the Lombards call Welfo; probable origin of the family of the Guelphs. Ibrahim and Abul-Abbas (descendants of Mohammed's uncle, Abbas) emerge from obscurity, and claim the caliphate; black adopted as the colour of the Abbassides. Selred, king of East Anglia, slain. A pestilence depopulates the East.
747	Carloman resigns his share of power to his brother Pepin, and builds a monastery for himself on Mount Soracie, near Rome, from which he retires to that of Monte Casino. Ibrahim, made prisoner on his pilgrimage to Mecca, dies in captivity. His brother, Abul-Abbas (afterwards called Saffah, or the bloody), remains leader of the Abbassides. Yusef restores order among the Saracens of Spain, divides it into six provinces, and constructs public works. A council held at Cloveshoo, decrees that portions of the liturgy should be taught to the people in English (Anglo Saxon).
748	Venetian merchants having purchased slaves to be sold in Africa to the Saracens, Zachary forbids the traffic. Death of Eadbert, king of Kent. Virgilius, a priest, convicted of heresy for believing in the existence of antipodes.
749	Battle of the Zab. Merwan, defeated by the Abbassides, flies into Egypt. Rachis invades the Exarchate and lays siege to Perugia. He is induced by Zachary to withdraw his forces, after which he gives up the crown of Lombardy to his brother, Astolfo, and retires to Monte Casino. Christianity supplanted in Africa by the Mohammedan faith.
750	Final defeat and death of Merwan, in a battle on the banks of the Nile. The dynasty of the Abbassides begins with Abul-Abbas. All the family of the Omniades are put to death, except Abderahman, who escapes into the valleys of Mount Atlas. Yusef aims at making himself independent in Spain. Constantine defeated by the Bulgarians at Batagaba. Birth of his son, afterwards Leo IV.
751	Constantine gives the title of Augustus to his infant son. Pepin overcomes a rebellion of Gripho, and defeats the Saxons and Bavarians. He prepares to make himself king of France, and by an embassy invites the concurrence of the pope. Alfonso extends his conquests over the north-west of Spain, along the Douro, from Senticia (Zamora) to Calle (Oporto).
752	The reign of the Merovingian race terminates by the deposition of Chilperic III., who is shut up for the rest of his days in the monastery of St. Bertin. Pepin crowned king of France at Soissons by Boniface; he crosses the Pyrenees and recovers part of Catalonia from the Saracens. Astolfo makes himself master of the whole Exarchate of Ravenna, and threatens Rome. On the death of Pope Zachary, his first successor, Stephen, dies three days after his election, of a fit of apoplexy; another Stephen is chosen in his place, who is called Stephen III. by Onuphrius Panvinius and Cardinal Baronius, and Stephen II. by Sigonius, Muratori and others. Constantine makes new efforts to abolish image-worship, and check the increase of monasteries. Cuthbert, king of Wessex, defeats Ethelbald of Mercia, at Burford.
753	Journey of pope Stephen to France, and interview with Pepin. Civil war in Spain between Yusef, Samail, Ben Amru, and other generals. War between Cuthbert and the Britons. Boniface resigns the archbishopric of Mentz, and is succeeded by Lull.
754	Pepin crowned by Stephen. He marches an army into Italy. Astolfo surrenders the Exarchate of Ravenna, which Pepin gives to the church, and the papacy becomes a temporal sovereignty. Eighty of the Xeqes, or principal Saracens, decide on making Spain an independent State, and choose Abderahman Ben Moawiyah, still a fugitive in Africa, to be their ruler. Death of Abul Abbas. Al-mansor introduces learning among the Arabians. Council of CP. ordains the removal of images from churches. Constantine II. patriarch of CP.
755	Astolfo breaks his engagements and attacks Rome. On the approach of Pepin, he withdraws his forces and is besieged in Pavia; he is compelled to execute the former treaty, and also to give up Commachio. Fruitless embassy of Constantine to claim the Exarchate. Abderahman lands in Spain, defeats Yusef and

	Samail at Musara, takes Cordova, and is acknowledged as king. Sigebert, king of Wessex, for his cruelty, is slain by Cynewulf, who succeeds him. Ethelbald, king of Mercia, killed by Bernred, who, after a short usurpation of the throne, is put to death by Offa. Boniface murdered by the pagans among whom he was preaching. Galla of Malamocco obtains for a year the office of doge at Venice, by the assassination of Diodato. The deposed Chilperic, the last of the Merovingians, dies in his monastery.
756	Yussef and Samail, again defeated by Abderahman, agree to a treaty of peace, which is soon broken by the former. Birth of Abderahman's son Hixem. A Saracen army under Suleiman Ben Xihab, endeavouring to enter France, is cut to pieces in the passes of the Pyrenees. Astolfo killed by a wild boar; Rachis leaves his monastery and claims the crown of Lombardy again; he is opposed by Desiderius, who obtains the support of the pope by giving up Ancona. The Venetians depose Galla, and limit the power of succeeding doges, by the appointment of two annual tribunes.
757	The emperor Constantine courts the favour of Pepin, and among other presents sends him the first organ known in France. Pope Stephen and his successor, Paul, establish Desiderius on the throne of Lombardy. Death of Alfonso; his son Froila founds Oviedo. Abderahman invites many of his former friends from Syria and Egypt, and gives them honourable appointments; he makes Cordova the capital of his kingdom. Samail enters into his service, but Yussef persists in rebellion. Eadbert retires into a monastery; his son Oswulf king of Northumberland.
758	Abderahman gives a letter of protection to the Christians in Spain, and fixes the annual tribute to be paid by them. Yussef defeated and slain at Loxa. Samail retires to live privately at Siguenza, soon afterwards arrested and put to death. Pepin conquers Narbonne and expels the last of the Saracens from France. Oswulf slain; the throne of Northumberland vacant for a year. Death of Cuthbert, archbishop of Canterbury. Bagdad built by Almansor.
759	Toledo and Seville are surprised by the sons of Yussef, but soon recovered by Abderahman; the eldest son falls in battle; the two younger are made prisoners and kept in confinement. Paul takes advantage of the favourable disposition of Pepin to extend both the secular and ecclesiastical immunities of the Roman see. Bregowin archbishop of Canterbury.
760	Pepin causes the dukes of Naples and Gaeta to submit to the demands made on them by the pope. Hixem Ben Adra rebels in Toledo, and sets Casim, the son of Yussef, at liberty; Abderahman subdues and pardons them, replacing Casim in his prison. Death of Ethelbert II. king of Kent. Alcuin studies at York.
761	Constantine threatens to recover by force his lost Italian provinces. Ali, governor of Africa, lands with an army in Spain and proclaims Almansor. Froila repulses the Saracens, while besieging Pax Julia (Beja); he marries Menina, sister of Aznar the Arragonese. A severe winter.
762	Failure of the African expedition against Abderahman; Ali, its leader, is killed, and his head sent to Calroan. Hunald, duke of Aquitaine, having retired into a monastery, his son Walfar carries on an obstinate war against Pepin. Pope Paul protests vainly against Constantine's persecution of image-worshippers. Death of Bregowin, archbishop of Canterbury.
763	The Roman Senate and people address a letter of thanks to Pepin, patrician of Rome. Hixem Ben Adra again collects bands of insurgents, and is besieged with them in Medina Sidonia. Lambert archbishop of Canterbury. Petwin succeeds Frithweld, bishop of Whithorne.
764	Embassy of Constantine to Pepin, relative to image-worship. Thassilo, duke of Bavaria, having revolted against Pepin, solicits the mediation of the pope. Surrender of Medina Sidonia; Hixem Ben Adra beheaded. The Venetians depose Domenico Monegarlo; the inhabitants of Malamocco elect Maurice, a nobleman of Heraclea, for doge, who restores concord among the citizens. The Turks invade Armenia. A severe frost in Jan. and Feb., and the Bosphorus at CP. crossed on the ice.

A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
765	Pepin still occupied by his wars against the duke of Aquitaine and the Saxons. Toledo again recovered by Abderahman from the insurgents, who had seized it; Casim, the son of Yussef, escapes.
766	Constantine loses by shipwreck a large fleet conveying troops to oppose the Bulgarians. Death of Egbert, thirty-two years archbishop of York, and of Frithbert, bishop of Hexham; the first succeeded by Ethelbert, and the last by Alhmund. Nicetas I. patriarch of CP.
767	Death of Paul I. Constantine surreptitiously occupies the papal throne; some exclude him from the list of popes. Many disaffected Saracens assemble in the Sierras of Ronda under El Meknesi; being reinforced by others who land at Tortosa from Africa, they seize the city of Seville. Froila renders himself unpopular in the Asturias by the murder of his brother, Bimarannus, a virtuous young prince. Paul Warnefrid (Diaconus) employed and patronized by Desiderius.
768	Conquest of Aquitaine by Pepin, and death of Walfar. Pepin dies Sept. 24; his two sons divide his dominions. Froila assassinated by Aurelius, who succeeds him on the throne. Pope Constantine deposed and Stephen elected, generally styled the fourth of that name, but by some the third . (See A.D. 752.) The sons of Pepin crowned Oct. 9; Charles (Charlemagne) at Noyon, and Carloman at Soissons. Eadbert, ex-king of Northumberland, dies in his monastery. Aleuin teaches theology in England.
769	Hunald leaves his monastery and claims the duchy of Aquitaine; defeated and made prisoner by Charlemagne. Carloman refusing to assist his brother, discord is engendered between them. The Saracen rebels maintain a tedious partizan warfare. Aurelius, too weak to control the intestine divisions of his subjects, and awed by the power of Abderahman, obtains peace by paying him tribute. Council of Rome annuls all the acts of the deposed pope, who, though blinded by the people, is led into the assembly, insulted, and beaten. Laymen are declared incapable of being made bishops. The council of CP. (A.D. 764) is anathematized, and all who condemn the worship of images are excommunicated. Among the Gallican prelates at this council are Lull, archbishop of Mentz, and Tilpin (more known as Turpin), bishop of Rheims. Marriage of Constantine's son, Leo, to Irene.
770	The two kings of France are reconciled by their mother, Bertha; she visits Bavaria and Lombardy, for the maintenance of peace with those powers, and proposes the marriage of her sons to two daughters of Desiderius, and that of his son Adelgisus to her daughter. The pope interferes to prevent these alliances; none of them take place but that of Charlemagne.
771	Charlemagne divorces Desiderata, whom he sends back to her father, and marries Ildegard. Death of Carloman, Dec. 3, æt. 20; his brother seizes his dominions and becomes sole monarch of all France and great part of Germany. Gliberga, the widow of Carloman, and her two infant sons, seek the protection of Desiderius. Eginhard secretary to Charlemagne. Aurelius gives his sister Adalinda in marriage to Silo, and makes him heir to the throne.
772	Charlemagne begins his long war against the Saxons. Contest between the archbishops of Grado and Ravenna, for ecclesiastical jurisdiction over Istria. Desiderius invades the Roman States. The rebellious Saracens in Spain totally defeated near Ecija; death of El Meknesi. Abderahman fits out a fleet to guard his coasts, and appoints an admiral to command it. Death of Milred, bishop of Worcester.
773	The pope invites the protection of Charlemagne, who marches a large army into Lombardy, and besieges Desiderius in Pavia. Abderahman provides for the education of his two sons, Hixem and Suleiman, and institutes academies of learned men. Battle of Otford, between the kings of Kent and Mercia.
774	Charlemagne visits Rome. Surrender of Pavia, after a siege of eight months. Desiderius and his queen sent prisoners to France, and shut up in monasteries, where they end their days. Adelgisus escapes to CP. The widow and sons of Carloman are sent to France, and never more heard of. Beneventum remains an independent duchy under Arigisus. Charlemagne takes the title of king of

	Lombardy; during his absence the Saxons advance into his northern provinces. Death of Aurelius; Silo and Adosinda inaugurated at Oviedo. The people of Northumberland expel Alcred, and choose for their king Ethelred, son of Moll Ethelwald. Death of Moawiyah Ben Suleih.
775	Death of Constantine Copronymus, Sep. 14. Adelgisus gains no support in his claims on the Lombard crown. Silo takes Alfonso, son of Froila, for his colleague. Death of Almansor. The empress Irene favours the image-worshippers. Offa extends the kingdom of Mercia and constructs his "Dyke."
776	Charlemagne defeats the Saxons, and conquers Rodgausius, duke of Friull. Hadrian asserts the pretended "donation of Constantine," as a plea for urging Charlemagne still more to aggrandize the see of Rome. The merchants of Venice supply Italy and the West with the produce of the East. Amalfi begins to flourish by cultivating the same commerce. The Slavonians who occupy the north of Germany, pursue agriculture and trade; Jullin at the mouth of the Oder prospers. Conspiracy of Nicephorus and his brothers against Leo IV. The abbey-church of St. Denis, at Paris, completed by Charlemagne. Death of Petwin, bishop of Whithorne.
777	Dispute between the pope and Leo, archbishop of Ravenna, settled by the intervention of Charlemagne. Council and diet of Paderborn, to promote Christianity among the Saxons, and regulate their government. The Venetians, in return for the good government of their doge, appoint his son to be his colleague and successor. Offa defeats Cynewulf at Bensington, and takes the town. Ethelbert consecrated bishop of Whithorne.
778	Charlemagne conquers the northern part of Spain, between the Pyrenees and the Ebro, and establishes the " Spanish March ;" recalled thence by a revolt of the Saxons, on his return through the Pyrenees, his rear-guard is surprised by the Gascons at Roncesvalles; many of his bravest officers fall there, and among them his nephew Roland (Orlando), governor of Bretagne. The Franks begin to fight on horseback, and the age of chivalry commences. Hadrian's letters continually importune Charlemagne for new concessions of land, or jurisdiction, to the church. Alfwold dethrones Ethelred in Northumberland.
779	The Saxons defend themselves bravely under Witikind. Muhamad, son of Ynssef, escapes from his prison in Toledo. The council of Duren, on the Roer, decrees the payment of tithes throughout Charlemagne's dominions.
790	Death of Leo IV. Irene rules the East in the name of his son, Constantine VI. (æt. 10); she restores the worship of images. Paul IV. patriarch of CP. Charlemagne reduces the Saxons to obedience, and creates among them the bishoprics of Paderborn, Verden, Munster, Halberstadt and Minden. Muhamad joins his brother Casim in another rebellion among the Sierras of Ronda and Segovia. Death of Ethelbert, archbishop of York; Eanbald succeeds him. Alhmund dies, and Tilbert is appointed to the bishopric of Hexham. Cynewulf resigns the bishopric of Lindisfarne, and Highald is consecrated in his place.
781	Charlemagne visits Rome; his two young sons are crowned by the pope, one, king of Italy, and the other of Aquitain; Thasallon, duke of Bavaria, does homage to him. Haroun al Raschid, the caliph's son, extends his conquests to the Bosphorus. Irene purchases peace by an annual tribute.
782	Irene sends an army against the Slavonians, who are dispossessed of Salonichi and other places in Greece. The Saxons again totally defeated. Flight of Witikind into Denmark. Charlemagne holds a diet at Cologne. The Saracenic rebels, though often routed, still make head against Abderahman. Charlemagne endeavours to revive learning; he studies grammar under Peter of Pisa, and invites Alcuin to France. Eginhard compiles his memoirs. Paul Warnefrid resides in the court of Arigisus at Beneventum, where he writes his History of the Lombards. Death of Cynewulf, late bishop of Lindisfarne.
783	The Saxons make another struggle for independence, and are defeated in two bloody battles by Charlemagne. Death of his mother, Bertha, and of his queen, Ildegard, April 30, æt. 26; he marries Fastrada. On the death of Silo, Alfonso is excluded by intrigue from the Asturian throne, and Mauregatus placed on it. Offa raises the kingdom of Mercia to a preponderating influence; he builds the abbey of Bath, and corresponds with Charlemagne.

784	The Saxons, again defeated, are still unsubdued. Charlemagne excludes Venetian merchants from his Italian and the Papal States. The mosaics and marbles of Ravenna sent to Aix-la-Chapelle. The bishops of France forbidden by the pope to take the field in war. The Spanish rebels dispersed by Abderahman's victory at Castalona. Muhamad dies in great distress at Alarcon, near Toledo. Cynewulf slain in battle; Egbert, his rightful heir, retires into Mercia. The caliph Al Mahdi expends 666,000 gold crowns in a pilgrimage to Mecca. Tarasius patriarch of CP.
785	Irene proposes a general council, to establish the worship of images. The Saxon chiefs, Witikind and Alboin, submit to Charlemagne, and profess Christianity; three more bishoprics created at Bremen, Osnaburg, and Hildesheim. Surrender of Girona to Charlemagne. Abderahman, in a progress through Spain, builds and endows mosques. Etheltruda, daughter of Ethelbald (king of Mercia, slain A.D. 755), an abbess at Lucca. Death of the caliph Al Mahdi. Synod of Cealchyth; Lichfield made an archbishopric.
786	The council of CP. violently dispersed by the citizens and military. Charlemagne represses a revolt in Bretagne; three days of public thanksgiving for his victories ordered by the pope. Abderahman builds the great mosque, and the aljama, or court of justice, at Cordova; Caslm, brought before him in chains, is pardoned, and becomes a faithful subject. Arigisus, duke of Beneventum, attacks Amalfi and is repelled by the citizens. Accession of Haroun Al Raschid, on the death of Al Hadi.
787	The seventh general council, held at Nice, decrees the worship of images. The dukes of Beneventum and Bavaria do homage to Charlemagne, and give their sons as hostages; Arigisus dies soon afterwards. Charlemagne invites from Italy teachers of grammar and arithmetic, and singers who introduce into France the Gregorian chant. Death of Abderahman, æt. 60, his youngest son his successor. Bertric marries Offa's daughter, Eadburga. Egbert received in France by Charlemagne. A band of Danes, from three ships, attack England for the first time. Edris Ben Abdallah founds the kingdom of Fez.
788	Grimoaldo, son of Arigisus, released and made duke of Beneventum, on condition of acknowledging Charlemagne as his sovereign lord. Thassilon, preparing for another contest, is deposed; he and his son are condemned to become monks. The Huns, or Avars, who occupy Pannonia, invade Bavaria and Friuli, and are repulsed. Bavaria, Friuli, and Lihurnia added to the kingdom of France. Charlemagne refuses to give his daughter Rotruda in marriage to the young Greek emperor. Irene sends an army under Adelgisus to attack Italy; he is totally defeated. Suleiman and Abdallah, the elder brothers of Hixem, conspire to raise independent principalities in Spain. Death of Mauregatus.

830	Louis deposed by his three eldest sons, and restored by the diet of Nimegueu. Bernard retires into Spain. Ansgar preaches Christianity in Sweden. Ceolnoth archbishop of Canterbury. The emperor Theophilus hostile to image-worship. Obelerio, the former doge of Venice, loses his life in an attempt to regain his power.
831	Clemency of Louis to his sons and their abettors. Diets of Aix-la-Chapelle and Thionville. Merida and Alisbona join the insurrection in Spain. Messina taken by the Saracens; Theodotus falls in battle against them. Paschasius Radbert, abbot of Corvey, introduces the doctrine of Transubstantiation, and is opposed by Rabanus Maurus, abbot of Fulda.
832	Renewed discord between Louis and his sons. Palermo and the greater part of Sicily subdued by the Saracens. Omeyya, the son of Abderahmau, defeats the insurgents near the river Alberche. The Danes land in the Isle of Sheppey. John VII. patriarch of CP.
833	Louis a prisoner in the hands of his son Lothaire, who assumes full imperial power. Defeat of the Spanish rebels at Maghazul. The Danes land in Wessex from thirty-five ships, and defeat Egbert. The regular succession of Scottish kings begins with Alpine. Death of the caliph Al Mamun.
834	Lothaire compelled by his brother to restore their father to his throne. Merida submits to Abderahman. Ansgar appointed archbishop of Hamburg. Bernard independent in Catalonia, under the title of count or marquis of Barcelona.
835	Diet of Thionville, degradation of Agobard, archbishop of Lyons, Ebbo of Rheims and others, who had joined in the rebellion. Egbert defeats at Hengston a combined army of Danes and Cornish Britons.
836	Death of Egbert. His successor Ethelwulf places his son Athelstan over Kent, Essex, and Sussex. Baldimer, the Bulgarian king, releases his Greek prisoners. Death of Walla, after being made abbot of Bobbio by Lothaire. Paschasius Radbert writes his Life.
837	Theophilus invades Syria and destroys Sozopetra, the birth-place of Al Motassem. Louis allots Neustria to his youngest son Charles. The Danes harass the countries about the Meuse and Waal; they are repulsed by the West Saxons at Southampton, and defeat them on the Isle of Portland. The Venetians compel their doge to retire into a monastery; they elect his successor. Pope Gregory, during the distracted state of Europe, extends the power of the church, and uses the forged "Decretals" for that purpose. A comet is seen at Easter-time.
838	Al Motassem defeats Theophilus and retaliates the fate of Sozopetra on Amorium. Louis forms a league between his sons Lothaire and Charles; death of his son Pepin. The rebellion in Spain ended by the surrender of Toledo. The Danes sail up the Loire and ravage the country as far as Tours; they invade Kent, and infest the marshlands of Lindsey and East Anglia.
839	Louis of Bavaria rebels; deserted by his army, he submits to his father. Death of Bernard, count of Barcelona. The Saracens of Spain fit out a fleet and plunder Marseilles. The Venetians repress the piracy of the Dalmatians; but lose their ships in an attack on the Saracens at Tarento. Theophilus sends ambassadors to invite the assistance of Abderahman and Lothaire against Al Motassem.
840	Death of Louis le Debonnaire, at Ingelheim, June 20, æt. 64; his three sons divide his empire into three independent States, Charles taking France, Lothaire Italy, with the title of emperor, and Louis Bavaria or Germany; but they quarrel about the limits of their respective territories, and the sons of Pepin claim Aquitaine. Louis seizes the German States allotted to Lothaire, who brings an army across the Alps, to assert his rights; negotiations and truces between the three brothers. The kingdom of Poland founded by Piast. Ethelwulf defeated by the Danes at Carrum (Carhamton, in Somersetshire). Death of Claude, bishop of Turin; and of Agobard, former archbishop of Lyons.
841	Louis and Charles unite to resist the pretensions of Lothaire, and defeat him at Fontenat, in Auxerre, June 25; both parties, weakened by this battle, continue ineffectual hostilities. Ronen plundered by the Danes, under Hasting. Nomenoi revolts in Bretagne and takes Rennes and Nantes. Southern Italy distracted by the rival claims of Sicconolfo and Radelgisio to the duchy of Beneventum. Death of Al Motassem; the splendour of the Arabian Caliphate declines.

842	Theophobus rejects the purple offered him by his soldiers, and is beheaded for their crime. Death of Theophilus, Jan. 30; his empress, Theodora, reigns in the name of their son, Michael, et. 5 ; she punishes, by whipping and degradation, John VII., and appoints in his place Methodius I. patriarch of CP.; a council held there, Feb. 19, under her auspices, restores the worship of images. Interview between Louis and Charles at Strashurg; they bind themselves by oath to maintain their league, the former using the German, and the latter the Romance, language. Lothaire agrees to hold a congress at Metz, for settlement of their disputes. The Saracens, invited by Radelgisio to support his cause in Beneventum, establish themselves at Bari. Kenneth completes the subjection of the Picts, whose last chieftain, Wead, is slain in battle. Death of Eginhard, the former secretary of Charlemagne. Death of Eanred, the last nominal king of Northumberland.
843	Treaty of Verdun; the three brothers fix the limits of their territories. Italy, France, and Germany become distinct States. A portion of Germany assigned to Lothaire, between the Rhine and the Mense. The Danes (called by Arabian writers Magioges, " people of Gog and Magog ,") land at Lisbon from fifty-four ships, and carry off a rich booty. Continued strife in Southern Italy; siege of Beneventum by Sicolfio. Alfonso dies at Oviedo, et. 85 .
844	The diet of Thionville confirms the territorial settlement made in the preceding year at Verdun. Lothaire gives the title of king of Italy to his son Louis, who is crowned at Rome. On the death of Pope Gregory, his successor, Ruccaporel (Pig's cheek), takes the name of Sergius II. Ramiro defeats the Saracens at Clavigo, near Calagurris (Calahorra). The Danes infest the neighbourhood of Cadiz and Seville; Aberahman fits out a fleet to resist them.
845	The Panticians, persecuted by Theodora, defend themselves, and fortify Tephric. Bogoris, king of the Bulgarians, negotiates with her and with Louis of Germany. Pepin establishes his authority in the greater part of Aquitain, and Nomenol defeats Charles in Bretagne. Misenum taken by the Saracens. The Danes repulsed at the mouth of the Parret. Ratramn or Bertram writes against Transubstantiation. John Scotus Erigena the founder of scholastic theology.
846	The Saracens advance to the walls of Rome, and after plundering the country, return and lay siege to Gaeta. The Danes, repulsed in Galicia by Ramiro, take the island of Noirmoutier, on the coast of Vendée. Spain afflicted by a great drought and swarms of locusts. Ignatius, patriarch of CP.
847	The three brothers repress some growing jealousies by a conference at Mersen, near Maestrecht. The Saracens driven from the siege of Gaeta by a violent storm. Death of the caliph Al Wathek. Aberahman relieves the distress in Spain by a remission of taxes and the construction of aqueducts and fountains. Rahanus Maurus, abbot of Fulda, made archbishop of Mentz. The monk Gottschalk raises the Predestinarian controversy. Earthquake in Italy.
848	Louis, king of Italy, drives the Saracens out of Beneventum, and divides the duchy between the two rivals. Pope Leo adds a new quarter to the city of Rome, by surrounding the Vatican with walls. Bretagne independent under Nomenol. A council at Mentz condemns the doctrines of Gottschalk, and sends him to Hlocmar, archbishop of Rheims.
849	The Saracen pirates range at will through the Mediterranean; they are defeated at the mouth of the Tiber by the combined fleets of Naples, Gaeta, and Amalphi. Leo fortifies Porto at the entrance of the river. Birth of Ethelwulf's youngest son, Alfred. Gottschalk sentenced by the council of Quercy to be flogged and to perpetual imprisonment.
850	Pepin strengthens himself in Aquitain by leagues with Saracens and Normans. Rôric, a nephew of Harold (see A.D. 826), collects a piratical armament in Friesland, with which he attacks other coasts; Lothaire purchases security for his own lands, by granting Durstadt to him. The Saracens land in Provence and plunder Arles. Aberahman paves Cordova and builds new palaces there; he punishes severely his Christian subjects who speak against Mahomet. Death of Ramiro. Prudentius, bishop of Troyes, writes his annals and epistles. Druthmar, a disciple of Ratramn, writes a grammatical commentary on Matthew's Gospel.

851	Charles recovers Aquitain, and imprisons Pepin at Soissons. The Danes ascend the Rhine with 252 ships, and plunder Ghent, Cologne, Treves, and Aix-la-Chapelle. A band of the same people defeated by ealdorman Ceorl, at Wieganebeorh (Wemburg, near Plymouth). Another band, repulsed by Athelstan at Sandwich, afterwards take the island of Thanet and winter there. Roric, with 350 sail, arrives in the Thames, puts to flight Beortwulf, king of Mercia, pillages Canterbury and London, but is at last defeated by Ethelwulf, with great slaughter, at Ockley, in Surrey. Hériapoé succeeds his father, Nomenoi, in Bretagne.
852	Unsuccessful siege of Bari, by Louis. The pope completes and consecrates his new town, which he names the Leonine City. He plants Corsican refugees in the deserted town of Porto. Death of Abderahman, æt. 65, leaving forty-five sons and forty-two daughters by his numerous wives. His son and successor, Muhamad, sends his general Musa to invade France, with whom Charles concludes an ignominious peace. The same general is defeated and wounded at Alhaida, by Ordonio, who then assists a revolt raised by the people of Toledo.
853	Muhamad defeats his rebellious subjects and their Christian allies, near Toledo, and lays siege to the city. Revolt of Musa and his son, Lohia, at Saragossa. The Danes seize Nantes and Tonn. They maintain their ground in Thanet, against the men of Kent and Surrey. Ethelwulf defeats Rotri Mawr (Roderic the Great), king of the Welsh Cymri, and penetrates to the isle of Anglesea. He gives his daughter Ethelswith in marriage to Burhred, king of Mercia, and sends his son Alfred to Rome, who is anointed king by the pope. Ansgar returns to Sweden, and converts king Olof. Fabulous period of pope Joan.
854	The people of Aquitain offer their duchy to a son of Louis of Germany; but Pepin, having escaped from prison, places himself once more at their head. Muhamad leaves his son Almondhir to blockade Toledo, and returns to Cordova. The predestinarian controversy produces violent altercations. Gottschalk's tenets are attacked by Hinemar and Scotus Erigena, and defended by Prudentius, Florus Magister, and Remigius, archbishop of Lyons. With the exception of a few leading ecclesiastics, universal ignorance now prevails in Christendom.
855	Death of Lothaire, Sept. 28. His eldest son, Louis, is king of Italy and emperor of the West; the second, Lothaire, has the countries between the Rhine and Meuse, which take from him the name of Lotharingen (now Lorraine), and the youngest, Charles, has Provence. The Toledans drive their besiegers back to Talavera, whence they, in their turn, are compelled to retire within their own walls. Ethelwulf visits Rome, with his son Alfred; he remains there a year, restores the Anglo-Saxon school, and confirms the Rome-scot (afterwards Peter's pence). On the death of Leo, the papacy is contested by Benedict and Anastasius; the former prevails. A band of Danes keep the isle of Sheppey through the winter.
856	Ethelwulf visits Charles the Bald, and marries his daughter, Judith, æt. 12, at Verberie-sur-Oise; on his return to England, Alstan, bishop of Sherbourne, and Eanwulf, ealdorman of Somerset, force him to resign the crown of Wessex to his son Ethelbald. The emperor Louis and his wife, Angilberga, visit Venice. The Normans, under Hasting, carry their depredations as far as Paris. Unsuccessful siege of Bari by the Beneventines. Ado, archbishop of Vienne. Death of Rabauus Maurus. Inundation and pestilence at Rome.
857	The emperor Michael takes the government into his own hands, shuts his mother up in a convent, appoints his uncle, Bardas, Cæsar, and indulges intemperate habits, which acquire for him the surname of "the drunkard;" he deposes Ignatius, and appoints Photius patriarch of CP. The Venetians take Comacchio, to revenge an insult to a relative of their dogs.
858	On the death of Hériapoé, the Bretons continue to assert their independence, under Solomon. The Normans establish themselves on the Oise. While Charles is unsuccessfully employed against these two enemies, his brother Louis invades France, but is persuaded to withdraw his forces, by their nephew Lothaire. Toledo submits to Muhamad. Garcias, a descendant of Aznar, count of Arragon; Sancho, surnamed Arista, founds an independent state in Navarre. Death of Ethelwulf. Ethelbald marries his step-mother, Judith.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

- 859 Louis sends Teuton, abbot of Fulda, to the emperor and the pope, with an explanation of his late proceedings, which his brother Charles still resents. Vanilon, archbishop of Sens, censured for his treason. Pope Nicholas asserts the genuineness of the forged Decretals, and imposes them on the ignorance of the age. The Normans despoil many inland districts of France. Ethelbald compelled by his people to divorce Judith, who is allowed to sell her "morgengift" and return to her father. The Magyoges (see A.D. 843), with a fleet of sixty ships, again devastate the coasts of Spain.
- 860 Ordonio strengthens his kingdom. Muhammad, unable to make any impression in that quarter, turns his arms against Navarre and Arragon, where he gains some fortresses. Death of Ethelbald; his brother Ethelbert succeeds. A large body of Danes, led by Weland from the banks of the Somme, land at Southampton and ravage Winchester; they are repulsed by the ealdormen Osric and Ethelwulf. Ignatius appeals to the pope, who sends legates to CP. to inquire into the appointment of Photius. Bogoris, king of the Bulgarians, converted to Christianity. A severe winter; the Adriatic frozen. Iceland discovered by the Northmen.
- 861 Al Mostanser instigates the Turkish guards to murder his father, Al Motawakkel, and is raised by them to the caliphate. A band of sea-rovers, called Waräger, under Ruric (Röric? see A.D. 850), land near Lake Ladoga, and establish themselves there. Death of Swithun, bishop of Winchester. Ordonio takes Salamanca and Coria.
- 862 Charles the Bald disturbed by the short rebellions of his sons Louis and Charles; his daughter, Judith, widow of Ethelwulf, is carried off by Baldwin, who obtains her father's pardon, and is created count of Flanders. Carloman revolts against his father, Louis of Germany. Lothaire divorces Teutberga, and marries his concubine Waldrada; the archbishops of Cologne and Treves support him in the council of Aix-la-Chapelle against the condemnation of pope Nicholas and Hincmar of Rheims. The pope's legates at CP., without his sanction, confirm the appointment of Photius. Ruric conquers Novogorod and Klow, and becomes grand duke of Russia. The Ungri (Hungarians) obtain a permanent settlement in Pannonia. Death of Ordonio, Dec. 27. Accession of Alfonso the Great. The rebellion of Omar Ben Hafsun enables the Navarrese and Arragonese to regain their lost ground. Al Mostanser killed by the Turkish guards, who place Al Mostain on the throne.
- 863 Death of Charles of Provence; his brothers divide his kingdom. Gorm conquers Jutland. Nicholas annuls Lothaire's marriage, excommunicates the archbishops of Cologne and Treves, deposes Photius, and declares Ignatius to be the patriarch of CP. Harold Harfagr, king of Norway.
- 864 An edict of Charles the Bald, for the destruction of fortified castles, disregarded by his nobles. Nicholas asserts his exclusive right to appoint and depose bishops. The sovereigns and prelates of France and Germany resist his claim. The emperor Louis occupies Rome with an armed force, but fails in his object. The doge of Venice assassinated. Christianity, first introduced into Russia, makes little progress.
- 865 Charles takes Pepin and reduces Aquitaine. Lothaire submits to the papal decree, and is for a time reconciled to Teutberga, but soon recalls Waldrada. The Saracens of Bari commit great depredations in Italy. A naval armament of the Russians against CP. dispersed by a storm. Zeld, the grandson of Muhammad, and his army, treacherously massacred by Omar Ben Hafsun. A great drought in Spain. The Danes occupy Thanet, and ravage East Kent. Bertario, abbot of Monte Casino, poet and grammarian. Death of Ansgar, archbishop of Hamburg and Bremen, and of Paschasius Radbert, abbot of Corvey.
- 866 The emperor Michael causes his uncle Bardas to be assassinated by Basil the Macedonian, to whom he gives the title of Cæsar. Almondhir, son of Muhammad, storms Rosas and disperses the army of Omar, who escapes and conceals himself in the mountains. The emperor Louis assembles a large force in Southern Italy against the Saracens. Invasion of East Anglia by a numerous body of Danes. Al Mostain murdered by the Turkish guard.

867	Michael III. assassinated, Sep. 24, by Basil, who ascends the throne of the East. Photinus assembles a council and excommunicates pope Nicholas; he is afterwards himself deposed by Basil, and Ignatius restored to the patriarchate. Lothaire assists Louis with an army against the Saracens. Charles sends his son, Louis the Stammerer, to govern Aquitaine. Eberhard bequeaths the duchy of Friuli to his son Unroco, by whose early death it passes to his brother Berenger. Muhamad sends an army by sea to attack Galicia; his fleet is wrecked at the mouth of the Minho; Alfonso pushes his conquests beyond Salamanca. Death of pope Nicholas, who leaves the church of Rome more powerful than ever before. The Danes, after wintering in East Anglia, go beyond the Humber and take York. Death of Alstan, bishop of Sherbourne.
868	Louis commences the siege of Bari. Basil defends Ragusa and Dalmatia against the Saracens. Chrysocheir, leader of the Paulicians, overruns Asia Minor and pillages Nicomedia, Ancyra, and Ephesus. The Toulunides possess Egypt. The Spanish Mohammedans defeated in an attempt to take Pampeluna. Nottingham taken by the Danes; they are besieged there by Burhred, Ethelred, and his brother Alfred, who allow them to return to York with all their booty. Death of Ratramn. Anastasius the Librarian writes the life of Nicholas I.
869	Basil sends a fleet to assist in the siege of Bari, and offers terms to the Paulicians, which they reject. Lothaire visits Rome to conciliate the pope; on his return, he dies at Piacenza, Aug. 10. Charles the Bald occupies Lorraine. Louis of Germany and the emperor Louis both assert their right of succession to the vacant throne. Al Motaz, endeavouring to remove his Turkish guards, is deposed and slain by them. Alfred, et. 19—20, is "secondary," or assistant regent to his brother. The Danes destroy Bardney in Lindsey; are defeated in Kesteven, on St. Maurice's day, Sept. 22, by ealdorman Algar; are reinforced by Guntrum; Algar slain in a second battle; Croyland and Medehamstede (Peterborough) plundered. The eighth general council, held at C.P., confirms the deposition of Photius, and anathematizes all Iconoclasts. Gottschalk (see A.D. 849) dies in his prison.
870	Treaty between Charles the Bald and Louis of Germany for the division of Lothaire's kingdom; pope Hadrian makes vain efforts to secure a share for the emperor Louis. The Saracens repulsed in an attempt to relieve Bari; they take the island of Malta. Death of the rebel Musa, and surrender of Saragossa to Muhamad. Basil drives the Paulicians out of Asia Minor, and besieges Tephrike. The Bulgarians reject the supremacy of the pope, and accept an archbishop from Ignatius. The Danes enter East Anglia under Ingwar and Uhha, descendants of Ragnar Lodbrok (see A.D. 794), and take Thetford; Edmund, titular king of the country, slain by them; is afterwards canonized. The Turkish guards again create a new caliph, and kill Al Mohtadi. Death of Ceolnoth, archbishop of Canterbury; Athelred succeeds him. Emigration of Ingulf to Iceland.
871	Capture of Bari. Many revolts and disorders follow in Southern Italy. The emperor Louis and empress Angilberga are treacherously surprised in Beneventum by Adelgisio, and detained several days in captivity. Hincmar encourages Charles the Bald to resist the authority assumed by the pope over the bishops of France. Fall of Tephrike and death of Chrysocheir; the Paulicians, dispersed, carry their tenets into Europe. Lobia, son of Muza, persists in rebellion. The Danes proceed to the south of the Thames, where nine great battles are fought against them at Reading, Englefield, Wilton, and other places. Bagsac, one of their kings, is slain, and nine of their jarls; a treaty of peace for Wessex is made with them. Death of Ethelred, April 23, and accession of Alfred the Great.
872	Louis of Germany relinquishes to the emperor Louis his portion of Lorraine. The Saracens bring a large force into Italy and besiege Salerno. Almondhir carries on an active warfare against Alfonso, but is successfully resisted. The Danes, under Hlealfdene, take London; Burhred makes peace with them for Mercia, and pays them tribute. Yaconb Ebn Seis, the brazier, supplants the Taherites in Persia, and founds the Soffarian dynasty. Basil disciplines the army, improves the finances, and reforms the empire.

873	On the approach of the emperor Louis with an army, the Saracens raise the siege of Salerno; they land in Calabria, and commit great depredations. Basil and the pope divert Louis from his intention of revenging himself on Adelgisio. Italy, France, and Germany laid waste by locusts. A terrible drought suspends all warlike operations in Spain. The Danes, after an incursion into Northumberland, winter at Yorksey, in Lindsey. Organs introduced into the churches of Germany.
874	Almondhir defeated by Alfonso, near the river Urbicns. The Danes conquer Mercia, and set up Ceolwulf as their tributary king. Burhred dies at Rome, and his queen Ethelswith at Pavia. Basil recovers many provinces of Asia Minor from the Saracens.
875	Death of the emperor Louis, Aug. 12; Charles the Bald and Louis of Germany contend for the succession; the former, by granting new privileges to the church of Rome, obtains the support of the pope, and is acknowledged as the king of Italy and emperor of the West. The Saracens besiege Tarentum, ravage Cannes, and defeat Adelgisio, duke of Beneventum. Healfdene leads his men into Northumberland, sets up Ricsig as nominal king, destroys Coldingham, Tynemouth, and Lindisfarne, and makes inroads into Strathclyde. Guthrum, Oskeyl, and Amund, with another division of Danes, station themselves at Cambridge. Alfred fits out a fleet and conquers in a sea-fight. Harold Harfagr overcomes the Vikings in Hasunford, and subdues the southern part of Norway. Rollo, son of Rognwald, goes to England. Death of Ado, archbishop of Vienne.
876	Louis of Germany dies at Francfort-on-the-Maine, Aug. 28; division of his kingdom among his three sons; Bavaria to Carloman; Saxony to Louis II. "the Stammerer," and East France (Franconia and Swabia) to Charles "the Fat;" their uncle, Charles the Bald, attempting to dispossess them, is defeated at Andernach, by Louis, Oct. 8. The troops of Basil, called by the citizens of Bari to defend them against the Saracens, retain possession of the place, and found a new province of the eastern empire. Almondhir again attacks Gallieia, and is foiled by Alfonso. Omar Ben Hafsun comes out of his retreat, and recovers all the strong places on the river Segre. The Danes take Wareham and Exeter. Rollo's first settlement in Normandy. Ignatius sends a Greek patriarch to the Christians in Russia. Successful campaign of Basil in Cappadocia and Syria.
877	Basil revises the laws of Justinian, and puts them into the Greek form of the Basilika. The pope and Italian princes call on Charles the Bald to protect them from the Saracens; by creating hereditary benefices and titles, at the diat of Quiercy-sur Oise, he raises a large army, with which he marches into Italy; at Pavia, hearing that Carloman was advancing with a strong force to claim the kingdom, he retreats into Savoy, and, while crossing Mount Cenis, dies suddenly, Oct. 13, set 54; his death attributed by some to a fever, by others to poison. No emperor of the West for three years. Carloman acquires the crown of Italy; the pope, who opposes him, is driven from Rome by Lambert, duke of Spoleto, and takes refuge in France. Boso, duke of Lombardy and Provence, brother of the empress Richilda, marries Ermengarda, only child of the late emperor Louis II. The Saracens repulsed in an attack on the island of Grado. A large traffic in slaves carried on by the Venetians. Sergius II, duke of Naples, leagues with the Saracens. Fresh swarms of Danes arrive at Wareham and Exeter; others take London and Essex; Alfred defeats their fleet of 120 ships at Swanwic (Swansea). Uuha winters in Dimetia (South Wales). Rollo visits his countrymen in England. Alfred concludes a treaty of peace with the sea-kings at Exeter. Ceolwulf is deposed, and the Danes occupy all Northumberland. Death of Ignatius; Photius again patriarch of CP.
878	Carloman, detained by sickness in Bavaria, deposes Lambert, duke of Spoleto, and Adalbert, of Tuscany, to act for him in Italy. The Saracens take Syracuse again, and complete the conquest of Sicily. Almondhir besieges Zamora, but is driven away by Alfonso. The Danes defeated at Cynwith: lose their war-flag of the Raven; numerous hosts arrive, and Alfred withdraws into the Isle of Athelney; after some months he collects his forces, and defeats the enemy at Ethandun (Eddington). Peace concluded, and Guthrum embraces Christianity, taking the name of Ethelstan. Rollo returns to France.

879	Death of Louis the Stammerer, April 11; his two sons reign conjointly. Carloman of Bavaria disabled by paralysis, his brother, Charles the Fat, takes his place as king of Italy. Boso assumes the title of king of Provence, Arles, and Burgundy. The Danes occupy Chippenham and Fulham. Methodians forbidden by the pope to perform the service of the church for the Slavonians in their own language. The pope and Photius quarrel. Death of Constantine VIII., Basil's eldest son. Death of Ruric; his son, Igor I., set. 14; wardship of Oleg.
880	Death of Carloman of Bavaria; his States are seized by his brother Louis, except Carinthia, which is left to his natural son, Arnulf. The German and French kings make war on Boso and besiege Vienne, which is defended by Ermengarda. Gunthrum-Ethelstan divides East Anglia among his followers. Hasting conducts his band from Fulham into Beilgum. Alfred, by treaty, gives the Danes in England equal rights, and they acknowledge his supremacy. Methodius obtains leave to use the Slavonic tongue in churches, if he first reads the gospel in Latin or Greek. The sun eclipsed, March 14.
881	Charles the Fat, emperor of the West. Alfonso's victories followed by the embassy of Duleidius, and a truce of three years. A great earthquake in Spain. Issembard, lord of La Ferté, persuades Guntrum to invade France, where he is defeated by Louis III., at Jaucourt, on the Somme.
882	Death of Louis of Saxony, Jan. 20; his brother, Charles the Fat, king of all Germany. Hasting, defeated by Louis III. on the Loire, attempts to land in Wessex, but is repulsed by Alfred's complete naval victory. Death of Louis III., Aug. 3. Carloman sole king of France. Hasting, worsted at Norden, in East Friesland, joins his countrymen, who had occupied Treves and Cologne. Battle of Haslo. Charles gives up Friesland to the Danes. Vienne capitulates to Carloman. Ermengarda permitted to return to Autun. Victory of Muhamad at Aybar. Garcias, king of Navarre, and Omar Ben Hafsun, slain. Death of Hincmar, archbishop of Rheims. Albategni, the Arabian astronomer, observes the autumnal equinox, Sept. 19. Oleg takes Smolensko.
883	A year of peace for England. Gunthred rules the Danes in Northumberland. Alfred sends Sighelm and Athelstan on missions to Rome and the Christian church in India. Calib, son of Ben Hafsun, leagues with the Franks. The Saracens destroy the abbey of Monte Casino, and murder the abbot, Bertario.
884	Carloman dies of a wound received from a wild boar; his brother (Charles the Simple) being only four years old, Charles the Fat unites France under his sceptre, with Germany and Italy. The Danes go up the Scheldt to Louvain; others land in Kent, and besiege Rochester; Alfred drives them back to their ships.
885	The emperor Charles protests against the consecration of the new pope, without his consent. Godfrey, chieftain of the Danes in Friesland, is invited to a conference, and treacherously slain. Battle of Hlona Xariz in the Pyrenees; Abdelhamid, general of the Saracens, taken, and his army cut to pieces. Alfred's ships defeated by the Danes at the mouth of the Stour, in East Anglia.
886	Death of Basil, March 1; his son and successor, Leo, banishes Photius, and appoints Stephen I. patriarch of CP. Long siege of Paris by the Danes; Endes and Robert defend the city; the emperor Charles pays a large sum of money, and the besiegers retire to Sens. Muhamad dies, set. 65. Calib Hafsun takes Saragossa and Toledo. Alfred repairs London, and is said to have founded the university of Oxford; he improves the laws and government of England. The Ungri give the name of Hungary to Pannonia. Death of John Scotus Erigena, after having been invited to England by Alfred.
887	The German nobles depose Charles and elect Arnulf, natural son of Carloman of Bavaria. Death of Boso; great confusion in France and Italy. The dogs of Venice resigns; his successor, Pietro, falls in a battle with the Slavonians.
888	Death of Charles the Fat, Jan. 12. Endes, king of France. Louis, son of Boso, succeeds to Arles, or Lower Burgundy, under the tutelage of his mother, Ermengarda. Rudolf founds, in Switzerland and Savoy, the kingdom of Transjurane Burgundy. Berenger, duke of Friuli, and Guy, duke of Spoieto, contend for the throne of Italy. Almondhir slain in battle against Calib. Alfred begins his translations from Latin into Anglo Saxon.

889	The sons of Abdallah rebel, and defeat his army near Jaen. Guy, after two victories over Berenger, is elected king by a diet at Pavia; they both exercise royal power. The Ungri are joined by the Magyars, under Arfrad and other tribes; they become powerful, and defeat Simeon, king of the Bulgarians.
890	Southern Italy constituted a province of the Greek empire (see A.D. 878), and called Lombardia. Bohemia, first organized by its duke, Borzivoi, is given by Arnulf to his natural son, Zwentibold, duke of Moravia. Ermengarda obtains the protection of Arnulf for her son, who is crowned at Aries. Death of Adalbert I., duke of Tuscany. Revolt of the Carmathians in Eastern Arabia. Death of Guthrum Ethelstan in East Anglia; Eric succeeds him as chief of the Danes in that province. Plegmund, archbishop of Canterbury, supposed to have compiled the early part of the Saxon Chronicle. England tranquil; Alfred's wise measures produce security and order.
891	Guy of Spoleto crowned emperor of the West, Feb. 21. Arnulf defeats the Normans near Louvain. The Bohemians assert their independence, and expel Zwentibold. Leo's general, Simbaticius, conquers Beneventum. Death of Photius. Alfred's daughter, Elfrith, married to Baldwin II., count of Flanders.
892	Fulke, bishop of Rheims, proclaims Charles IV., the Simple, king of France. Eudes drives his young competitor into Germany. The principal towns in Italy are fortified and defended by the citizens. George, the Patrician, succeeds Simbaticius, and fails in his attempt on Capua. Abderahman, son of Abdallah, leads the royal army against his brother, Muhamad. The tribe of Hamadan acquires independence in Mesopotamia. Ismail Samini, sultan of Turkestan. Guthred originates the palatine privileges of Durham. A comet is seen.
893	Arnulf employs Hungarian mercenaries to suppress the violence of Zwentibold; after which they harass Italy. Berenger applies to Arnulf for assistance. The Greeks foiled at Salerno. Hasting and Blörn Jærnside bring large bodies of Danes into Kent, and fortify Milton. Antonius II, patriarch of CP.
894	Arnulf's successful campaign in Northern Italy. Death of Guy; his son, Lambert, emperor and king. Abderahman overcomes his rebellious brothers; Muhamad dies of his wounds, and Almutaraf is assassinated. Borzivoi, duke of Bohemia, converted to Christianity. Alfred defeats the Danes at Farnham and Bemfleet, and compels them to raise the siege of Exeter; he restores to Hasting his wife and sons, who were made prisoners.
895	Arnulf extends his conquests in Italy to Lucca. The Danes avoid an encounter with Alfred; some of them retire into the Isle of Mersey, others up the river Lea. Arnulf gives Lotharingen to Zwentibold. Nicholas I, patriarch of CP.
896	Arnulf takes possession of Rome, and is crowned emperor of the West; he besieges Spoleto, which is vigorously defended by Agetruda, Lambert's mother; Berenger, and Adalbert, duke of Tuscany, conspire against him; on his retirement into Bavaria, the Italian princes recover their States. Berenger and Lambert divide Lombardy. Beneventum regains independence under its duke, Radelgisio. Eudes relinquishes the eastern province of France to Charles the Simple, and recognizes his title. The Danes, having lost all their ships in the river Lea, march to Bridgenorth, on the Severn. The Bulgarians defeated by the Hungarians in three bloody battles. Pope Stephen declares the election of his predecessor, Formosus, invalid, disinters his body, and throws it into the Tiber.
897	The congress of Pavia ratifies the treaty between Berenger and Lambert. Pope Stephen imprisoned and strangled. Alfred constructs a powerful navy, defeats the Danes near the Isle of Wight, and puts a final stop to their incursions.
898	Death of Eudes. Charles the Simple, sole king of France. Adalbert, duke of Tuscany, rebels against Lambert, is surprised, and made prisoner. Lambert dies suddenly at the end of the year. Berenger adds Spoleto to his former possessions, and is undisputed king of Italy; he releases Adalbert, and restores Tuscany to him. Contest for the papal chair between John IX, and Sergius; the former, after his consecration, calls a council, which annuls all the proceedings of Stephen against Formosus. Sergius is banished. Death of Elstan, bishop of London.

1038	Conrad dispossesses Pandulf of Capua, and gives it to Guimar; he confirms the Normans in their fortress of Aversa; they are employed by the Greek general, Maniaces, in his invasion of Sicily. William de Hauteville (Bras de fer) distinguishes himself. Disease attacks Conrad's army, and compels him to return to Germany. Death of Gunhild. Ramiro, on the death of his brother Gonsalves, annexes Soharra to Aragon. Almondar, the Moorish king of Saragossa, assassinated at Granada. Death of Stephen, king of Hungary. Bretislav, duke of Bohemia, invades Poland. Togrul Beg, grandson of Seljuk, expels the Gaznevites and conquers Persia. Hardacanute prepares to claim the throne of England, and arrives in Flanders. Death of Ethelnoth, archbishop of Canterbury, and Elfric, bishop of Elmham; Eadsine succeeds the former.
1039	Death of Conrad at Utrecht, June 4. The siege of Milan raised. The Normans, disappointed of their reward in Sicily, return into Italy, elect Arduin for their leader, and seize many places in Apulia. Defeat of an English army by the Welsh prince Griffith, son of Llewellyn. Death of Harold at Oxford, March 17. Hardacanute sets sail from Het Zwyn (Sluys), enters the Thames, and is acknowledged as king by all parties. Duncan, king of Scotland, defeated and slain by Macbeth. Battle of Clontarf, near Dublin; the Danes totally defeated. Brian Boroinhe and his son, Murdoch, fall in the hour of victory.
1040	Maniaces deprived of his command in Sicily; nearly the whole island recovered by the Saracens. Rainulf and Arduin establish their head quarters at Melfi. Reconciliation between the emperor Henry and archbishop Aribert. Ferdinand takes Viseu and Coimbra.
1041	Death of the emperor Michael IV. The Normans defeat the Greek catapan Dulchianus, near the river Labento, and at Canne. All the nobility of Milan, and the archbishop, are driven out by the populace. Hardacanute levies oppressive taxes on the English; tumults in Worcestershire. Edward, the son of Ethelred, recalled into England from Normandy. The Poles call Casimir from his monastery to reign over them. Peter, king of Hungary, deposed, and Samuel Abo usurps the throne.
1042	Expulsion of Michael V.; Zoe and Theodora's joint reign of two months; the latter retires. Zoe marries Constantine XII. (see Eckhel), and makes him emperor; twelve Norman chieftains divide among them the greater part of Apulia, with Melfi for their common capital; Maniaces is sent again to command against them. Milan blockaded by the expelled nobles. Ramiro attacks Navarre, and is defeated by Garcias. Hardacanute falls in a fit during a feast at Lambeth, and dies, June 8. The Saxon line restored by Edward the Confessor. Magnus the Good, king of Norway, obtains the crown of Denmark.
1043	Revolt of Maniaces; driven out of Italy by the Greeks and Normans, he is killed at Durazzo. CP. is for the fourth time attacked by the Russians. The emperor Henry marries Agnes, daughter of William, duke of Poitiers. Marriage of Edward the Confessor to Godwin's daughter, Edgitha; his mother, Emma, is incited by Stigand, bishop of Elmham, to plot against him; she is deprived of her wealth, and the bishop of his see. Death of Gehwar, king of Cordova; quiet accession of his son. Michael I. Cerularius patriarch of CP.
1044	Peace restored at Milan. The Normans, in the pay of Guimar, prince of Salerno and Capua, invade Calabria. The Roman people expel Benedict IV. for his vices. Silvester III. is pope for three months. Gregory VI. buys the papal dignity. Eadsine resigns the archbishopric of Canterbury, which is given to Siward, abbot of Abingdon. Stigand restored.
1045	Sweyn Estrithson, son of Ulf Jarl, and Canute's sister, Estritha, having failed in his attempts on the crowns of England and Denmark, is received at Bruges, by Baldwin, count of Flanders; his sister, Gunhild, and her sons, banished from England. The Wends of North Germany invade Jutland, and are defeated by Magnus. Ferdinand of Castile exacts tribute from his Moorish neighbours. Death of Aribert, archbishop of Milan; of Elfward, bishop of London, and Alwyn of Winchester; the latter is succeeded by Stigand.
1046	Henry enters Italy with his army. Council of Sutri. the three rival popes set aside, and Clement II. elected. Henry receives the imperial crown at Rome. De-

1054	Death of Constantine Monomachus; Theodora resumes the sceptre of the East. Breach between the churches of Rome and CP. Leo IX. and Michael Cerularius mutually excommunicate each other. Hildebrand begins to have great influence at Rome. Death of Leo IX., April 19; the papal throne vacant nearly a year. Death of Jaroslav of Russia. Marriage of Godfrey, duke of Lorraine, to Beatrice, widow of Boniface, duke of Tuscany. Defeat of the Scots under Macbeth, by earl Siward, at Lanfanan. Aldred, bishop of Worcester, sent to Cologne, to bring home Edward, son of Edmund Ironside.
1056	Death of Theodora, the last of the Macedonian dynasty, Aug. 22, æt. 76; Michael Stratiotus succeeds her. Death of the emperor Henry III., Oct. 5, æt. 39; he is succeeded by his son, æt. 6, under the regency of the empress Agnes, assisted by pope Victor. Leofgar, bishop of Hereford, defeated and slain by the Welsh, under Griffith, at Clebury; Harold, and Leofric, earl of Coventry, repel the invaders, and bring them to terms of peace. Battle of Dunsinane; Macbeth loses his crown and his life.
1057	Michael VI. resigns the Eastern Empire to Isaac Comnena. Baldwin, count of Flanders, and Godfrey, duke of Lorraine, submit to the imperial authority; Beatrice is restored to her husband. Death of Humphrey; Robert Guiscard assumes the command of the Normans in Apulia. Death of pope Victor. Edward, son of Edmund Ironside, returns to England, and dies soon after; Harold, son of Earl Godwin, is designated heir to the throne. Hildebrand is made a cardinal. Peter Damiano appointed bishop of Ostia. Cedrenus writes his History. Death of Leofric, earl of Coventry.
1058	Roger, brother of Robert Guiscard, arrives in Italy; they conquer Calabria. Robert divorces Alberada, the mother of Bohemond. On the death of Stephen, the bishop of Veletri is irregularly elected pope, and takes the name of Benedict X. Hildebrand returns from Germany, and with Peter Damiano, and the concurrence of the empress Agnes, assembles a council at Sienna, to choose another pope. Eifgar, son of Leofric, is banished; with the aid of a Welsh prince, Griffith, and a Norwegian fleet, he obtains the restoration of his rank and lands.
1059	Isaac Comnens deposes Michael Cerularius, and appoints Constantine III. patriarch of CP., after which he himself retires into a monastery, and resigns the empire to Constantine Ducas. The bishop of Florence elected pope by the council of Sienna, as Nicholas II.; he seeks the friendship of the Normans, gives Capua to Richard, count of Aversa, and the title of duke of Apulia and Calabria to Robert Guiscard. The council of Rome decrees that future popes shall be elected by the cardinals, but confirmed by the people and clergy of Rome, and by the emperor. Berenger subscribes at Rome a recantation of his heresy, which he retracts on his return to France; fresh controversy between him and Lanfranc. Nicholas first disputes the right of the emperor to appoint the bishops of Germany. The deposed pope, Benedict, is degraded and confined in a monastery. Hildebrand attains the dignity of archdeacon of the Romish church.
1060	Death of Henry I. king of France; his son, Phillip, eight years old, succeeds, with Baldwin, count of Flanders, for regent. Robert Guiscard, and his brother, Roger, take Reggio, and complete the conquest of Calabria. Andrew killed in battle by his brother, Bela, who mounts the throne of Hungary.

1061	The Normans invade Sicily and take Messina. Harold's brother, Tostig, earl of Northumberland, accompanies Aldred, archbishop of York, to Rome, and compels the pope to confirm his appointment to that see, by threatening to stop the payment of Peter's pence. On the death of Nicholas, Hildebrand incites the cardinals to elect Alexander II. without the imperial consent; he is supported by the Norman princes, by Godfrey, the acting duke of Tuscany, and Desiderius, abbot of Monte Casino. The empress Agnes nominates the bishop of Parma, Cadalo, as antipope; his cause is maintained by the count of Tusculum, the cardinal Ugo Bianco, and the bishops of Lombardy; great ferment in Germany and Italy. In Tostig's absence, Malcolm invades Northumberland.
1063	Robert Guiscard takes Tarentum. Roger totally defeats a numerous army of Moors in Sicily. The naval forces of Pisa break into the harbour of Palermo and carry off a rich booty. Cadalo re-asserts his claim to the papacy, and takes possession of S. Angelo, in which he is besieged. Death of Togrul Beg; his nephew, Alp Arslan, succeeds him. Harold and Tostig defeat the Welsh; death of their prince, Griffith. A council at Rome condemns the prevailing simoniacal dealings in church benefices and the licentious lives of the priesthood. Adalbert, archbishop of Bremen, insinuates himself into the favour of Henry IV. Xiphillin, patriarch of CP. Michael Psellus educates the son of Constantine Ducas. Adam of Bremen writes his history.
1064	The Normans subdue the greater part of Sicily and besiege Palermo, but without success. Ferdinand of Castile achieves his last victories over the Moors of Catalonia and Valencia. Almamonn, king of Toledo, seizes Valencia, and deposes his son-in-law, Almudafar. Pilgrimage of Siegfried, archbishop of Mentz, and other prelates, to the Holy Land, accompanied by 7000 armed men.
1065	Death of Ferdinand, Dec. 27; by his will, his territories are divided among his three sons; Sancho, the eldest of them, inherits Castile. Cadalo escapes from the castle of S. Angelo. Hildebrand is the prime mover of the papal proceedings. Desiderius enlarges and decorates the monastery of Monte Casino. Rebellion in Northumberland and Wales; Tostig takes flight to the court of Baldwin, in Flanders; Harold restores tranquillity. Dedication of Westminster Abbey, by its founder, Edward the Confessor; the Anglo-Saxon laws are collected and digested by his orders. Alp Arslan conquers Armenia.
1066	Death of Edward the Confessor, Jan. 5. Harold proclaimed king, Jan. 6; his brother, Tostig, lands at Scarborough, with a large army of Flemings and Norwegians; they are totally routed by Harold, Sep. 25, at Stanford Bridge, on the river Derwent; Tostig, and Harold Hardrada, king of Norway, are slain. A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
1084	Rome surrenders to Henry, March 21. Clement III. is consecrated, and crowns the emperor, March 31. Gregory is besieged in S. Angelo, on the approach of Robert Guiscard, Henry and Clement retire into Lombardy. Robert embarks again for Aithania, and obtains a great victory over the Greek and Venetian fleets. Vitale Faiedro, by his intrigues and bribes, causes the doge to be deposed, and is himself elected to fill the place. Alfonso takes the city of Toledo. Aben Omar, accused of treachery, takes refuge among the Christians. The Carthusian order founded by Bruno, at La Chartreuse. Nicholas III. patriarch of CP.
1085	Death of Robert Guiscard, in Cephalonia, July 17; abandonment of his enterprize, and division of his States between his sons, Bohemond and Roger. Death of Gregory VII., at Salerno, May 25; the papacy vacant till the following year. Aben Omar captured by Ahn Abed, and beheaded.
1088	Guelf, duke of Bavaria, with the Saxons and Swabians, besieges Würzburg; Henry attacks them, and is defeated. Desiderius, abbot of Monte Casino, is elected pope, and takes the office very reluctantly with the name of Victor III. The Mohammedans of Spain invite Yusef, the chief of the Almoravides of Africa, to assist them. Alfonso is defeated at Zalacca. The Domesday Book is completed; William visits various parts of his kingdom, and passes over into Normandy. Canute's preparations to invade England are stopped by a revolt of his subjects, in which he is slain, at Odensee. Edgar Atheling retires among the Normans of Apulia. Soliman, the Seljukian of Roum, falls in a battle against Thnthusch, prince of Damascus; he is succeeded by his son, Kilidsch Arslan. Death of Marianus Scotus, monk of Fulda, and writer of Chronicle.
1087	The diet of Spire makes a fruitless effort to restore peace in Germany. Rome alternately occupied and lost by the two rival popes; Victor withdraws to Monte Casino, where he dies, Sept. 16. Yusef returns to Africa; the Christian forces rally under Roderic, the Cid, defeat the Mohammedans at Alcoraza, and take Huesca. William invades France, and soon afterwards dies at Rouen. His eldest son, Robert, inherits Normandy; and his second, William, secures the throne of England. Godfrey of Bouillon created duke of Lower Lorraine. Magnus III., king of Norway.
1088	Angsbuurg taken by Guelf, duke of Bavaria. Henry defeated by Egbert, marquis of Saxony. Death of the imperial pretender, Hermann. Otho, bishop of Ostia, elected pope, March 8, with the title of Urban II. Syracuse taken by Roger; he appeases the dissensions between his nephews Bohemond and Roger. Yusef is re-called into Spain by the Mohammedan princes; their jealousies and discord render his assistance unavailing. Odo rebels in favour of his nephew Robert; he and his partisans are captured by William Rufus in Rochester Castle, and sent to Normandy. Death of the empress Bertha. Death of Berengarius.
1089	Henry excommunicated by Urban; many German princes come over to him. Marriage of the countess Matilda to Guelf V., son of the duke of Bavaria. Gilbert resigns his pretensions to the papacy. Alfonso drives the Mohammedans from the siege of Alid, near Lorca, and compels Yusef to re-embark for Africa. Maine revolts against William Rufus. Death of Lanfranc; William keeps Canterbury and other sees vacant for several years, and appropriates their revenues. Marriage of the emperor Henry to Adelaide, a Russian princess, widow of Otho, marquis of Brandenburg. A violent earthquake in England, Aug. 11. The disease, called St. Anthony's fire, breaks out in Lorraine.
1090	Henry invades Italy, and lays siege to Mantua. Roger completes the conquest of Sicily, and undertakes an expedition against Malta. Yusef returns to Spain with a large army, attacks the Mohammedan princes, and conquers Granada. Hassan, Subah of Nishapur, in Chorasán, collects a band of Carmathians, who are named after him, "Assassins." William Rufus invades Normandy, and takes St. Valery.
1091	Mantua and Ravenna surrender to the emperor Henry. Yusef conquers Seville and Almeria, sends Almoatamad a prisoner to Africa, and becomes supreme ruler in Mohammedan Spain. Peace between William and his brother Robert; Malcolm invades England, and is driven back.

1092	Death of Malek Shah, followed by civil wars and partition of his dominions. William Rufus fortifies Carisle. The Nominalist heresy of Rascellinus condemned by the council of Solissons. Valencia betrayed to the Almoravides by Ahmed Ben Gebaf; king Alcadir slain. The castle of S. Angelo held by Ghibert's party, and his title to the papacy is still asserted by Henry.
1093	Rebellion of the emperor's son Conrad; he is crowned king of Italy at Milan. Yussuf conquers Badajoz, and puts to death king Almetuakel. Malcolm invades England, and is killed near Alnwick, by Roger de Mowbray. Donald Bane usurps the throne of Scotland. William, alarmed by a fit of illness, nominates bishops to the vacant sees; he appoints, for Canterbury, Anselm, a native of Aosta, and abbot of Bec, who had been distinguished in the Nominalist controversy, by writing in support of the Realist doctrines.
1094	The empress Adelaide leaves her husband, and accuses him of ill-treatment before the council of Constance. Philip, king of France, is excommunicated by the councils of Rheims and Autun, for divorcing his queen Bertha, and espousing Bertrade. Peter the Hermit goes on his pilgrimage to Jerusalem. The Cid, in alliance with a body of Mohammedans, retakes Valencia; Ahmed Ben Gebaf is burnt alive. Sancho, king of Aragon and Navarre, falls in battle; he is succeeded by his son Pedro. War renewed in Normandy. Prince Henry returns to England. Duncan, son of Malcolm, is accepted in Scotland as king, is soon afterwards killed, and Donald Bane restored.
1095	Peter, on his return from the Holy Land, is commissioned by Urban to preach a general crusade. Council of Placeutia, March 1, and of Clermont, Nov. 18. Philip and Henry are again excommunicated. All classes, except ecclesiastics, are called upon to take the sign of the cross. Great excitement in France. The Balearic Islands submit to the Almoravides. Guelf V. separates from the countess Matilda; he and his father abandon the pontifical party and join the emperor's. Henry of Besançon marries Alfonso's daughter Theresa, and is created duke of Portugal. Barkiarok, Malek Shah's son, recovers Syria from his uncle Thnthusch. Robert, earl of Northumberland, falls in his rebellion, and is confined in Windsor castle. Marriage of Conrad to Matilda, daughter of Roger, count of Sicily.
1096	Four tumultuary bands of crusaders, numbering together 273,000, depart for Palestine, led by Peter the Hermit, Walter de Pezejo, and his nephew, Walter the Pennyless, the priest Gottschalk, and William the Carpenter. Most of these perish in Hungary and Bulgaria; some return; a few remaining thousands pass the Bosphorus, and are massacred by the sultan Kilidsch Arslan. A more regular military force proceeds, by different routes, under Godfrey of Bouillon, Hugb de Vermandois, Raymond of Toulouse, Stephen of Chartres, Bobemond, prince of Tarentum, and his cousin Tancred, Robert, count of Flanders, Robert, duke of Normandy, who pledges his duchy to his brother William, to raise money for his outfit, and Godfrey's brothers, Eustace and Baldwin. Amalfi recovers her independence. The Fatimite Apbdal expels the sons of Ortok from Jerusalem.
1097	Alexius, suspicious of the crusaders, obtains from their chiefs an oath of fealty. He secures for himself the city of Nicea, conquered by their arms, June 20. Battle of Dorylaeum, July 4. Siege of Antioch, Oct. 21. Quarrel of Tancred and Baldwin in Cilicia. The latter separates from the main army, and founds the principality of Edessa (or Orfa). William Rufus expels Anselm from England, in defiance of the papal legate. Westminster Hall built. Henry protects the German Jews. Death of Albert Azzo, marquis of Lombardy, more than 100 years old; by his first marriage with Cunegonda he was father of Guelf IV., the progenitor of the Brunswick family; and from that with Gar-senda was born Fulk, from whom the family of Este descends. A comet visible, Oct. 1.
1098	Antioch surrenders, June 3. The Turkish general Kerbogha defeated, June 28. Edgar, son of Malcolm, established on the throne of Scotland by Edgar Atheling, with an English army. A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
1136	Lothaire marches into Italy with a large army. The empress Matilda resists Stephen's usurpation, and invades Normandy; David, king of Scotland, supports her cause, but is conciliated by Stephen. Baldwin de Redvers holds out in Exeter; he is brought to terms.
1137	Roger is driven out of Apulia and Calabria. The emperor and pope Innocent, each claims the conquered provinces; they compromise their dispute by jointly creating Rainulph count of Apulia. Lothaire conducts Innocent to Rome, and, on his return to Germany, dies in the Tyrol, Dec. 8. Roger, having recruited his army in Sicily, recovers most part of his lost territories; but sustains a defeat from Rainulph, near Ragnano. Bernard, abbot of Clairvaux, endeavours to mediate between them. Ramiro affiances his daughter Petronilla, only two years old, to Raymond, count of Barcelona; resigns the kingdom of Aragon to them, and retires into a monastery. Death of Louis VI. (le Gros); his son, st. 8, succeeds him. Stephen repels an invasion of the Welsh. Raymond of Poitiers receives the principality of Antioch; it is claimed by Roger, and attacked by the emperor John, who is repulsed with great loss.
1138	Death of the antipope Anacletus; his partisans elect another, whom they style Victor III.: in a few months they all submit to Innocent. Conrad, duke of Franconia, is elected emperor of Germany, and founds the Hohenstaufen dynasty; from his castle of Wihingen, his party take the name of Ghibellins, which is extended to all their supporters in Italy. His opponent, Henry Guelf, is put under the ban of the empire, and deprived of his duchies of Bavaria and Saxony; hence the papal party are called Guelfs (see 1118); long wars and commotions ensue. David, king of Scotland, invades England, and is defeated (Aug. 22) by the earl of Albemarle in the "Battle of the Standard," near Northallerton, in Yorkshire. Boleslas divides Poland among his sons: the eldest, Ladislas, endeavours to deprive his brothers of their shares. Ali summons his son Taksin from Spain, to support him against the Almohades in Africa. Death of the historian, Geoffrey of Monmouth.
1139	Pope Innocent taken prisoner by Roger, near S. Germano; a treaty of peace follows, by which Roger's title is confirmed, and his son created duke of Apulia. Tuscany is taken from Henry Guelf; the people of Saxony maintain his authority, and prepare to restore him in Bavaria; he dies suddenly at Quedlinburg, and transmits his rights to his son, Henry the Lion. Alfonso, duke of Portugal, gains a great victory over the Moors at Onrique, on the river Corbes, and assumes the title of king. The empress Matilda arrives in England, and prepares to assert her claim by arms, assisted by Robert, earl of Gloucester, a natural son of Henry I.
1140	Duke Guelf, uncle of Henry the Lion, defeated by Conrad, at Weinsberg. Arnold of Brescia denounces at Rome the corruptions of the church. Stephen besieges the earl of Chester in Lincoln castle. The Genoese acquire possession of Ventimiglia. The canon law is introduced into England. The council of Sens condemns the doctrines of Abelard. Guarnarius, or Werner, teaches the civil law at Bologna.
1141	Battle of Lincoln, Feb. 2; Stephen defeated and carried away prisoner to Bristol. His brother, the bishop of Winchester, abandons his cause, and crowns Matilda. Robert, earl of Gloucester, afterwards captured, is exchanged for Stephen. Suger, former minister of Louis le Gros, writes the history of that monarch.
1142	Diet of Francfort. Henry the Lion acknowledged duke of Saxony. His rival, Albert, the Bear, created Margrave of Brandenburg. Bavaria given to Henry of Austria; he is opposed by duke Guelf IV., who receives subsidies from the kings of Hungary and Sicily, to assist him in prosecuting his claim. Matilda, besieged in Oxford, escapes to Wallingford. Fuik, king of Jerusalem, killed by a fall from his horse. His son, Baldwin III. st. 13, succeeds under the regency of the queen mother, Melusine. Death of Abelard; he is buried in the monastery of Paraclete, where Eloisa is abbess.
1143	The emperor John, preparing again to attack Antioch, dies, April 8, of a wound received while hunting near Anazarbus. Commotions at Rome. Arnold of Brescia endeavours to restore the senate and ancient form of government.

1169	Milan rebuilt and fortified. The Lombards, the pope, and the Greek emperor, coslesce against the emperor Frederic. Treaty of Montmirail between the kings of England and France. Richard Strongbow, earl of Chepstow, with Maurice Fitzgerald, and other knights, land in Ireland, and take Wexford, Waterford, and Dublin. Shiracouh, master of Egypt, assumes the office of vizir. Waldemar, king of Denmark, takes the island of Rugen. Catania, in Sicily, destroyed by an earthquake. First commercial treaty between the Greek empire and Genoa.
1170	Compromise between Henry and Thomas à Becket, who is permitted to return: he is assassinated, Dec. 29. Failure of Frederic's pacific overtures to the pope. The emperor Manuel's unsuccessful expedition against Damietta. Saladin takes Gaza. Peter Waldo, a citizen of Lyons, founds a preaching society, called afterwards Waldenses.
1171	Henry II. lands with an army at Waterford; his own knights, and many native chiefs, do homage to him for their lands. Two cardinals are sent by the pope to investigate the circumstances of Thomas à Becket's death. The emperor Mannel seizes the property of the Venetiads in his States, and Stephen, king of Hungary, takes from them Zara, Spalatro, and other places in Dalmatia. The Venetians fit out a large fleet, recover Zara, take Ragusa, and attack Negropont. Death of Shiracouh; his nephew, Saladin, becomes supreme in Egypt, nominally as the representative of Noureddin. End of the Fatimite caliphs.
1172	The Venetians fail in their attempt on Chalcia, but take the island of Scios; the plague breaks out in their fleet. Embassy of Henry Dandolo to the Greek emperor. Henry II. involved in great troubles through Becket's death.
1173	Henry II. divides Ireland into counties, and regulates the government; he appears before the papal legates, and receives absolution for Becket's death; his queen, Eleanor, jealous of Fair Rosamond, incites her sons, Henry, Geoffroy, and Richard, to rebel against their father; Louis, king of France, supports them, and William of Scotland invades England. The Venetians return with only seventeen ships of their large fleet, and infect their city with the plague; the citizens revolt; the doge is slain, and Sebastiano Ziani elected in his place. Death of Amalric, king of Jerusalem; his son, Baldwin IV., succeeds, æt. 13; Raymond III., count of Tripoli, is his guardian.
1174	Frederic descends into Italy with a large army; he fails in his attack on Alessandria. Ancona besieged by the archbishop of Mentz and a Venetian fleet; William Adelard, a citizen of Ferrara, and Aldruda, countess of Bertinoro, at their own expense collect a body of troops and relieve the place. Henry II. does penance at Becket's tomb; he quells the insurrection of his sons, imprisons his queen; Louis signs a treaty of peace; the king of Scotland is defeated at Alnwick, and made prisoner. The leaning tower of Pisa erected. Treaty of peace between Venice and the Greek empire. Death of Noureddin; Saladin becomes independent sultan of Egypt.
1175	The German army in Italy greatly reduced by the severe winter; to gain time for fresh reinforcements to arrive, Frederic negotiates for peace; under his mediation, the war between Genoa and Pisa is ended by an equal division of the island of Sardinia.
1176	Battle of Legnano, May 29; after this defeat, the emperor makes serious propositions for peace. War renewed between Manuel and Kildsch Arslan, of Iconium; defeat of the former at Myriokephalon. Henry II. sends his son, prince John, to Ireland, but soon recalls him. The North of Italy agitated by the heresy of the Cathari. The first stone bridge, across the Thames at London, commenced by Peter Coleman. Marriage of Joan, daughter of Henry II., to William, king of Sicily.
1177	Meeting of the emperor and pope at Venice; a definitive peace concluded between them; a truce of six years with the Lombard cities, and of fifteen with the king of Sicily. Mannel concludes and breaks a treaty of peace. John Vataces defeats the Turks on the Mæander, and peace is again restored. Henry II. divides England into six circuits, through which he sends justices in Eyre twice a year, to administer the laws in each county. Waldemar, king of Denmark, destroys Julin (Wollin). Chariton, patriarch of CP.

1178	Submission of the antipope Callistus. Alexander returns to Rome; the senate allowed to remain, but subordinate to him. The king of Sicily sends a fleet to assist the Christians in Palestine. The emperor Manuel marries his daughter, Maria, to Rayner, son of the marquis of Montferrat, and his son, Alexius, to Agnes, daughter of Louis VII. The emperor Frederic takes possession of Bohemia. Theodosius Borradiotes, patriarch of CP.
1179	The eleventh general council, or third Lateran, decrees that the true pope must be elected by two-thirds of the cardinals. The Waldenses are excommunicated, and their translation of the Bible suppressed; the archbishop of Lyons persecutes them. Saladin attacks Jerusalem, and is repulsed by Baldwin.
1180	Death of the emperor Manuel; his son, Alexius, succeeds, æt 13; family dissensions and intrigues weaken the empire. Henry the Lion dispossessed of all his States, except Brunswick and Lüneburg, which his descendants still hold. Death of Louis, king of France; his son, Philip Augustus, æt 15, inherits the throne, and resists the attempts of his uncles to rule over him. The pope urges the sovereigns of Europe to engage in a new crusade. An antipope, styling himself Innocent III., is captured and banished. The pointed Gothic style of architecture is introduced about this time.
1181	Zara surrenders to Bela, king of Hungary, who recovers all Dalmatia and Croatia. Nicetas Choniates writes his History. The Jew, Maimonides, is physician to Saladin at Cairo.

1188	Clement III. sends cardinal-legates to move all the States of Europe to the crusade. The emperor Frederic takes the cross, collects a numerous army, and negotiates with Isaac Angelus to secure a safe passage through the Byzantine empire. Guy of Lusignan is set free by Saladin. Conrad, of Montferrat, defends Tripoli. The Bulgarians compel the Greeks to abandon the siege of Lohitza. Prince Richard is encouraged by Philip Augustus to rebel against his father; war ensues between England and France. Clement again makes Rome the papal residence, by a treaty with the senate. Kilidsch Arslan II, expelled by his sons; Kutbeddin Malek Shah reigns in Iconium as his share of the empire.
1189	The third crusade. Frederic begins his march April 23; he is impeded by, and defeats, the Greeks; winters in Thrace. Guy of Lusignan lays siege to Arre; distress of the besiegers relieved by a fleet of Danes, Frisians, and Flemings. Henry II., unsuccessful in his war, makes peace, and dies soon afterwards, at Chinon. Massacre of the Jews in London and other cities. Sancho, king of Portugal, takes Silvas and Beja. Death of William II., king of Sicily. Tancred, natural son of Roger, is invited by the Sicilians, and supported by the pope, against Constance and her husband.
1190	Frederic storms Adrianople and Demetria; Isaac Angelus submits, and provides a fleet at Gallipoli to convey the crusaders across the Hellespont; they are resisted by Kutbeddin, and take Iconium. Frederic is drowned in the river Calycadnus (Saler), June 10; his son, Frederic, duke of Swabia, leads the army to Antioch, where they suffer great distress, and many thousands perish. Richard intrusts the regency of England to Longchamp, bishop of Ely, and Hugh, of Durham; he embarks with his forces at Marseilles, and Philip Augustus at Genoa; they pass the winter in Sicily, where they quarrel, and are reconciled. Many battles between Saladin and the besiegers of Acre. Death of Guy's wife, Sybilla, and their two children; her sister, Isabella, is divorced, and marries Conrad, count of Montferrat, who thus acquires his claim to the titular kingdom of Jerusalem. Tancred conquers Apulia; the count of Andria, Henry's general, defeated and slain at Ascoli. King Richard claims the dowry of his sister, Joan, widow of the late king of Sicily. Leontius Thootocites, patriarch of C ^P .
1191	Duke Frederic, with his remaining troops, joins the Christian camp before Acre; Philip Augustus arrives April 20. Richard conquers the island of Cyprus, and gives it to Guy of Lusignan; he lands in Palestine, June 8. Surrender of Acre, July 17. Marriage of Richard, in Cyprus, to Berengaria, daughter of Sancho, king of Navarre. Saladin defeated at Arsouf; Jaffa and Ascalon surrender to the Christians. Philip Augustus returns to France. Guy retains the title of king of Jerusalem for life, to be inherited by Conrad. Assassination of Conrad. Richard quarrels with the Austrian prince, Leopold. The Order of Tentonic knights founded. Henry VI. crowned at Rome; besieges Naples; loses his army by sickness, and withdraws; the archbishop of Cologne and duke of Bohemia die there. The Sicilians drive away the fleets of Genoa and Pisa; reconquer Apulia; the empress Constance, made prisoner at Salerno, is released by Tancred. Pope Celestin allows the Romans to destroy Tusculum; the expelled inhabitants build Frascati. Prince John expels the regents appointed by his brother, and assumes their authority. The Moors recover the cities taken from them by the king of Portugal. Berne, in Switzerland, built. Hugo Faicendus writes his History of Sicily. Dositheus, patriarch of C ^P .
1192	Richard advances towards Jerusalem; battle of St. George's day; the Order of the Garter said to have been originated by him; the attack on Jerusalem abandoned; a treaty concluded with Saladin; Richard leaves Palestine; shipwrecked near Aquileia, he is seized by the archduke of Austria, and imprisoned by the emperor Henry. Conrad's widow marries Henry of Champagne, and transfers to him her titular sovereignty, which Guy relinquishes for that of king of Cyprus. Philip Augustus, on his return, intrigues with Prince John, and invades Normandy; he is repulsed by the garrison of Rouen. The emperor Isaac defeated by the Bulgarians. Henry Dandolo elected doge of Venice. Roger Hoveden, and Benedict, abbot of Peterborough, write their Chronicles.

1202	Boniface of Montferrat chosen general of the crusade; departure of the fleet from Venice, Oct. 2. Siege of Zara. The expedition winters in Dalmatia. Philip of Swabia urges the crusaders to replace his father-in-law, Isaac Angelus, on the throne. Dandolo disregards Innocent's threat of excommunication. Prince Arthur made prisoner by John, and murdered. Papal interdict on the kingdom of Leon, because Alfonso refuses to annul his marriage.
1203	The young Alexius joins the crusaders. Constantinople taken, July 18. Restoration of Isaac Angelus; his son proclaimed with him Alexius IV. Judgment of the French peers against John for the murder of Arthur; his lands in France are occupied by Philip Augustus.
1204	Tumults at CP. The Greeks elect Mourzoufle for emperor. Isaac and his son, Alexius, are put to death. The Latins again besiege and take the city, April 9; they make Baldwin, count of Flanders, emperor. Division of the empire; Boniface has the kingdom of Thessalonica. The Venetians obtain many important maritime districts, which increase their trade. Many Greeks take refuge in Asia. Theodore Lascaris, son-in-law of Alexius Angelus, takes the title of emperor, at Nicea. Alexius Comnenus founds the empire of Trebizond. Pedro, king of Arragon, goes to Rome, and does homage to the pope as his liege lord. A papal legate is sent to crown Joannice king of Bulgaria, who acknowledges the supremacy of the Roman pontiff. Geoffrey de Villehardouin writes his Chronicle of the Fourth Crusade. Thomas Morosini, first Latin patriarch of CP.
1205	Baldwin, defeated and made prisoner at Adrianople by the Bulgarians and revolted Greeks, dies in captivity. His brother, Henry, victorious in Bithynia, is recalled to oppose these enemies. Death of Henry Dandolo, at CP., June 1. The four bronze horses are carried to Venice. Boniface sells Crete to the Venetians. William de Champlitte founds the principality of Achaia, in the Morea. Otho de la Roche, duke of Athens. The Greek despot of Epirus under Michael Angelus. Normandy submits to Philip Augustus.
1206	Henry of Flanders elected emperor of CP. He endeavours vainly to remedy the civil and ecclesiastical confusion in his dominions. Temporising policy of Innocent; the Venetians resist his interference, and disregard his threats. John lands with an army at Rochelle, and takes Angers; on the approach of the French, he suddenly decamps. Disputes commence respecting the nomination to the vacant see of Canterbury. Otho, defeated in a great battle by Philip, takes flight to England. Raymond of Toulouse is compelled to withdraw his protection from the Waldenses; they are furiously persecuted. First introduction of the Inquisition. Hugh I. succeeds his father, Amalrich, in Cyprus. The titular kingdom of Jerusalem descends to Mary, daughter of Isabella and Conrad (see A.D. 1190), who conveys it by marriage to John De Brienne. Temugin, acknowledged chief of all the Mongol tribes, takes the name of Dschingis-khan, and begins his victorious career. Death of the historian Nicetas. Michael IV. patriarch of the Greek church at Nicea. University of Paris founded.
1207	Philip of Swabia acknowledged by the princes of the empire, and by the pope. Stephen Langton consecrated archbishop of Canterbury by Innocent; resistance of king John. Boniface slain in a skirmish with the Bulgarians; his second son, Demetrius, succeeds to the kingdom of Thessalonica. Mark Sanudo conquers Naxos, and founds his duchy in the Archipelago. Death of Joannice, king of the Bulgarians. Francis John Bernadoni founds the Franciscan order of Mendicant Friars.
1208	Assassination of Philip, at Bamberg, by the count of Wittelsbach; Otho is unanimously elected by the diets of Halberstadt and Francfort. Tuscany ceases to be a separate state, except the republic of Florence. Rinlari Dandolo defeats the attempts of the Genoese on the island of Crete. King John persists in rejecting Stephen Langton, for which Innocent lays an interdict on the kingdom of England. Peter de Castellan, the papal legate, assassinated; crusade against count Raymond, and the heretics of southern France, now called Albigenes.
1209	Marriage of Otho to Beatrice, daughter of his late rival, Philip; he cedes to the pope all the lands of the deceased countess Matilda, and other territories in

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

- Italy; he is crowned at Rome and Milan; his German attendants quarrel with the Romans, and jealousy arises between him and Innocent. Salinger, leader of the Ghibelins at Ferrara, expels the marquis Azzo and the Guelfs. Innocent keeps Frederic, the young king of Sicily, strictly under his tutelage, and marries him to Constance, daughter of Pedro of Arragon. Excommunication of king John. Defeat of the Scots in an invasion of England. The count Raymond submits to the council of Valence; his lands and heretical subjects are despoiled by Simon de Montfort and his crusaders. Henry, emperor of CP., holds the parliament of Ravenika. The Christian princes in Spain restore peace among themselves, and unite in the league of Mallen.
- 1210 Otho claims the kingdom of Sicily, and retains some of the lands which he had agreed to give up; he is excommunicated by the pope. Kalkhorou, sultan of Iconium, is defeated by Theodore Lascaris, and fails in battle. Geoffrey de Villehardouin, nephew of the historian, obtains the principality of Achala. Expedition of king John into Ireland. The council of Paris condemns fourteen heretics to the flames; orders the works of Aristotle to be burnt, and forbids all future translations, or reading of them. Dschingis-khan invades China. The Venetians monopolize the trade of the East.
- 1211 Innocent arrogates universal dominion; endeavours to transfer the empire of Germany to Frederic of Sicily, his ward and pupil; and absolves the English people from their oath of allegiance to John. Mohamad collects large forces against the Christians, and lays siege to Salvatierra. The emperor Otho conquers Apulia. King John subdues a rising of the Welsh under Llewellyn. The papal legate, Pelagius, irritates the Greeks in CP. The marquis Azzo recovers his influence in Ferrara.
- 1212 Otho returns to Germany. Frederic of Sicily arrives there, collects a powerful party, and makes a league with the king of France. Innocent issues a Bull, deposing king John, and giving the crown of England to Philip Augustus. Salvatierra surrenders to Mohamad; after which (July 18) he is totally routed by the combined Christian forces, on the Navas (plains) de Tolosa, and takes flight to Africa. Fall of the Almohades in Spain. Death of Azzo, marquis D'Este; his son, Aldrovandino, inherits his titles and power.
- 1213 King John, threatened by Philip Augustus, and deserted by his barons, submits to the pope, and does homage for his crown, to the legate Pandulf. Pedro, king of Aragon, assists Raymond of Toulouse, and is slain in the battle of Muret, which Simon de Montfort gains against the Albigenses. Mohamad dies at Morocco; the minority of his son, Yusef, favours the progress of Alfonso in Spain. Battle of Castiglione; the Milanese defeated by the citizens of Cremona. Theodore III. eastern patriarch.
- 1214 Battle of Bouvines; Otho, supported by an auxiliary force of English and Flemings, is defeated by Philip Augustus, and retires into his hereditary States. Meeting of barons at Bury St. Edmund's; Stephen Langton urges them to demand from John a charter of liberties. War renewed between the Byzantine and Nicæan emperors. Henry takes Lentianes by storm, and puts to death its defenders, the brother and son-in-law of Theodore Lascaris. Death of Alfonso, king of Castile. After a struggle of twelve years, Innocent compels Alfonso of Leon to divorce his queen, but acknowledges the legitimacy of their children. Birth of Roger Bacon. Theodore, despot of Epirus.
- 1215 Magna Charta signed by John at Runnymede, June 19. Innocent attempts to annul it by a Bull, which Langton refuses to publish; and the barons disregard. John revokes the charter, hires foreign mercenaries, and takes the castle of Rochester. Frederic II. crowned king of Germany at Aix-la-Chapelle. Innocent exacts from him a promise to give up the kingdom of Sicily to his young son, Henry, and to undertake a crusade in the Holy Land. The Twelfth General Council (Fourth Lateran) decrees Transubstantiation to be a doctrine of the church, enforces auricular confession, and transfers the greatest part of the lands of count Raymond to Simon de Montfort. The priests of the Byzantine empire permitted to celebrate divine service in the Greek language, if they inculcate the papal supremacy. Maximus I. and Manuel I., eastern patriarchs. Origin of the Dominicans.

1216	Invited by the English barons, Louis, son of Philip Augustus, lands with an army. John, marching from Lynn-Regis into Lincolnshire, loses his baggage and many of his men in the quicksands; he retires to Newark, and dies of vexation. Innocent designs, by his personal exertions, to mediate a peace between the Genoese and Pisans, and engage them in the projected crusade; on his road he dies at Perugia, July 6. Death of Henry, emperor of CP. Peter de Courtenay, husband of his sister Yolande, while absent in France, is elected to fill the vacant throne. Frederic calls his son Henry into Germany. By the death of Aldrovandino in 1215, his brother, Azzo VII., having become marquis of Este, the power of the family declines.
1217	William, earl of Pembroke, marshal and regent of England, defeats Louis near Lincoln, who returns to France. Peter de Courtenay crowned at Rome; is made prisoner by Theodore, despot of Epirus; Yolande governs in his name. The pope obliges Andrew, king of Hungary, to begin the fifth crusade. The city of Toulouse refuses to admit Simon de Montfort, and recalls count Raymond. Hacon V., king of Norway.
1218	Death of Otto of Brunswick. Frederic seizes the palatinate of the Rhine. After some fruitless attempts in Palestine, John de Brienne leads the crusaders against Egypt; they take the port and outworks of Damietta. The sultan Saphadin dies of vexation. Simon de Montfort killed while besieging Toulouse; his son, Amaury, continues the war. The earl of Pembroke, in the name of Henry III., orders Magna Charta to be publicly read and obeyed. A Bull of Honorius forbids the teaching of the civil law in the university of Paris. Waldemar, king of Denmark, conquers Livonia and Courland, and is master of nearly all the southern coast of the Baltic, including Hamburg and Lubeck. Dschingis-khan invades Carisme, and drives the sultan Mohammed out of the field. Geoffrey de Villehardouin II. succeeds his father in Achaia.
1219	The city of Damietta taken by the crusaders, and Cairo threatened. Death of the earl of Pembroke; Peter des Roches, bishop of Winchester, and Hubert de Burg, succeed him as joint regents of England. Dschingis-khan takes Samarcand, and sends his son, Tonshi, to conquer Kipzak. The sultan Mohammed is succeeded by his son Gelaeddin. Peter of Courtenay dies a prisoner in Epirus, and the empress Yolande at CP. Their eldest son, Philip, count of Namur, refuses the Imperial crown.
1220	Henry, son of Frederic, elected king of the Romans. Frederic crowned emperor at Rome. Honorius stipulates that the crown of Germany and Sicily shall never be united, that the lands of the countess Matilda shall be given up to the church, and that the emperor shall undertake at once the promised crusade. Malek-kamel, son and successor of Saphadin, offers to the crusaders in Egypt favourable terms of peace, the acceptance of which is prevented by the violence of the legate Pelagius. The king of Hungary returns to his States, and finds his son, Bela, at the head of a rebellion against him. Robert, second son of Peter and Yolande, elected emperor of CP. Flourishing period of English minstrels, French troubadours, and German minnesingers. Westminster Abbey rebuilt. The cathedrals of Salisbury and Amlens commenced. Death of Mark Sanudo; his son, Angelo, is second duke of Naxos.
1221	The advice of John de Brienne is over-ruled by Pelagius, and the Christian army in Egypt utterly ruined; Damietta given up to the Turks. Honorius threatens to excommunicate the emperor for not joining the crusade. Frederic sends out an armament of forty galleys under the count of Malta, who arrives too late. He visits Sicily; holds a parliament at Messina, and promulgates good laws for the government of that kingdom. Germanns II., patriarch of the Greek church. The nobles and citizens of Milan, by their mutual jealousies, increase the confusion among the Lombard cities; the marquis Azzo regains his power in Ferrara. Marriage of Alexander, king of Scotland, to Jane, eldest sister of Henry III. Building of the cathedral of Burgos.
1222	Death of Theodore Lascaris; John Ducas Vatases succeeds him. Theodore, despot of Epirus, conquers Thessalonica, and takes the title of emperor. Honorius fails in his project of a congress at Verona, to organize a new crusade; he issues

1223	a Bull, declaring Henry III. of age. Death of the empress Constance. Andrew appeases the troubles of Hungary by his Golden Bull, granting privileges to the nobles and clergy. Battle between the Genoese and Pisan fleets in the harbour of Acro. Death of Raymond, count of Toulouse; his son recovers nearly all his paternal states. Gelaiddin is driven over the Indus by Dachingis-khan, who remains master of all Carizme. The university of Padua founded. Alseddin, sultan of Iconium. Brescia nearly destroyed by an earthquake. The marquis Azzo and the Gueifs again expelled from Ferrara by Salinguerra. Death of Alexius, emperor of Trebizond; his son-in-law, Andronicus Ghidos, succeeds. Honorius assembles a congress at Ferentino; the emperor Frederic pledges himself to proceed on the crusade within two years, and to marry John de Brienne's daughter, Yolante. Death of Philip Augustus. Henry III. claims from Louis VIII. the restitution of Normandy. Death of Yusef Almostansir; leaving no successor, the civil war of the Alftina commences among the Almohades. The first Norwegian parliament, or storting, held by Haaco V. at Bergen. Waldemar, king of Denmark, taken prisoner by the duke of Schwerin.
1224	Louis invades Poitou, and takes La Rochelle. Amaury de Montfort cedes his claims on Toulouse to him. Battle of Mamezon; Vataces defeats the emperor Robert, and extends his conquests to the Hellespont. Theodore, emperor of Thessalonica, takes Adrianople. The Mongols advance from Kipsrak to the river Kaika, near the mouth of the Don; defeat of the Russians and their allies; their prince, Matias, is slain; the conquerors ravage the south of Russia, and then retire over the Volga. Ahnimeic, after a reign of eight months in Murcia, is deposed by Abdallah Mohamad. The Christians invade Valencia, and take Huejada. Marriage of John de Brienne to Berengaria, sister of the king of Castile.
1225	Honorius, annoyed by the senate, retires from Rome to Tivoli. Frederic obtains another delay of two years for his crusade; he marries Yolante at Brindisi, and claims the kingdom of Jerusalem in virtue of her right, inherited from her deceased mother (see a.n. 1206). William, count of Montserrat, dies while attempting to recover Thessalonica for his brother, Demetrius; the expedition fails. Magna Charta confirmed by Henry III. He sends his uncle, the earl of Salisbury, and his brother, Richard, earl of Cornwall, to defend Poitou and Gascony. The council of Bourges decrees another crusade against Toulouse. The Lomhard cities renew their league, secretly encouraged by the pope. Frederic orders the students at Bologna to remove to his new university at Naples. Waldemar regains his liberty by a ransom of 45,000 marks, and relinquishing most of his conquests. Peace concluded between the Byzantine and Nicean emperors.
1226	Louis VIII. dies at Montpensier, in Auvergne, while prosecuting the crusade against Toulouse; his widow, Blanche of Castile, assumes the regency for her son, Louis IX. Honorius mediates a treaty between Frederic and the Lombard cities; the decree against the university of Bologna is revoked. Otho de la Roche resigns the duchy of Athens to his nephew, Guy de Roy. Waldemar reconquers Rendsburg and Ditmarsh. Death of John Bernadoni, or Francis of Assisi; divisions and disputes among the Franciscans.
1227	Death of Honorius; Gregory IX., who succeeds him, vehemently urges the crusade. Frederic embarks; the sickness of his army, the death of the landgrave of Thuringia, and his own bad health, cause him to land again; he is excommunicated by the pope. Great disorders in Italy; Eccelino da Romano drives the Gueif party out of Verona and Vicoenza. Henry III. offends his subjects by his partiality for foreigners; he is obliged to dismiss from his council Peter des Roches, bishop of Winchester, and others. Waldemar defeated by the duke of Saxony at Bornhövet. Death of Dachingis-khan; four of his sons divide the empire, among whom Octai is supreme, or Great Khan. Demetrius, titular king of Thessalonica, dies in Italy. The emperor Frederic writes in Latin, "De Arte venandi cum avibus." A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
1228	Frederic departs for Palestine; the pope again excommunicates him, absolves his subjects from their allegiance, declares a crusade against him in Apulia and Sicily, and sends John de Brienne with an army to reduce those countries. Frederic lands at Acre. Death of Robert de Courtenay; his brother, Baldwin, the rightful heir, being only nine years old, the barons of Romania elect John de Brienne, et. 80 , emperor for life, under a convention that Baldwin is to be his successor. Death of Stephen Langton, archbishop of Canterbury; his successor, Edmund, preserves Magna Charta from infringement. The empress Yolande dies in giving birth to her son Conrad.
1229	The papal army makes great progress in Apulia. Frederic at Acre; the Hospitallers and Templars are forbidden by the pope to obey him; he concludes a treaty, by which the sultan restores Jerusalem and other cities; he hastens back to Italy, and recovers the territories taken from him in his absence. The proceedings of Gregory cause much dissatisfaction through all Christendom. Close of the crusade against the Albigenses; count Raymond gives up all his lands west of the Rhone, and affiances his only daughter and heiress to Alfonso, brother of Louis. The council of Toulouse interdicts to laymen the reading of the Scriptures, and organizes a more effectual Inquisition for the suppression of heresy. The Folkunger grow powerful in Sweden, and for a time expel Erik from the throne.
1230	Reconciliation of the emperor and pope. First arrival of the Teutonic knights in Prussia. Unsuccessful expedition of Henry III. in France. Death of Alfonso, king of Leon; under his son, Ferdinand III., that kingdom is reunited to Castile. Ferdinand pushes his conquests to Jaen. The pope gives the government of Spoleto and Ancona to Milo, bishop of Beauvais. A great flood in Rome, Feb. 1, followed by a pestilence. Theodore, emperor of Thessalonica, defeated, made prisoner, and blinded by Asan, king of Bulgaria; his brother, Manuel, usurps his throne. Michael II. despot of Epirus. The Livonian Knights of the Short Sword conquer Courland. The Lithuanians give the title of Great Prince to their leader, Rimgold.
1231	Gregory issues severe Bulls against heretics, forbids laymen to dispute on the doctrines of faith, and gives new privileges to the religious orders. The Dominicans and Franciscans contend for superiority in the University of Paris. Thorn, on the Vistula, founded by the Teutonic Knights. John de Brienne arrives at CP. Negotiations for the union of the Greek and Latin churches. Death of Elizabeth, daughter of Andrew, king of Hungary, and widow of Louis VI., landgrave of Hesse; the cathedral of Marburg dedicated to her. The Almagest of Ptolemy translated into Latin by order of the emperor Frederic. The Zuyder Zee formed. Orthogrul obtains from Alaeddin, sultan of Iconium, a settlement between the Sangarius and Mount Olympus, for 400 families of Oghusian Tartars, who had been driven from Khorasan by Dschingis-khan; from these the Ottomans descend.
1232	Henry III. dismisses Hubert de Burg, and recalls the bishop of Winchester. The emperor Frederic meets Salin guerra and Eocelino da Romano at Ravenna, to concert measures against the marquis Azzo and the Lombard cities. Gregory establishes tribunals of the Inquisition at Toulouse and Carcassone. Asan drives Manuel from Thessalonica, releases his prisoner, Theodore, whose daughter he marries, and places her brother John on the throne. Ahuluia retires into Africa and dies; with him the reign of the Almohades in Spain ceases. Aben Hud takes Granada; the Moors in Spain distracted by civil wars; Ferdinand attacks them in Seville, and James, king of Aragon, takes the Balearic Islands. The Carismans cross the Tigris and Euphrates. The Mahometans of Syria request assistance from the Christians. Gregory, by a Bull, directs the Knights of Palestine to obey the emperor Frederic as king of Jerusalem. University College, Oxford, founded by William, archdeacon of Durham. The first commercial company, called "the Steel-yard Society," established in London. Large flights of locusts in Italy.
1233	Rebellion of the English barons against the foreign favourites of Henry III. Commotions in Rome and Sicily. The friar Giovanni of Vicenza preaches

1239	The emperor, having married his natural son, Enzo, to Adelaide, heiress of the two principalities of Torri and Gallura, creates him king of Sardinia; Gregory claims the island, and excommunicates Frederic, denouncing him as a heretic and atheist, and absolving his subjects from their allegiance. Frederic justifies himself in a manifesto drawn up by his chancellor, Peter de Vineis. The Venetians and Bolognese take Ravenna. Theobald of Navarre (the troubadour king), with the counts of Bar and Montfort, undertakes a crusade in the Holy Land; he breaks the truce with the sons of Malek el Kamel, who defeat him and capture Jerusalem; he returns with the loss of his noble companions and two-thirds of his forces. Disputes begin between Sancho, king of Portugal, and his nobles and clergy. Baldwin II. returns to CP. with a large army, raised by the sale of the holy crown of thorns and other relics to the king of France, who builds the Sainte Chapelle for their reception. Many heretics burnt this year. Elhing huilt by Conrad, landgrave of Thüringen, grand master of the Teutonic Knights. Bela permits the Cuman fugitives to settle in Hungary.
1240	Gregory proclaims a crusade against the emperor; he sends ecclesiastics into other countries to raise money; in England they obtain benefices and offices that produce 70,000 marks yearly. The Venetians and marquis Azzo d'Este take Ferrara; Salinqueria is treacherously seized by the papal legate and sent to Venice, where he soon dies a prisoner, æt. 80. Frederic recovers Ravenna and Faenza; Alessandria submits to him; he ravages the papal States and Tuscany; Florence holds out. Simon de Montfort, and Gilbert, earl of Leicester, are the favourites of Henry III.; his brother, Richard, earl of Cornwall, visits Palestine, redeems Jerusalem from its captors, repairs its fortifications, and induces the sultan to renew the truce for two years. Alfonso, son of Ferdinand, concludes the treaty, by which his father's supremacy is established in the Moorish kingdom of Murcia. Waldemar founds the bishopric of Revel, creates the Danebrog Order of Knighthood, and publishes his code of laws. Baldwin, in his campaign against Vataces, loses almost all his possessions in Asia; his Latin auxiliaries, receiving no pay, abandon him. Rebellion of count Skule, in Norway, suppressed by Haco V. The Swedes in Finland make encroachments on Russia. The students of Oxford, ill-treated by the townspeople, withdraw to Cambridge. Ferdinand founds the university of Salamanca, and transfers to it the schools established by his grandfather, Alfonso, at Palencia. Methodius II. patriarch of the Greek church.
1241	A Pisan and Sicilian fleet, by order of Frederic, captures (May 3) twenty-two Genoese galleys, in which cardinals, prelates, and ambassadors, summoned by Gregory, were proceeding to hold a council at Rome; the prisoners are confined in Naples and Apulia. The emperor takes Beneventum and besieges Genoa by sea and land; the citizens defend themselves bravely. The Mongolians, of the Golden Horde, ravage Hungary, Poland, and Silesia; Bela is driven by them into Dalmatia. Frederic, wishing to be at liberty to oppose these invaders, employs the earl of Cornwall, on his way home from Palestine, in fruitless negotiations with the pope for peace. Death of Gregory, Aug. 21. Celestin IV. survives his election only eighteen days; the papal chair remains vacant twenty months. Henry III. disgusts his subjects by his favours to foreigners and infringements of Magna Charta; the parliament refuses to grant him money. Eleanor, daughter of Geoffrey, duke of Brittany, and grand-daughter of Henry II., the rightful heiress of the crown, dies in Bristol castle, where she had been confined thirty-nine years. Death of Waldemar, king of Denmark; his three youngest sons make war on their elder brother, Erik. Caloman inherits the throne of Bulgaria, on the decease of his father, Assan. John Vataces is recalled from the siege of Thessalonica, by the approach of the Southern Mongols towards Anatolia. Alexander Newski, son of Jaroslav, defeats the Swedes near the Neva. Death of Snorro Sturleson, composer of the Edda.
1242	Henry III. lands in France, and is defeated by Louis at Taillebourg and Salntes, July 21 and 22. The Mongolians repulsed at Olmutz, in Moravia, begin to retreat. Aldermen first elected in London. Thomas Wykes and Walter Hemmingford write English Chronicles. Gerard Von Malsberg, grand master of the Teutonic Knights in Prussia.

1243	Frederic urges the cardinals to appoint a pope, and releases some of his prisoners to attend the conclave. Innocent IV. elected, June 24. Negotiations for peace again abortive. Eazio, with an imperial army, is repelled by the Milanese; assisted by a Pisan fleet, he relieves Savona, besieged by the Genoese. A truce for five years concluded between England and France. Richard, earl of Cornwall, marries Sancha, daughter of the earl of Provence. Death of Hubert de Burg. Denis surrenders to the Aragonese. Muhammad gives up Jaen to Ferdinand, and places the kingdom of Granada under his protection. Batu evacuates Hungary, and returns to Kapzak; Russia remains tributary to the Golden Horde. The Carismians overrun Syria; defeat the combined forces of the Christians and Aynubites near Gaza; capture and pillage Jerusalem. The pope gives Prussia to the Teutonic Knights, and erects four bishoprics there. Matthew Paris, monk of St. Alban's, writes his History. Robert Grossetête, bishop of Lincoln, theol. and phil.
1244	Innocent IV. escapes from Rome, and fixes his court at Lyons. Louis IX., in a fit of sickness, vows to undertake a crusade. Death of John, despot of Thessalonica; his brother, Demetrios, succeeds. Mark Sanudo II. duke of the Archipelago. Gajaseddin Kaikhoosrou, sultan of Iconium, defeated by the Mongols at Kousadac. Baldwin II. again visits the West, to beg for support. Henry, count of Hohenlohe, grand master of the Teutonic Knights. Manuel II. patriarch of the Greek church. Alexander de Haies, "the Irrefragable Doctor," cultivates theology and Arabic literature.
1245	Innocent holds the Thirteenth General council at Lyons, where he excommunicates and deposes the emperor Frederic, and Sancho, king of Portugal; deputies from the nobles and clergy of England appear there, and protest against the extortions practised on them by the papal emissaries; they declare King John's act of submission to have been made without the consent of his subjects, and therefore not valid; Baldwin pleads before the council for assistance. Louis pledges many of his nobles against their will to join him in a crusade. Death of Caloman, king of Bulgaria. John Vataces extends his empire both in Asia and Europe. Origin of the Hanseatic League. Westminster Abbey completed by Henry III. Thomas Aquinas studies at Paris. Death of Roderic Ximenes, archbishop of Toledo and historian of Spain, while returning from the council of Lyons.
1246	Conference at Clugny between Louis and Innocent; the latter refuses all terms of accommodation short of Frederic's unconditional submission; he urges the election of a new emperor in Germany; the temporal princes oppose this: the archbishops of Mentz, Cologne, and Treves elect Henry landgrave of Thüringen. Frederic's son, Conrad, collects an army, which is defeated; the duke of Bavaria takes up his cause. The papal agents form conspiracies in Apulia, which Frederic in person puts down. Great discontent in England, France, and Italy, in consequence of the large contributions exacted by Innocent from the clergy, to defray his expenses. Ferdinand lays siege to Seville; the Moors of Granada assist him, with an army under Muhammad. Xativa surrenders to the king of Aragon. John Vataces conquers Thessalonica, and annexes it to his empire. William de Villehardouin, prince of Achaia, takes Corinth. Peter de Vinels dismissed from office, fined, and imprisoned.
1247	Death of Henry of Thüringen; at the instigation of Innocent, the ecclesiastical princes elect William, count of Holland, and crown him king of the Romans at Aix-la-Chapelle. Parma, recovered by the papal party, is besieged by Frederic. The English parliament, offended by the obstinate attachment of Henry III. to his foreign favourites, refuses to grant him supplies; remonstrates also against the large sums levied in the kingdom by the pope, and resists the payment of them. Seville surrenders to Ferdinand.
1248	The emperor is obliged to raise the siege of Parma, Feb. 18. Louis IX. sails with his crusaders, and winters in Cyprus; Blanche of Castile regent during his absence. The Portuguese expel their king, Sancho, who dies at Toledo, and is succeeded by his brother, Alfonso. William de Villehardouin takes Nauplia and Monemvasia, and completes the conquest of the Morea. The Genoese surprise Rhodes. Henry III. dismisses the parliament, and raises money by forced loans and the sale of his jewels.

1249	The crusaders land in Egypt and take Damietta. Enzo defeated and made prisoner at Fossalta, May 26; he is detained in captivity at Bologna for the rest of his life (23 years). Eccelino da Romano conquers Belluno and the marquisate of Este. Birger Jarl restores the ascendancy of the Folkunger in Sweden. Michael Scott translates the works of Aristotle. Albert the Great teaches at Cologne. Death of William of Auvergne.
1250	Battle of Mansourah, April 5; total defeat of the crusaders; Louis and the remainder of his army made prisoners; they obtain their liberty by restoring Damietta and binding themselves to abstain from further hostilities. They retire to St. John d'Acre. The Mamelukes assassinate the sultan, Turan Shah, and make themselves masters of Egypt; Ibeg, their first sultan. Death of the emperor Frederic, in Apulia, Dec. 13, æt. 58; his son, Conrad, succeeds as king of Sicily, and is acknowledged as king of Germany by most of the temporal princes; his rival, William of Holland, obtains little authority, although supported by the ecclesiastical States and the papal party. Frederic, by his will, leaves his natural son, Manfred, regent of Sicily in Conrad's absence. The marquis Uberto Pelavicino distinguishes himself by the advantages which he gains for the citizens of Cremona in their contest with Parma. On the death of Erik XI., Birger Jarl places his young son, Waldemar, on the throne of Sweden, and makes himself regent; he introduces the mariner's compass among the navigators of the Baltic. Erik IV. of Denmark assassinated by his brother Abel, who obtains the throne. The college of the Sorbonne founded at Paris. The north transept of York minster begun. Florence adopts a democratic government and peace between Guelphs and Ghibellins.
1251	Innocent returns to Italy; visits Genoa, Milan, and other cities, and fixes his residence in Perugia; he excommunicates Conrad, and excites rebellions in Sicily and Apulia, which Manfred quells. Eccelino da Romano and Uberto Pelavicino continue to support the Ghibellin party; Conrad comes to Italy. Mangou succeeds Gujuk as Great Khan of the Moguls. Poppo von Osterna, Grand Master of the Teutonic knights in Prussia. John Vataces recovers Rhodes from the Genoese. The English laws are introduced into Wales. The citizens of London pay 500 marks for the privilege of having their mayor sworn before the barons of the Exchequer. Some lands in the Strand, held of the Crown by a farrier, are made over to the corporation, and from this time the sheriffs tender the annual rent of six horse-shoes and nails.
1252	Conrad passes into Apulia; having made pacific overtures, which are rejected by Innocent, he attacks the adherents of the papal party, takes Capua, and lays siege to Naples. The Lombard cities, being no longer in fear of Frederic, begin to quarrel among themselves. Death of Ferdinand of Castile, at Seville, May 30; accession of his son, Alfonso, the philosopher. Abel, king of Denmark, falls in battle against the North Frisians; his brother, Christopher, takes the throne. Andrew, grand-duke of Russia, is expelled by the Golden Horde, and his brother, Alexander Newski, raised in his place. Memel built by the Teutonic knights. Mendog, chief of the Lithuanians, is baptized, and takes the title of king.
1253	Naples surrenders to Conrad. Innocent offers the kingdom of Sicily to Richard, earl of Cornwall, who declines it; Henry III. proposes his son, Edmund; Charles of Anjou treats for it with the pope. A parliament held, May 3, in Westminster Hall, denounces the penalty of excommunication on all who violate Magna Charta, and resists the taxes imposed by papal authority for crusades. Grossetête, bishop of Lincoln, refuses to admit a canon appointed by the pope, and protests against the power assumed by Innocent; this prelate dies soon afterwards. Louis, still in Palestine, sends the friar Rubruquis on an embassy to Mangou at Karakorum; he is accompanied by Haithon, Christian prince of Armenia; alleged conversion of the Great Khan. Brancaleone enters on his office as senator of Rome. The Astronomical Tables of Alfonso, king of Castile, are framed. Muhamad founds the Alhambra at Granada, and introduces the manufacture of silk among his people. Death of Blanche of Castile, regent of France.

1254	Death of Conrad, May 21, and of Henry, youngest son of the late emperor Frederick. William of Holland is acknowledged as king by the German princes. Conrad's son, Conradin, only two years old, is proclaimed king of Sicily; his guardian, Berthold, marquis of Homburg, resigns the trust to Manfred, who, having no means of resistance, submits to Innocent. The pope advances with a strong force into Apulia. Manfred is driven to take up arms, obtains possession of Nocera and the public treasury, collects an army, and defeats the papal troops at Foggia. Innocent dies at Naples. Louis returns from his crusade to France, and represses the disorders which had arisen in his kingdom. Alfonso conquers Xeres, Medina Sidonia, and other cities in the south of Spain. Death of John Vatases, Oct. 30; the empire of Nicæa devolves on Theodore Lascaris II.; the historian, George Acropolita, is his chancellor. Birger fortifies Stockholm, and regulates the internal government of Sweden. Ottocar, king of Bohemia, heads the crusade, proclaimed by pope Innocent, against the remaining pagans in Prussia and Courland.
1255	The papal governor, Ruffo, is expelled by the citizens of Messina. Manfred intercepts a large convoy, the loss of which obliges the cardinal-legate to agree to terms of peace; Alexander refuses to ratify them, having concluded his treaty for giving Sicily to Edmund, son of Henry III.; this is set aside by the English parliament not granting the money for carrying it into effect. Prince Edward visits Spain, and is knighted at Burgos by Alfonso, king of Castile, to whose sister, Eleanor, he is affianced. Theodore Lascaris recovers from the Bulgarians all their conquests south of Mount Hæmus. Bilis of exchange in favour of Italian merchants, drawn at Rome on the English bishops and abbots, which they are compelled to pay. Arsenius I. Greek patriarch. Königsberg built by Ottocar.
1257	Richard, earl of Cornwall, is elected king of the Romans by some of the German princes, and crowned at Aix-la-Chapelle; the others choose Alfonso of Castile; the reign of both is only nominal. The Milanese expel their nobles and give Martin della Torre absolute power over them; the commons of Genoa appoint Boccanegra their captain. Algarve conquered by Alfonso; he quarrels with his brother, Henry, who retires among the Moors at Tunis. Portugal placed under an interdiction by the pope, in consequence of Alfonso III. having divorced his queen and married another.
1258	Under the influence of Simon de Montfort, earl of Leicester, "the Mad Parliament" is held at Oxford; the "Provisions of Oxford" are enacted; twenty-four barons form a council to advise or command the king. Manfred crowned king of Sicily. Death of Theodore Lascaris; his son, John, æt. 9, succeeds to the throne of Nicæa, under the guardianship of the patriarch Arsenius. The people of Rome restore Braconione to his office, who dies soon afterwards. The fortified castles raised by the Roman nobles in the city are destroyed. Eccellino defeats the papal forces at Corticeila, takes the legate prisoner, and gains possession of the city of Brescia. Huiagou storms Bagdad, puts to death Al Mostasem, the last of the caliphs, carries his arms into Syria, and takes Damascus. Defeat of the Genoese by the combined fleets of Venice and Pisa, near Acre; the pope mediates a peace between them. A proclamation of Henry III. to the people of Huntingdon, affords the first specimen of Early English. Birth of Osman, or Othman, the founder of the Ottoman power.

1259	Treaty of Abbeville concluded between Henry III. and the king of France. Richard, king of the Romans, returns to England. Michael Palaeologus obtains the guardianship of John Lascaris, and usurps the throne. Uberto Pelavicino joins a general league against Eccelino da Romano, who is defeated, and dies of his wounds; the cities and States held by him regain their freedom. On the recommendation of Martin della Torre, the Milanese appoint the marquis Uberto for their podesta; he continues to support the Ghibelins. The archbishop of Lund raises a rebellion against Christopher, king of Denmark, who is expelled, and dies in exile; his son, Erik, inherits the crown. Manfred is excommunicated by the pope. Kublai succeeds Mangon as Great Khan of the Mongols. Death of the historian Matthew Paris. The despot of Epirus defeated by Michael Palaeologus at Pelagonia; William, prince of Achaia, made prisoner. Acropolis regains his liberty.
1260	Henry III. is dispensed by the pope from his oath to observe the "Provisions," and prepares to resist the barons. With the assistance of Manfred, the Ghibelins gain possession of Florence; Alberico da Romano, brother of Eccelino, and his family, are made prisoners, and cruelly put to death. Michael Palaeologus besieges CP., makes a truce with Baldwin, and leaves Strategopulus in command of the army in Thrace. On the death of Ibeg, the Mamelukes choose Bibars for sultan, who drives the Mongols out of Syria, and takes Damascus and Jerusalem. Henry III. attempts to establish a university at Northampton. The Lithuanians and Prussians renew their struggle against the Teutonic knights.
1261	In the absence of the emperor Michael, Strategopulus takes CP. by surprise, July 25; flight of Baldwin. The Greek empire restored. The Genoese, by treaty, obtain Pera and Galata, Smyrna, the ports of the Crimea, and other naval stations, with many commercial privileges; the Venetians are excluded from the Black Sea. Death of Alexander IV., May 25; his successor, Urban IV., excommunicates the Genoese, for their alliance with the Greek heretics. Marriage of Manfred's daughter, Constance, to Pedro, son of James, king of Aragon. Muhammad, king of Granada, breaks his alliance with Alfonso, and encourages the Moors of Andalusia and Murcia to rebel against him. The Order, or Guild, of the Virgin Mary, founded at Bologna. Segarelli and the sect of Apostolicals denounce the licentious clergy.
1262	Urban resists the proposal of some German princes to elect Conradin king of the Romans; he offers the crown of Sicily to Charles of Anjou, brother of Louis IX. Marriage of Philip, eldest son of Louis, to Isabella of Aragon. Urban exacts securities that France shall not assist Manfred. Lucca joins the league of the Ghibelins in Tuscany, who all acknowledge Manfred's supremacy. The Genoese depose Boccanegra. Martin della Torre again absolute at Milan; Uberto Pelavicino rules Cremona, Brescia, and Piacentia; Mastino della Scala obtains authority in Verona. Stephen of Hungary (see 1235) acquires a rich dowry with Traversara of Ravenna, and on her death marries Tommasina de' Morosini of Venice. The kingly power is restored to Henry III. by parliament; his son, Edward, brings a foreign army to support him; beginning of the civil war between him and the barons. William, prince of Achaia, is released on ceding three fortresses to the emperor Michael. Excommunication of Michael by the patriarch Arsenius. Haco, king of Norway, defeated in his invasion of Scotland; he acquires the sovereignty of Iceland and Greenland.
1263	Henry III. and the barons refer their disputes to be settled by the arbitration of Louis IX. Urban's hatred of the house of Swabia distracts all Italy; he rejects all terms of accommodation, and finally concludes the treaty by which Sicily and Apulia are given to Charles of Anjou. The citizens of Milan refuse to admit Otto Visconti, whom the pope appoints their archbishop; an interdict is laid on the city. Death of Martin della Torre; his brother, Philip, is elected in his room. Naval battle off Negropont; the Venetians defeat the Genoese. Alfonso reduces Xerez and the other revolted cities. Mark Sanudo II. dies at Melos, and is succeeded by William I., fourth duke of Naxos. Andronicus II. fifth emperor of Trebizond. Death of Haco V.; the kingdom of Norway inhe-

1269	The pope's legate preaches the crusade to the parliament assembled in April at Northampton; another, held Nov. 18, at Marlborough, enacts many new laws. Henry Bracton writes De Legibus Anglie . Richard visits Germany, and exercises authority as king of the Romans; he regulates the tolls to be paid by vessels on the Rhine. Nocera taken by Charles; its walls thrown down, and its Saracen population distributed in distant provinces; he calls a meeting at Cremona of deputies from the cities of Lombardy, and proposes himself their general, protector, or governor; they decline his offer. Death of the marquis Uberto Pelavicino. Napoleon della Torre raises the Guelph family of Fiasiraga to power in Lodi. The Moors in Spain invite the assistance of the African Merines. Alfonso, king of Portugal, acquires the sovereignty of Algarve. St. Edmund's Hall, Oxford, founded. Roger Bacon forbidden to teach at Oxford, and confined to his monastery.
1270	Louis IX., by his laws, called "Establishments," suppresses the wager of battle, and provides for a regular administration of justice. Last of the Crusades. Louis lands in Africa, and besieges Tunis; the plague breaks out in his army; he dies Aug. 25; his son, the duke of Nevers, the papal legate, with many nobles and soldiers, perish. Charles, king of Naples, arrives with another armament, and concludes a treaty, by which the Tunisian sovereign is bound to pay him tribute; the whole fleet returns, and on its passage is thrown by a storm on the coast of Sicily at Trapani; Charles seizes the wrecked vessels of his French and Genoese allies, and appropriates the plunder to his own treasury; Theobald, king of Navarre, dies Dec. 5, while returning from this expedition. Prince Edward perseveres in the crusade, and lands at Acre; during his absence, the incapacity of his father and turbulence of the barons create great disorders in England. Commotions in Genoa; the families Doria and Spinola obtain the ascendancy, and support the Ghibelin party. The Bolognese merchants refuse to pay a toll levied by Venice on their goods; war between the two States.
1271	Edward drives Bihars from the siege of Acre, and takes Nazareth; an attempt is made to murder him. Philip III. and Charles of Naples visit Rome to urge the election of a pope; in their presence, Guy de Montfort, governor of Tuscany, son of Simon, late earl of Leicester, kills Henry, son of the earl of Cornwall, March 13, in a church, during the celebration of mass; the assassin is allowed to escape. Philip inherits the remaining part of the county of Toulouse, east of the Rhone. Death of Richard, earl of Cornwall and king of the Romans, at Berkhamstead, Dec. 12; Alfonso of Castile continues to claim the title, but has no authority in Germany. Marco Polo, the Venetian, sets out, with his father and uncle, on their travels into Tartary. John de Joinville writes his Memoirs of Louis IX.
1273	Edward I. demands justice on the assassin of his cousin Henry; Guy de Montfort is excommunicated by the pope; the same punishment is inflicted on the citizens of Genoa, Pavia, and Asti, and the marquis of Montferrat, for their league to resist the tyranny of Charles of Naples. Rise of the house of Habsburg; Rudolf elected king of the Romans, and crowned at Aix-la-Chapelle. Kuhlai is assisted in his conquest of China by mangonels, which the Polos construct for him. The pope claims and receives the county of Venaisin, as his share of the lands taken from Raymond of Toulouse, by the crusade against the Albigenses. The Merines arrive in Spain. Death of Muhamad I., king of Granada; interview between his son, Muhamad II., and Alfonso, at Seville; a treaty concluded. Eimacin, the Arabian historian, fl. The burning of sea-coal prohibited in England.

1274	Edward I. lands at Dover Aug. 2; is crowned with his queen, Eleanor, at Westminster, Aug. 19; sends commissioners into the counties to reform the administration of justice. A council (Fourteenth General) held at Lyons. The ambassadors of Michael Palaeologus acknowledge the supremacy of the pope, and effect a temporary union of the two churches; the patriarch Joseph, refusing his assent, is deposed, and John Veccus appointed in his place. Regulations made for the future proceedings of the concave in electing a pope; James I., who had been king of Aragon 62 years, attends the council, and wishes to be crowned: this is refused, because he had not paid the tribute to the Roman see, promised by his father in 1204. The title of Rudolf of Habsburg recognized on his securing to the church all its claims in Italy. The cession of the county of Venetian confirmed. Gregory fails in his exhortations to another crusade. The tide of fortune turns against Charles of Naples; his fleets are defeated by the Genoese; and the coalesced States, assisted by Alfonso of Castile, take Alessandria. Thomas Aquinas, " the angelic doctor ," dies on his way to the council of Lyons, and Cardinal Bonaventura, the " seraphic ," while attending its sitting. The " Chronicles of St. Denis " are presented to Philip III. Alfonso has an interview with the pope at Beaucaire, and claims to be acknowledged king of the Romans. Hartmann von Heldrungen, Teutonic grand master in Prussia.
1275	Diet of Augsburg. Ottocar, king of Bohemia, put to the ban of the empire, is deserted by his allies. Alfonso, threatened with excommunication, resigns his claim; death of his eldest son, Ferdinand. Abu Jusef, king of the Merines, brings over a large force from Africa to assist the king of Granada. Defeat of the Castilians at Ecija, count Nunez slain; and of the Aragonese, near Mastos, in Jaen, Sancho, archbishop of Toledo, slain; Alfonso arrives and stops the progress of the conquerors. Pedro, son of James, king of Aragon, secretly employs John of Procida to promote his designs on Sicily (see 1261). Edward I. persecutes the Jews. A.D.	EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.
1291	The disputed succession in Scotland is referred to the decision of Edward I.; he claims and receives from the competitors homage as their suzerain. Alfonso, king of Aragon, concludes a treaty of peace with France, at Aix, in Provence; but, before it can be executed, he dies June 18, and is succeeded by his brother, James, who appoints their younger brother, Frederic, regent of Sicily. Gerace, in Calabria, taken by the Sicilians. Châlli, son of Kelaoun, terminates the Christian kingdom in Palestine by the capture of Acre (May 18), Tyre, and Beyrout; the surviving Hospitallers and Templars take refuge at Limisso in Cyprus. Robert Blum, a Templar under the Italian name of Roger di Flor, is degraded by the Order, and retires to Genoa, where he fits out a private galley, and seeks his fortune as an adventurer. Nicholas vainly tries to arouse Europe to another crusade. Death of Rudolf; the nobles of Germany refuse to elect his son Albert. Queen Eleanor dies at Hornby, in Lincolnshire, Nov. 28; a cross is erected at every resting-place of her funeral procession on its way to Westminster. Isabella de Villehardouin marries Florenz of Hainault.
1292	Edward awards the crown of Scotland to John Balliol, who does homage to him at Newcastle. Adolphus of Nassau elected king of Germany and crowned at Aix-la-Chapelle, June 24. The efforts of Nicholas IV. to stimulate another crusade are stopped by his death, after which the dissensions of the cardinals keep the church without a head two years and three months. The Castilians, after destroying a Moorish fleet at Tangiers, return to Spain and take Tarifa. The Florentines besiege Pisa, and are repulsed by Guy da Montefeltro. Roger de Loria defeats the viceroy of Naples in Calabria, invades Greece, and takes the island of Scio. Charles Martel, routed at Zagrah, leaves Hungary. Masoud II., sultan of Iconium, defeated by the Mongols, retires to CP. Death of Roger Bacon.
1293	Balliol hesitates to obey a summons from Edward to appear in London. War between England and France. Guyenne seized by Philip. An encounter between some Genoese and Venetian merchant-galleys near Cyprus occasions a long war between these two States. Athanasius deposed; John XII. patriarch of CP.
1294	Edward forms an alliance with Adolphus, king of Germany, and Guy, count of Flanders, against France. Peter da Morrone, a poor hermit, is elected pope, as Celestin V.; at the end of five months he abdicates, to make way for Boniface VIII. The Genoese, under Niccolo Spinola, capture a Venetian fleet and take Canoa, in the isle of Candia. Don Juan, Sancho's brother, with an army of Merines from Africa, besieges Tarifa; the place is successfully defended by Don Guzman; death of his son. The Merines give up Algeiras to the king of Granada, and withdraw from Spain. The Hospitallers fortify Limisso, and begin to create a navy. Death of Kublai; the supremacy of his tribe ceases; the khans of Zagatal, Persia, and Kapzak, become independent. Jacopo da Varagine, archbishop of Genoa, writes the "Golden Legend."
1296	Battle of Dunbar, April 27. Balliol, made prisoner, resigns his crown. The Scotch parliament does homage to Edward at Berwick; the earl of Surrey is appointed governor of Scotland; the crown and sceptre of the kingdom are brought to London, and the coronation-stone from Scone placed in Westminster Abbey. A papal Bull forbids ecclesiastics to pay taxes imposed by temporal princes; the kings of England and France resist this, and compel the clergy to pay; the former, by placing out of the protection of the law those who refuse, and the latter, by prohibiting the export of money from his dominions. Edward,

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

- having obtained supplies from his parliament, sends an army into Guyenne, under his brother, the earl of Lancaster. Coalition of France, Navarre, Aragon, Portugal, and Granada, with the malcontent princes Alfonso and Juan, against the young king of Castile; his mother, with the assistance of Juan Lara, maintains the throne. The Sicilians and their king are excommunicated by the pope; they invade Calabria, where they take Squillace and other towns. Civil war in Genoa; the Ghibellins Doria and Spinola expel the Guelphs Grimaldi and Fiesco. The Venetians take Caffa in the Crimea from the Genoese. John, duke of Brabant, institutes the society of Merchant Adventurers.
- 1297 Edward having levied arbitrary taxes on wool and leather, the earls, Bohun of Hereford (Constable) and Bigod of Norfolk (Marshal), refuse to join his army; and the parliament passes an Act, Confirmatio Cartarum, Aug. 1, decreeing, that no taxes shall be raised without the consent of the knights, citizens, and burgesses in parliament assembled; this Act receives the royal assent. Guy, count of Flanders, is defeated by the French, and loses Furnes; Edward passes over with a large force to succour his ally; during his absence, the Scotch, under Sir W. Wallace and the earl of Moray, gain the battle of Cambruskenneth, and drive the English out of their country. Roger de Loria takes Otranto; he is recalled by James of Aragon, who visits Rome, promises to make war on his brother Frederic, gives his sister Violante in marriage to Robert, duke of Calabria, is invested by the pope with the sovereignty of Sardinia and Corsica, and appointed to command a crusade against the Holy Land. Philip is excommunicated, because his law, against the export of coin, stops the papal revenues derived from France. Boniface deposes the cardinals Jacopo and Pietro della Colonna, excommunicates the whole family, and confiscates their property. The Grimaldi and Fieschi continue to molest Genoa, and seize Monaco. Alexius II. seventh emperor of Trebizond. Dionysius of Portugal withdraws from the league against Castile. Godfrey von Hohenlohe grand master of the Teutonic knights in Prussia. On the death of Masoud II., he is succeeded by Alseddin II., the last of the Seljukian sultans. Death of Florenz of Hainault, leaving a daughter, Maud, heiress of the principality of Achaia. Boniface prohibits the dissection of dead bodies for the study of anatomy at Bologna.
- 1298 A truce of two years between England and France. Wallace penetrates with his victorious bands as far as Durham, but retires at the approach of Edward, who gains a decisive victory at Falkirk, July 22, and re-establishes his power in Scotland. Battle of Rosenthal, between Worms and Spire, July 2. Adolphus of Nassau defeated and slain by Rudolf's son, Albert, who is elected king by the diet of Francfort, and crowned at Aix-la-Chapelle, Aug. 24. Naval victory of the Genoese, under Lamba Doria, Sep. 8, off the Dalmatian island, Curzola; the Venetian fleet destroyed; the admiral, Andrea Dandolo, taken, dies of grief; Marco Polo, who commanded a galley, is conveyed a prisoner to Genoa, where he writes his Travels. Boniface proclaims a crusade against the Colonna family. Roger di Flor enters into the service of Frederic, king of Sicily.
- 1299 The Scotch refer their cause to the pope. James of Aragon, with a fleet under Roger de Loria, makes war on his brother Frederic; the Sicilians defend themselves valiantly, with varied success. The papal crusaders obtain possession of Palestrina, the impregnable fortress of the Colonna family, by a capitulation; having gained his end, Boniface breaks his word, refuses the promised amnesty, and the Colonna are dispersed in Sicily, France, and other countries. Malteo Visconte mediates peace between Genoa and Venice; also with Pisa; and among most of the cities of Italy; these treaties exalt Genoa; the armed vessels of her rivals are excluded for a stated period from the Mediterranean and Black Seas. Othman invades the territory of Nicomedia; the commencement of the Ottoman empire. The Mongols occupy Palestine, and offer Jerusalem to the Christians. Raymond Lully, a native of Majorca, writes philosophical works, which are afterwards condemned as heretical.

1300	Boniface claims Scotland as a fief of the papal see; he proclaims a jubilee, and attracts innumerable pilgrims to Rome by his plenary indigence. Roger de Loria defeats a Sicilian fleet, and takes the admiral, Conrad Doria. Robert, duke of Calabria, besieges Messina; the diseased state of his army compels him to return to Naples; Violante mediates a truce of six months between her husband and her brother. A party among the magnates of Hungary espouses the cause of Charles Robert, son of Charles Martel; he is proclaimed in Dalmatia and Croatia. Florence, prosperous and rich, is divided by the factions of the Bianchi (whites), under Vieri de' Cerchi and the Neri (blacks), headed by Corso de' Donati; the former have the ascendancy, and reject the pope's offered mediation. The Poles expel Ladislas, and take Wenceslas, king of Bohemia, for their sovereign. Guy, count of Flanders, is defeated and made prisoner by Philip's brother, Charles de Valois. Dante Alighieri (1266—1321) finishes his Divina Comedia . Villani begins to write his Chronicle . Universities founded at Lyons and Lerida. Cardinal Napoleone Orsino, by order of Boniface, besieges Gubbio and expels the Ghibelins. The marriage of Galeazzo, son of Matteo Visconte, to Beatrice, sister of Azzo VIII., marquis d'Este, celebrated with great pomp. Segarelli hurst at Parma; the Apostolicals, under their new leader, Dolcino, retire into Dalmatia. William de Villaret elected grand master of the Hospitaliers. The name of Lollards first given to a charitable society at Antwerp, who indulged the sick by singing to them.
1301	The English parliament denies the right of the pope to intermeddle in the affairs of Scotland. Philip of France imprisons the bishop of Pamiers, appointed by the pope; quarrels with Boniface. Death of Andrew III., king of Hungary, the last of the race of Arpad; supported by the papal influence, Charles Robert is crowned as his successor; Wenceslas, son of the king of Bohemia and Poland, is invited by a powerful party to oppose him. Boniface invites Charles of Valois into Italy, to assist his ambitious schemes, and flatters him with the hope of obtaining the imperial crowns of the East and the West. Under the plea of restoring peace Charles is admitted into Florence, where he allows the Neri to ill-treat and drive out their opponents; Dante is among the expelled. Marriage of Philip of Savoy to Isabella de Villehardouin. The Hospitaliers in alliance with the Mongols, enter Jerusalem, but establish no permanent occupation. Othman defeats Andronicus at Baphaeon, near Nicomedia.
1302	The Scotch appoint Comyn regent, and make another effort to regain independence. Boniface issues a violent Bull against Philip, who burns it, accuses him of simony and heresy, and refuses to acknowledge him as pope. Another expedition of Charles of Valois ends in a treaty, by which Frederic is recognized king of Sicily, and marries Leonora, daughter of Charles of Naples. Expulsion of the Visconti from Milan, and return of the Della Torre. The first assembly of the States General in France, April 10. Defeat of the French by the Flemings at Courtnay, July 11. Flavio Gioja said to have invented the mariner's compass at Amalfi (see 1250).
1303	Edward makes peace with France, and marches again into Scotland. Philip demands a general council, to hear his charges against the pope, by whom he is excommunicated and his subjects absolved from their allegiance. Boniface is surprized at Anagni, by William de Nogaret; after being kept some days a prisoner, he is allowed to return to Rome, where he dies, Oct. 11. Roger di Flor forms, out of the mercenaries who had served in Sicily, his Catalan Grand Company, and is employed by the Greek emperor; he receives the title of grand duke, leads his forces against the Mongols and Turks, and establishes himself at Cyzicus. The Visconti make a vigorous, but unsuccessful, effort to reinstate themselves at Milan. Siegfried von Feuchtwangen grand master of the Teutonic knights in Prussia. Athanasius restored patriarch of CP.
1304	The regent Comyn submits to Edward; Wallace continues the struggle. Philip defeats the Flemings, Aug. 18. Benedict XI. reverses many of the acts of Boniface, and endeavours to restore peace; he dies after a reign of nine months, and the dissensions of the cardinals keep the papal chair vacant. A great part of Florence hurst by the violence of the factions. Wenceslas renounces the

1309	Edward II. recalls Gaveston, who offends the barons again by his insolence. Removal of the papal see to Avignon. Clement issues a Bull, in which he declares Ferrara to be a fief of the church, excommunicates the Venetians, lays an interdiction on their lands, places them out of the protection of all laws, human and divine, and authorizes Christians to seize their persons, sell them for slaves, and rob them of their property, in all parts of the world: his legate preaches a crusade against them, collects a large force and drives them from Ferrara, which is not restored to any of the d'Este family, but governed for the pope by Robert, who had just succeeded his father, Charles II., as king of Naples. Bajamonte Tiepolo endeavours to form a Guelph party at Venice, fails, and is expelled. At the diet at Spire, the Imperial cities of Germany are for the first time represented. Marienburg in Prussia is made the seat of the Teutonic knights. The Catalans are repulsed in their attack on Thessalonica; their leader, Rocafort, is treacherously seized by the Neapolitan admiral, Thibaut de Sipoya, and starved to death in a dungeon at Naples. Rebellion in Granada; Muhammad III. resigns his crown to his brother Nazar.
1310	Commissioners are appointed by parliament to exercise the royal power in England; they banish Gaveston. Henry obtains the throne of Bohemia for his son John, and proceeds with a numerous retinue and army to Italy; he restores Matteo Visconte at Milan, and endeavours to allay the violence of the two factions; Robert, king of Naples, and chief of the Guelph party, secretly opposes him. An attempt of the Ferrarese to regain their independence, is suppressed by the legate, cardinal Pelagius, with great cruelty and rapine. The councils of Meutz, Ravenna, and Salamanca, acquit the Templars accused before them; at Paris and Senlis they are condemned; many of the knights are burnt alive. The city of Rhodes is taken by the Hospitaliers, and the conquest of the island completed. The Catalan Grand Company enter into the service of Walter de Brienne, duke of Athens. Arnold di Villa Nuova teaches the distillation of spirits of wine.
1311	Edward again recalls Gaveston, retires to York, and protests against the ordinances of the commissioners; the barons arm against him. Henry and his queen, Margaret, are crowned at Milan; the party of the Della Torre, suspected of plotting new disturbances, are driven from that city; Matteo Visconte regains full power there. Henry makes many fruitless efforts to restore peace among the Italian cities; the plague breaks out in his army; his queen, Margaret, falls a victim to it at Genoa. The Fifteenth General Council, at Vienne, in Dauphiny, suppresses the Order of Knights Templars, condemns the Beghards and Beguines of Flanders, and refuses to entertain the charges brought by the king of France against the late pope Boniface. Walter de Brienne quarrels with the Catalans, and is defeated and slain by them in a battle on the banks of the Cephissus; they conquer the duchy of Athens, and appoint Roger Deslaur grand duke. Niphon I. patriarch of CP.
1312	Gaveston made prisoner at Scarborough, conveyed to Warwick, and beheaded, July 1; peace between Edward and the barons. The council of Vienne continues its sittings till May 6; the act for suppressing the Templars published April 3; their possessions divided among several sovereigns, and part assigned to the Hospitaliers. Robert, king of Naples, seizes the principal forts in Rome; Henry is, nevertheless, crowned in the Lateran church by three cardinals. The new emperor enters into a treaty of alliance with Frederic of Sicily, and gives him one of his daughters in marriage. Karl Baffart of Treves, grand master of the Teutonic Order in Prussia. Hertford college, Oxford, founded.
1313	Robert Bruce takes Inverness and besieges Stirling; a truce between England and Scotland. Phillip restrains Clement from excommunicating the king of Naples for his violence in Rome. The emperor Henry, in conjunction with the Genoese and Sicilians, prepares to attack Robert, but dies suddenly at Buonconvento, near Siena, Aug. 24, æt. 49. Nazar, king of Granada, deposed by his nephew, Abul Walid. Robert appointed governor of Florence for five years. Marriage of Louis of Burgundy to Maud of Hainault, heiress of Achaia. Birth of Boccaccio. Rudiger von Manesse, of Zurich, forms his Collection of Poems.

1314	Battle of Bannockburn, June 25; the independence of Scotland established. Louis of Bavaria, and Frederic, son of the late Albert of Austria, are elected by two opposite parties kings of Germany, and make war on each other. Clement appoints the king of Naples senator of Rome and viceroy of Italy; protected by him, the Gueff faction prevails; the Ghibelins maintain their struggle at Pisa, Lucca, and other places. Death of Clement V.; the dissensions of the cardinals keep the papal see vacant again nearly two years and four months. Death of Philip le Bel; he is succeeded by his son, Louis Hutin (the Quarrelsome), already ten years king of Navarre. Fruitless expedition of the king of Naples against Sicily; repulsed at Trapani, he agrees to a truce of three years. Molay, grand master of the Templars, is burnt alive at Paris, protesting to the last the innocence of his Order. The Hospitaliers conquer the islets near Rhodes, and settle the government of their little State. Exeter College, Oxford, founded by Stapleton, bishop of Exeter.
1315	The earl of Lancaster, the king's cousin, takes the direction of public affairs in England. Edward adopts a new favourite, Hugh le Despenser. Robert Bruce invades England, takes Berwick, is repulsed at Carlisle, and returns to Scotland; his brother, Edward, lands with an army in Ireland. Matteo Visconte and Uguccone della Faggiuola defeat Philip and Peter, king Robert's brothers, and repress the Gueffs in Lombardy and Tuscany. The three Swiss cantons defeat Leopold of Austria at Morgarten, Nov. 16. Othman attempts to recover Rhodes; he is bravely repelled by the knights, with the assistance of Amadeus of Savoy. Mondini de' Luzzi teaches anatomy. England afflicted by a grievous famine.
1316	Edward Bruce crowned king of Ireland; his brother, Robert, goes over with an army to support him, but soon withdraws. Death of Louis X.; his posthumous son, John, lives only five days. The Salic Law is established, to exclude females and their descendants from the throne of France. Joanna, daughter of Louis, inherits only Navarre. Philip V., second son of Philip IV., takes the French throne. The predominance of French cardinals, created by Clement V., secures, eventually, the election of another French pope, and the continuance of the papal see at Avignon. John XXII. appoints eight more cardinals, of whom seven are French. The Genoese conclude a commercial treaty with Alexius of Trebizond, which secures their trade in the Black Sea. John XIII. patriarch of CP.
1317	Another expedition of Robert against Sicily ends in another truce. The citizens of Ferrara expel Robert's garrison, and restore the government of the marquise d'Este. Violent commotions in Genoa. The Swedish king, Birger, by the murder of his two brothers, causes a rebellion of his people.
1318	Battle of Dundalk, Oct. 5; Edward Bruce defeated by Lord Birmingham, and slain; termination of the war in Ireland. Philip obtains from Joanna, a child, æt. 8, the cession of Navarre and Champagne, which had been united since the time of Theobald I. (A.D. 1234); of the former, she regains possession, but the latter remains annexed to the crown of France. Genoa, besieged by the Ghibelins, is relieved by king Robert, who is appointed governor of the city for ten years. Giotto (1276—1336) the first painter of portraits from life.
1319	A truce of two years between England and Scotland. Bruce excommunicated by the pope; the Scotch parliament resists all papal interference in their affairs. The siege of Genoa is raised, and king Robert goes to Avignon; after his departure, the Ghibelins, Doria and Spinola, return and renew the attack. Brescia submits to a governor appointed by Robert. The Castilians invade Granada, and are defeated with great loss; their two princes, Juan and Pedro, are slain. Dionysius of Portugal gives the confiscated possessions of the Templars in his kingdom to a new military Order, of Christ. On the death of Erik, the throne of Denmark remains for a time vacant. Birger deposed and banished by the Swedes; they elect Magnus Smek, æt. 3, who is also king of Norway. Michael, grand duke of Russia, is put to death by the khan of Kapzak, who places Jurij on the throne. Louis of Bavaria gives the marquise of Lusatia to the king of Bohemia.

1320	The favours heaped by Edward on Despenser and his father excite the jealousy of the earl of Lancaster and other barons. Robert, by his intrigues, prevents a settlement of the contest in Germany, in order to promote his ambitious designs in Italy; he sends Philip de Valois with a French army to oppose the Visconti, who compel him to return without having obtained any advantage. The siege of Genoa is still continued. The long and prosperous reign of Dionysius in Portugal is troubled by the discontent of his son. Christopher, brother of Erik, obtains the vacant throne of Denmark by a capitulation with the nobles.
1321	The barons obtain from the parliament an act of attainder and banishment against the Despensers; the king collects an army, reverses the act, and recalls the exiles. Andronicus the younger, assisted by John Cantacuzene and Siryannes, commences a civil war against the emperor, his grandfather; peace concluded between them at Rhigion: the war renewed in the autumn, and Heraclea besieged. Siryannes returns to the service of the old emperor. The besiegers of Genoa defeat an army landed against them by king Robert, at Andoria. Galeazzo Visconti lays siege to Cremona. Dante, still an exile from Florence for his Ghibellinism, dies, æt. 56, at Ravenna, where he had been befriended by Guido Novello da Polenta.
1322	Edward II. defeats the barons at Boroughbridge; the earl of Hereford slain; the earl of Lancaster made prisoner and beheaded at Pontefract, March 23; Hugh le Despenser acquires for himself a large part of the forfeited estates. Queen Isabella, while resident in the Tower of London, first sees Mortimer, who is brought prisoner, to be confined there. The property of the English Templars seized, Jan. 7; the knights are dispersed in monasteries, and pensions allowed them. Sir John Mandeville travels in the East, 1322 to 1356. Death of Philip, king of France; leaving only daughters, he is succeeded by his brother, who unjustly claims also Navarre; resistance of the Navarrese; battle of Beuthata, in a pass of the Pyrenees. Death of Maria, queen-dowager of Castile. Treaty of Epibates between the emperor Andronicus and his grandson. Battle of Mühldorf, or Ampfing; Frederic of Austria is taken prisoner by Louis of Bavaria (Sep. 28), who from this time reigns sole king of Germany. Cremona surrenders to Galeazzo Visconti; his brother, Marco, defeats a papal and Neapolitan army at Bassignano; their father, Matteo, his family, and adherents, are excommunicated by the pope, who publishes a crusade against them, confiscates their property, and authorizes their enemies to seize their persons and sell them as slaves. Robert and the pope offer to recognize Frederic of Austria as king of Germany, if he will give active support to their plans; he sends his brother Henry with an army, who, on arriving at Brescia, learns the real nature of the party strife raging in Italy, and marches back again. Matteo Visconti resigns his power to his son, Galeazzo, and retires to the monastery of Crescenzo, where he dies, June 27, æt. 72.
1323	Unsuccessful invasion of Scotland by Edward; a truce of thirteen years concluded between the two countries. Through the influence of Isabella, Mortimer is allowed to escape. Louis of Bavaria invests his son with the margraviate of Brandenburg, vacant by the extinction of the family of Albert the Bear, who had held it since 1134. The siege of Genoa raised. The papal legate takes Alessandria and Tortona, and besieges Milan. Louis sends some German troops to assist the Visconti; the assailants are repulsed with great loss. The pope excommunicates Louis, and declares his election void.

1325	Charles desires Isabella to leave his court; she withdraws to Hainault, where she affiances her son, Edward, to Philippa, daughter of the count, whom she engages to assist her with an army. Frederic of Austria, by the treaty of Trausnitz, renounces the crown of Germany, and is released from prison. Castruccio of Lucca, and Azzo, son of Galeazzo Visconte, defeat the Florentines and their allies at Cappiano and take their general, Raymond da Cardona. Robert besieges Palermo, and returns to Naples, unable to accomplish his object. Siege of Cagliari, by the Aragonese; the Pisans make a vain effort to relieve the place. Abul Walid is slain in a revolt at Granada, and succeeded by his son.
132	Isabella lands with her army in Suffolk, Sep. 24, and is joined by many nobles. Flight of Edward into Wales; the Despensers are taken and hanged; the king is conveyed a prisoner to Kenilworth castle. Leopold of Austria, and the pope, annul the treaty of Trausnitz; Frederic surrenders again to Louis, who treats him as his friend. The pope incites Ladislas, king of Poland, and Gedimin, duke of Lithuania, to attack the Teutonic knights, and invade Brandenburg. Clare Hall, Cambridge, founded by Dr. Richard Baden. Parma and Reggio submit to the papal legate. The Florentines give the government of their city for five years to Robert's son, Charles, duke of Calabria. Death of Othman; Prusa taken by his son Orchan. Death of Roger Deslaur; the Catalans invite Manfred of Sicily to be grand duke of Athens. Florence Sanudo, by her second marriage, conveys the duchy of Naxos to Nicholas II.
1327	Edward II. deposed by Parliament, Jan. 7; his son refuses the crown, unless resigned by his father; this being accomplished, Jan. 20, Edward III., who had just entered his fourteenth year, is proclaimed Jan. 25; his mother and Mortimer rule in his name. Robert Bruce invades England, but retires before the English army; Edward displays early proofs of valour; his father is brutally murdered by his keepers in Berkeley castle, Sep. 21, æt. 43. Modena submits to the legate. Conference at Trent between Louis and the leaders of the Ghibellins; he advances to Milan, and is crowned king of Italy, May 31; he quarrels with Galeazzo Visconte, and imprisons him at Monza; the citizens of Pisa shut their gates against him, but yield, after a siege, and pay a heavy contribution. The Genoese, in the service of king Robert, take Ostia; Sciarra Colonna defends Rome. The pope fulminates more violently against Louis, in whose defence, the Franciscan, William Occam, Marsilius of Padua, and John of Janduno, by their writings, deny the temporal authority of the Roman bishop over Germany and other countries. Cecco d'Ascoli burnt at Florence, for heresies discovered in his poetry. Rainulph Higden concludes his Polychronicon. Origin of the Goldsmiths' and Skinners' Companies in London.
1328	Isabella and Mortimer odious to the nation; he concludes a treaty of peace, recognizing the complete independence of Scotland. The marriage of Edward to Philippa of Hainault is solemnized at York. Death of Charles, king of France, Jan. 31, æt. 34; his crown descends to Philip, son of Charles de Valois, third son of Philip III. (see 1285); unable to claim Navarre, he marries Joanna to Philip, count d'Evreux, who reigns jointly with her. The Flemings revolt; are defeated by the king of France, at Mount Cassel, Aug. 23, and reduced to submission. Louis crowned emperor at Rome, Jan. 17, by the bishops of Venice and Aleria; he holds an assembly of the people, April 18, at which it is decreed that every pope must reside in Rome. John XXII. is deposed, and Nicholas V. elected. Galeazzo Visconte is liberated, and dies; his son, Azzo, succeeds him. The Ghibellins lose two important leaders by the death of Sciarra Colonna and Castruccio of Lucca; the Gneifs also lose king Robert's son, Charles, duke of Calabria, leaving only two young daughters. Luigi da Gonzaga obtains the lordship of Mantua, and Cane dalla Scala that of Padua. Third rebellion of Andronicus the younger; he takes CP., and his grandfather resigns the throne to him. Alexander II. of Russia provokes the Golden Horde by a massacre of the Tartars; Uzbek expels him, and gives the principalities of Moscow, Novogorod, and Wladimir, to Ivan, brother of Jurij, who takes the title of grand prince of Moscow, and makes that city the capital of his dominions. Death of Nicholas Trivet, historian of the house of Anjou.

1340	On his return to Flanders, Edward encounters and destroys a large French fleet, June 24; 230 ships taken; he besieges Tournay; a truce concluded, Sep. 3, through the mediation of Jane, dowager-countess of Hainault. Queen Philippa accompanies her husband; their son, John of Gaunt (or Ghent), is born in the city from which his name is taken; he is afterwards duke of Lancaster. The Moors of Granada and Fez besiege Tarifa; the kings of Castile and Portugal relieve the place, and defeat the besiegers with great loss near the river Guadalquivir. A long civil war follows the death of Basil, emperor of Trebizond; his widow, Irene, first occupies the throne. On the death of the regent Gerard, Waldemar, Christopher's son, obtains the crown of Denmark. The plague, or black death, introduced into Italy from the East, spreads over Europe. Foundation of Queen's College, Oxford, by queen Philippa's confessor, Robert de Eglesfield. Death of the Biblical Commentator, Nicholas de Lyra.
1341	Quarrel of Edward with Stratford, archbishop of Canterbury, and the clergy. The parliament, with their vote of supplies, pass an act, limiting the king's prerogative, which he annuls by a proclamation; he supports the claim of John de Montfort to the county of Bretagne, in opposition to Charles de Blois, who receives the province from the French king; De Montfort is made prisoner by Philip at Nantes. Death of Andronicus; Anne of Savoy regent for her son, John V., et. 9, is supported by the grand admiral, Apokaukus, and the patriarch, against Cantacuzene, who proclaims himself emperor. Mastino della Scala cedes Lucca to Florence, which the Pisans oppose by a war. Among the hostages given by Florence is Giovanni Villani, the future historian. Petrarch receives the crown of laurel in the capitol. Controversy between Barlaam and the monks of Mount Athos. Ludolph König von Weitzan, grand master of the Teutonic knights in Prussia. Niccolò Acciaiuoli returns from the Morea to Italy.
1342	Jane de Montfort, in her husband's captivity, defends Bretagne, is besieged in Hennebonne, and relieved by the arrival of English succours. Campaign in Bretagne; death of Robert d'Artois; Edward besieges Vannes. Lucca surrenders to the Pisans. Walter de Brienne, titular duke of Athens, appointed captain of Florence, makes peace with Pisa. Italy infested by condottiere bands; league of the States against them. The Castilians lay siege to Algeiras. Death of Peter, king of Sicily; his brother, John, duke of Randazzo, as regent for his young son Louis, successfully defends the island. Charles Robert, king of Hungary, is succeeded by his son Louis. Cantacuzene escapes into Servia; Stephen Dushan supports him with an army, and lays siege to Serres. Cola di Rienzo accompanies the embassy sent from Rome to the new pope, Clement VI. David Bruce returns to Scotland, and assumes the government.
1343	The papal legates mediate a truce of three years between England and France, and their allies. Clement renews the excommunication of the emperor Louis, and makes such arrogant demands, that the diet rejects them indignantly, and resolves to resist them strenuously. Death of Robert, king of Naples; his grand-daughter, Joanna, is crowned without her husband, Andrew of Hungary, for whom she manifests an extreme aversion; her sister, Maria, is married to Charles, duke of Durazzo. The Florentines expel Walter de Brienne and establish a popular government. The band, called duke Warner's company, after levying heavy contributions in Italy, receives a large sum to withdraw into Germany. Algeiras surrenders to Alfonso of Castile, who concludes a truce for ten years with the king of Granada. The Greeks and their Bulgarian auxiliaries besiege Demotica; Cantacuzene invites the assistance of the Turks, who relieve the place, and from this time form a permanent settlement in Europe. Magnus, king of Sweden, appoints his second son, Haco VIII., et. 5, king of Norway. Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, founded by the countess of Pembroke.
1344	Some nobles of Bretagne and Normandy are treacherously seized and put to death by Philip; breach of the truce; the earl of Derby defeats the count de Lisle at Bergerac, in Guyenne, and reduces a great part of Perigord. Apokaukos fails in his attempt against Demotica. The Servians join the imperialists against Cantacuzene, and are defeated by the Turks. The knights of Rhodes destroy a Turkish fleet at Pallene, and assist in the capture of Smyrna by the Venetians and the

1348	A truce between England and France. Louis of Hungary takes possession of Naples; Joanna and her husband take refuge in Provence; the plague raging in Italy, obliges the conqueror to return into his own country; he puts to death the duke of Durazzo and takes with him the child, Charles Martel, his brother Andrew's son, and many Italian nobles. Joanna sells Avignon to the pope, who gives her husband the title of king; they return to Naples. War between Cantacuzene and the Genoese of Galata; the Greek fleet captured before CP.; the senate of Genoa orders the colony to desist from hostilities. Philip of Aragon, held for a time in captivity by a conspiracy of his nobles, is rescued by his people; he makes new laws, extending the privileges of the commons, and limiting the power of the crown and the grandees. The count of Clermont fits out a fleet in Catalonia, for his expedition to the Canary Islands; the state of France and the defence of his lands compel him to relinquish the undertaking. Joan, daughter of Edward III., affianced to Peter of Castile, dies of the plague at Bordeaux, on her way to Spain. Niccolo Acciaiuoli is appointed by Joanna hereditary grand seneschal of Naples and count of Amalfi. Duke Warner again appears in Italy, with his band, and is taken into the Neapolitan service. A great mortality caused throughout Europe by the plague; 60,000 are buried during the year in the Charter-house yard of London; in the month of October Saragossa loses 300 daily; two-thirds of the population of Florence perish; among its victims is Giovanni Villani, the historian; his Chronicle is continued by his brother Matteo; this plague suggests to Boccaccio the idea of his Decameron. Calus and Gonville College, at Cambridge, founded by Edmund Gonville. Interview of Rienzo with the king of Hungary at Naples.
1349	Edward defeats a plot to betray Calais, Jan. 1; he conquers in single combat the French knight, Eustace de Ribeaumont. Institution (or revival, see 1192) of the Order of the Garter, April 23. Louis of Naples recovers the greater part of his kingdom, but loses it again through the defection of duke Warner, who takes pay of the Hungarians. Death of Luchino Visconte; his brother, the archbishop John, becomes governor of Milan and its dependencies. Joanna of Navarre dies in France; her son, Charles, receives the surname of the Bad, or the Cruel, for his severities in repressing some disorders in his provinces. Clement declares the Flagellants to be heretics, and issues a Bull against them. Bartolo da Sassoferrato, eminent as a jurist. After a series of rapid revolutions, Alexius Comnenus III. is acknowledged emperor (the seventeenth) of Trebizond. Dauphiny annexed to France, on condition that the king's eldest son should be called the Dauphin. Günther, count of Schwarzberg, is elected king by some of the German princes, but resigns at the end of four months.
1350	Death of Phillip, king of France; the reign of his brother, John, is disturbed by the intrigues of Charles of Navarre. Alfonso of Castile is carried off by the plague in his camp before Gibraltar, March 26; his son, Peter, et. 16, by his ferocious acts obtains the surname of the Cruel. Louis of Hungary again over-runs the kingdom of Naples, which he evacuates under a treaty mediated by the pope. On the death of Giovanni da Murta, Giovanni di Valente is elected doge of Genoa. The seizure of some Venetian ships by the Genoese at Caffa, in the Crimea, leads to a furious naval war. Cantacuzene, protected by a Turkish force, enters Thessalonica, and recovers part of Macedonia from the Servians; he pays his Turkish mercenaries with money sent from Russia to repair the church of St. Sophia; Callistus I., the newly-appointed patriarch of CP., connives at the act, but the clergy are very indignant. The Hungarians are improved by their intercourse with Italy; vines are planted at Tokay. Clement, at the end of fifty years, repeats the jubilee; Rienzo in disguise visits Rome.
1351	The law of high-treason defined by a special Act of the English parliament. Zürich joins the Swiss confederation, and is placed at the head of the cantons; the abbot of St. Gall forms an alliance with them. Peter the Cruel puts to death Eleanor de Guzman, and persecutes her family. John Visconte, having obtained possession of Bologna, Clement, after threats of excommunication and interdict, accepts a sum of money, and grants the investiture. Rienzo seeks Charles IV.

	at Prague, and is transferred by him to the custody of the pope at Avignon. The Genoese fleet, under Paganino Doria, plunders many Venetian towns on the Adriatic and in Negropont; the Venetians and their ally, the king of Aragon, send a powerful army into the Archipelago. Cantacuzene leaves John V. at Thessalonica, and returns to settle the religious disputes at CP. Nicephorus Gregoras, the historian, is confined in the monastery at Chora, and ill-treated for his heresy. Winrich von Kniprode grand master of the Teutonic knights in Prussia; industry and commerce begin to flourish in that country; schools and hospitals are established there. Corpus Christi, or Benedict, College, Cambridge, founded; also Trinity Hall, by William Bateman, bishop of Norwich.
1352	The parliament, by a statute of Premunire, still farther limits the papal power in England. Naval battle in the Bosphorus, Feb. 13; the Genoese defeat the Venetians and Aragonese under Nicoletto Pisani, assisted by the Greek fleet; they compel Cantacuzene to sign a treaty, May 6, which gives them the entire command of the Black Sea. John V. is encouraged by his partizans of Thessalonica to commence war against Cantacuzene. Glaris and Zug join the Swiss league. Death of Obizzo, marquis d'Este; he is succeeded by his son, Aldrovandino III.
1353	Alliance of Genoa with Louis of Hungary; their fleet, commanded by Antonino Grimaldi, defeated by the Venetians and Aragonese off Linghiera, in Sardinia, Aug. 29; the Genoese, in despair, place themselves under the protection of John Visconte; he restores their confidence, and improves their city; among other useful works, he erects for them a public clock. Fra Moriale, a knight of Rhodes, collects a condottiere band in Italy; Deodati de Gozon, grand master of the Order, not being able to check such private adventures of his knights, resigns his office. Marriage of Peter the Cruel to Blanche de Bourbon; in three days he deserts her, and devotes himself to his mistress, Maria de Padilla. John V. is driven to the isle of Tenedos by the Turkish allies of Cantacuzene, who breaks his treaty with Anne of Savoy, and proclaims his own son, Matthew, joint emperor. The canton of Berne accedes to the Swiss confederation. Simeon, grand duke of Russia, dies of the plague; his nephew, Iwan II., does homage to the Golden Horde, as his successor. Death of Maximus Planudes, the Greek collector of the fables ascribed to Æsop.
1354	Robert Stuart, regent of Scotland, surprises the town of Berwick. Rienzo appointed senator of Rome; puts to death Fra Moriale; fails in his attempt on Palestrina; is assassinated, Sep. 8. The cardinal Aibornoz restores order in Rome. Petrarch accompanies an embassy sent by John Visconte to Venice, which endeavours without success to restore peace between that republic and Genoa. Paganino Doria captures or destroys the Venetian fleet at Sapienza, in the Morea, Nov. 4, and takes the admiral, Pisani, prisoner. Death of Andrea Dandolo, Sep. 7. Marino Faliero elected doge of Venice. Sicily distracted by two rival factions and a minor's reign; Niccolò Acciaiuoli conquers Palermo, Trapani, and a large part of the island for the king of Naples. Death of John Visconte; his nephews, Matteo, Hernabo, and Galeazzo, jointly succeed him. John V., assisted by some Genoese ships, surprises CP., and regains his throne. Cantacuzene retires into a monastery as the monk Joasaph. Nicephorus Gregoras is released from his confinement. The patriarch Callistus having been deposed by Cantacuzene for refusing to crown Matthew, John V. deposes Philotheus, who performed the ceremony, and restores Callistus. Charles IV. introduces a feudal constitution in Bohemia; he proceeds to Italy and arrives at Mantua, but refuses to join the league against the Visconti. Yusef, king of Granada, is stabbed by a madman in a mosque; his son, Muhamad, succeeds him. Inez de Castro murdered by order of her husband's father, Alfonso, king of Portugal. Peter of Castile imprisons his queen, Suleiman, son of Orchan, repairs the walls of Gallipoli, which had been thrown down by an earthquake, and brings over a colony of Turkish families, who permanently occupy the place. The title of lord mayor given to the chief magistrate of London.

1355	Charles, king of Navarre, is treacherously seized and imprisoned in France; his brother Philip, and Geoffrey d'Harcourt, enter into alliance with Edward III. War renewed. The prince of Wales conducts an army to Guyenne, crosses the Garonne, and over-runs Languedoc. Edward lands at Calais, and invades the northern provinces; he comes back to England, repels an incursion of the Scotch, recovers Berwick, and advances to Edinburgh; Balliol resigns to him his claims on the crown of Scotland, for a pension. Charles IV. is crowned at Milan Jan. 6, and at Rome April 5. Marino Fallero, doge of Venice, accused of a conspiracy against the nobles, is beheaded, April 17, æt. 80, on the great staircase of the ducal palace. The Venetians conclude a disadvantageous peace with the Genoese; the latter employ their fleets on the coast of Africa, and take Tripoli. Death of Louis, the young king of Sicily; his brother, Frederic, at a still more tender age, is supported by the Aragonese. Matteo Visconte dies, Sep. 26; his two brothers continue to act in concert.
1356	Battle of Poitiers, Sep. 19; John, king of France, taken prisoner by Edward, the Black Prince; the dauphin Charles escapes, and assumes the government during his father's captivity. The Golden Bull, prepared by Bartolo da Sassoferrato, is promulgated by the emperor, as the fundamental law of the Germanic constitution. General resistance of Northern Italy to the brothers Visconti; the marquis of Montferrat takes Asti from them; the Genoese recover their independence, and re-elect their former doge, Simon Boccanegra. Louis, king of Hungary, renews his hostilities against the Venetians. Matthew Cantacuzene struggles to regain his lost throne. John V. obtains the friendship of Orchan. Wickliffe publishes his "Last Age of the Church." Sir John Mandeville returns from his Travels, and writes his account of them.
1357	The prince of Wales brings his prisoners to London, and is triumphantly received, May 24. Edward concludes a treaty with the captive king, which the dauphin rejects. Distress of France; Charles of Navarre escapes from his prison, and makes active war; the States create internal discord by their endeavours to restrict the royal prerogative. David, king of Scotland, is released for a ransom, after a confinement of eleven years. Peter I., having succeeded his father, Alfonso, on the throne of Portugal, punishes the murderers of Inez de Castro, and transfers her remains to the royal sepulchre of Alcobaca, with funeral honours. Louis of Hungary takes Zara, Trau, and Spalatro, from the Venetians. Count Lando, chief of another irregular band, is employed by the league against the brothers Visconti, whose army is defeated on the Oglio with great loss. The rebellion of Louis, duke of Durazzo, obliges Acciaiuoli to raise the siege of Catania, and return to Naples. Cardinal Albornoz recalled from Rome to Avignon. Matthew Cantacuzene is given up to John V. by the Servians, and compelled to abdicate. Timour's first campaign against the Irakians.
1358	Violent commotions in France; the authority of the dauphin disregarded; the marshals of Normandy and Burgundy murdered; insurrection of the peasantry, or war of La Jaquerie ; Edward's lieutenant, the Captal de Buche, rescues the dauphin's wife and the ladies of her court from their violence at Meaux. Edward respects the truce to which he had agreed in his treaty with the king. Peter of Aragon supports Henry de Trastamara, son of Eleanor de Guzman (see 1330 and 1351), in his claims on the crown of Castile. Peter the Cruel puts to death his brother, Ferdinand, with others of the royal family, John, prince of Aragon, and many Castilian grandees. The Venetians by a treaty of peace resign Dalmatia and Istria to the king of Hungary, and agree to style their doge only duke of Venice, expunging from his title their share of the empire of Romania, acquired in 1204. Peace concluded between the Visconti and their enemies. The duke of Durazzo reconciled with the king of Naples. Cardinal Albornoz again sent as legate to Rome. Orchan's son, Suleiman, killed by a fall from his horse. The barony of Corinth granted to Niccolo Acciaiuoli.
1359	Edward's terms of peace not being accepted, he invades France again, and lays siege to Rheims. Pavia surrenders to Galeazzo Visconte; Bernabo besieges Bologna. Innocent makes a vain effort to restore peace between Castile and Aragon, and turn their arms against the infidels. Peter continues his atrocities,

1360	and puts to death his aunt, Eleanor, queen of Aragon. Muhamad, king of Granada, deposed by his brother, Ismail, retires into Africa. Death of Orchan; his son, Amurath, or Murad I., becomes sultan of the Ottomans. Timour takes Samarcand, and conquers Maveraunaher, or Transoxiana. Margaret, daughter of Waldemar, king of Denmark, betrothed to Haco, king of Norway. John of Gaunt marries Blanche, daughter of the earl of Lancaster, great-grandson of Henry III., and receives the title of duke of Lancaster. Edward desists from his attack on Rheims, and advances unopposed to the gates of Paris; treaty of peace signed at Bretigny, May 8; the king of France set free, for a large ransom; his daughter, Isabella, is betrothed to the young son of Galeazzo Visconte, who assists him in paying the stipulated price for his liberation; the lands of Vertus in Campagne are settled on the son, with the title of count. Bologna is given up to the legate, cardinal Alborno; Bernabo, defying threats of excommunication, persists in the siege, till he is driven away by a body of Hungarians, invited by the legate; these auxiliaries plunder the territories of Modena and Parma. The condottiere Anichino di Mongardo infests Naples. Ismail, the usurper of Granada, is slain by his chief minister, Abu Said, who seizes the throne. Amurath takes Ancyra and Demotica. Wickliffe's controversy with the Mendicants at Oxford. John Milicz, archdeacon of Prague, opposes the prevalent superstition and errors of the age. Cantacuzene retires to Mount Athos, and writes his History. Boccaccio introduces Leontius Pilatus to teach Greek at Florence. The insurrectionary bands in France defeat the royal army under James de Bourbon, at Brignais, near Lyons, April 2. Blanche de Bourbon, et. 25, poisoned by order of Peter the Cruel, in her prison at Medina Sidonia, with her companion, Isabella Lara, widow of prince John of Aragon; Maria de Padilla, Peter's favourite mistress, dies soon afterwards. Bernabo Visconte renews the siege of Bologna; the king of Hungary refuses farther assistance against him. The pope and the marquis of Montferrat invite into Italy a number of soldiers disbanded from the English army. The violence of the plague suspends all military operations; the doge of Venice dies of it, and Aldrovandino d'Este; during the minority of his son, Obizzo IV., his brother, Nicholas, takes the reins of government. Galeazzo Visconte founds the university of Pavia. Muhamad leaves Africa and comes to Ronda; he is proclaimed again at Malaga, and applies to Peter of Castile for support. Amurath takes Adrianople, and makes it his residence. Edward forms Guienne and the adjoining provinces into the principality of Aquitaine, for his son, the Black Prince; he celebrates his fiftieth year by a general amnesty, and a confirmation of Magna Charta. An Act of parliament orders the French language to be discontinued in law pleadings and documents, and English to be used in all the courts. Death of Louis, king of Naples; Joanna marries James of Aragon, son of the deposed king of Majorca, but stipulates that he shall not assume the regal title. Abu Said visits Peter of Castile to ask his friendship, and is treacherously slain by him; Muhamad re-ascends the throne of Granada. The Desht-Jitteh, or Getae, begin to manifest their jealousy of Timour. Philotheus restored patriarch of CP. The king of France returns to England, on account of some difficulties in executing the treaty. London is visited by the king of Cyprus, who is endeavouring to incite Europe to a new crusade; David of Scotland, being there also at the same time, Edward III., his son, the Black Prince, and the three foreign sovereigns, are entertained by Sir Henry Pikard, who had been lord mayor in 1367. Bernabo Visconte is excommunicated by the pope, and defeated by the League; the forces of his brother, Galeazzo, are routed by the marquis of Montferrat, assisted by Otho of Brunswick and the English mercenaries; count Lando slain at Novara. The English enter into the service of the Pisans, and obtain a victory for them over the Florentines. Gabriel Adorno elected doge of Genoa. Marriage of Haco, king of Norway, to Margaret, the future "Semiramis of the North"; the Swedes, displeased by this marriage, offer their throne to Albert of Mecklenburg, a son of Magnus Smek's sister. Amurath turns his arms against the Bulgarians and Servians; from the former he takes Philippopolis, and from the latter Serres. Timour's first campaign against the Getae in Maveraunaher.

1373	John of Gaunt lands at Calais with a large force, and marches to the South; the French avoid a general battle, but harass him by constant skirmishes; he reaches Bordeaux with his army so diminished, that he desists from farther enterprises. Henry of Castile invades Portugal, besieges Lisbon, and compels Ferdinand to sign a treaty of peace. Gregory exacts a tenth of the ecclesiastical revenues in many countries, to defray the expenses of the war against the Visconti; he excommunicates them, and takes Sir John Hawkwood into his service; all Lombardy is desolated by these contests. The Venetians make war on Francesco da Carrara, lord of Padua; the dukes Albert and Leopold of Austria, and Louis, king of Hungary and Poland, send him an auxiliary force, but he is compelled to subscribe a humiliating treaty of peace. The Genoese attack Cyprus and take Famagosta; the king is obliged to own himself their feudatory, and pay them an annual tribute. Gregory forbids the knights of Rhodes to assist the attack on Cyprus, and assigns to them an annual payment out of the tithes of that island, for the defence of Smyrna. Birth of John Huss, July 8, at Hussinetz, in Bohemia. Winchester College founded by William of Wykeham.
1374	The ravages of the plague dispose the belligerent States to lay down their arms. A truce is concluded between England and France. Castile and Aragon are reconciled by the treaty of Almazan. The Visconti and their enemies agree to a truce. Bernabo's hunting excursions are as oppressive as his wars; he keeps 5000 hounds at the expense of his peasantry, and punishes with death all infractions of his game-laws. Wickliffe is appointed one of seven ambassadors to represent to the pope the grievances of the church in England. Death of Petrarch, at Arqua, near Padua, July 18, æt. 70.
1375	Death of Waldemar, king of Denmark: Margaret claims the throne for her son, Olaf, æt. 5, to which her sister's son, a younger Albert, of Mecklenburg, also pretends. The papal legate makes an inroad on the territory of the Florentines, who engage Sir John Hawkwood in their service, and repel the invasion. Death of James of Aragon, third husband of queen Joanna. The emperor John V., summoned to the Ottoman camp, leaves his son, Andronicus, as regent, who conspires to retain the throne, and unites with Saondgi, eldest son of sultan Amurath; the two rebels are overcome by their fathers, and are both deprived of their eyes. Andronicus, to gain the support of the Genoese, cedes to them the island of Tenedos. New College, Oxford (first called St. Mary of Winchester), founded by William of Wykeham; he is employed by Edward III. to build a new castle at Windsor, for which each county in England is assessed to furnish its quota of workmen. Death of Boccaccio, æt. 62.
1376	Death of the Black Prince, June 8, æt. 46; the parliament, fearing intrigues against the rights of his young son, petition the king to remove from court his mistress, Alice Pierce, and John of Gaunt; Edward complies, and declares Richard Prince of Wales and heir to the crown. The Florentines excite a general revolt in the papal States, and obtain possession of Bologna, for which they are excommunicated, an interdict laid on their city, and all Christians are authorized to seize a Florentine whenever they find him, rob him of his property, and sell him for a slave. Gregory hires a mercenary force of Bretons, which he sends to recover his dominions; he then leaves Avignon, embarks at Marseilles, and arrives in Italy. Joanna, queen of Naples, marries Otho, duke of Brunswick, but withholds from him the regal title. Wenceslas, son of the emperor Charles, is elected king of the Romans. The States of Denmark choose Olaf for their king, under the regency of his mother, Margaret. The blind Andronicus is confined by his father in the tower of Anemas. Death of Frederic III., king of Sicily, July 27; his daughter, Maria, succeeds him, as queen of that island and duchess of Athens. Muhamad cultivates the arts at Granada, constructs the Azake, or public hospital, and embellishes the city with other buildings. Wickliffe appointed parish-priest of Lutterworth and prebendary of Westbury; charges of heresy against him are sent to Rome. Macarius, patriarch of CP.

	House of Commons choose a speaker; Peter Delamere is selected for the office; they banish Alice Pierce, and confiscate the estates given her by the late king. The truce with France expires, and is not renewed. Gregory makes his entry into Rome, Jan. 17, but soon afterwards fixes his residence at Anagni; his overtures are rejected at Florence. Charles of Navarre persists in his ambitious schemes; his kingdom is invaded by the Castilians, and he loses most of his provinces in France; Cherbourg is held by the English; his sons, Charles and Peter, and his daughter, Joanna, are captured by the French; the first, on his way to join his father's army, and the two last, at Breteuil, in Normandy; they are taken to Paris, and kindly treated by the king, their uncle.
1378	Frutless incursions of Sir Hugh Calverley, governor of Calais, into Picardy, and the duke of Lancaster into Brittany. Death of Gregory XI., followed by the "Great Schism of the West." After having appointed Urban VI., the cardinals annul their act, protesting that they were overawed by the people of Rome, and elect Clement VII.; both popes maintain their respective claims, and excommunicate each other and their opponents; Urban resides at Rome, Clement at Avignon, and all Europe is divided; England adheres to Urban, and France to Clement; Urban creates twenty-six new cardinals. Death of the emperor Charles IV., at Prague, Nov. 29; his son, Wenceslas, succeeds him in Germany, and inherits Bohemia; Sigismund has Brandenburg, and John, Lusatia. Death of Galeazzo Visconti, Aug. 4; his son, John Galeazzo, count of Vertus, succeeds him, and obtains possession of Asti; Bernabo marries his daughter, Valentina, to Peter Lusignan, king of Cyprus. Silvester de'Medici heads a revolt of the people of Florence, which is soon suppressed. The Genoese imprison their doge, Campofregoso, and elect Niccolo di Guarco; their countrymen at Galata assist the escape of Andronicus, who again rebels. The Venetians endeavour to acquire Tenedos; their admiral, Victor Pisani, defeats the Genoese fleet, commanded by Lonis dei Fiesco. Wickliffe, condemned by a papal Bull, escapes imprisonment, through the protection of the duke of Lancaster, and the decease of Gregory.
1379	A capitation, or poll-tax, imposed on the people of England by the parliament, April 25. The two popes come to open war; Urban proclaims a crusade against his rival and queen Joanna; he employs the company of St. George, by whom the Bretons, in the service of Clement, are defeated, and the castle of S. Angelo taken. Peace between Castile and Navarre, followed by the death of Henry, May 30, æt. 47; he is succeeded by his son John. The emperor John V. is made prisoner by his son, Andronicus, who usurps the throne; the Venetians propose to liberate the captive, and obtain from him an order for the delivery of Tenedos into their hands; their fleet is totally defeated near Pola, May 6, by the Genoese, whose admiral, Lucian Doria, falls in the battle; his successor, Peter Doria, advances to attack the city of Venice, and makes himself master of Chiozza and Malamocco; the Venetians sue for peace, which is refused to them; they are roused by this to most vigorous exertions for self-defence. Francesco da Carrara lays siege to Treviso, which is relieved by Bernabo Visconti. Charles of Durazzo, sent by Louis of Hungary against the Venetians, is diverted by Urban VI. to attempt the conquest of Naples. The disciples of Wickliffe form themselves into a society of itinerant preachers, to whom the name of Lollards (borrowed from Antwerp, see 1300) is given. Nilius patriarch of CP.
1380	The duke of Gloucester, the king's youngest uncle, marches with 10,000 men from Calais to Brittany; the duke of Burgundy, at the head of a large army, avoids a battle. Death of Bertrand du Guesclin, July 13. Charles V. dies, Sep. 18, succeeded by his son Charles, æt. 12; the oppressive measures of the young king's uncle cause violent commotions through all France. Urban excommunicates Joanna, and absolves her subjects from their allegiance to her; at his instigation, Charles of Durazzo, or dalla Pace, marches with his Hungarian army to attack Naples, and arrives at Rome. The Genoese fleet and army at Chiozza surrender to the Venetians. Francesco da Carrara again besieges Treviso. Death of the Venetian admiral, Victor Pisani. On the decease of Haco, his widow, Margaret, undertakes the regency of Norway for her son Olaf. Timur invades Persia. Wickliffe commences his English translation of the Scriptures.

1361	The people of England exasperated by the poll-tax; the abbey of Bury St. Edmund's plundered by the mob. Insurrection of Wat Tyler; London in possession of his lawless multitude; while threatening the king in Smithfield, he is killed by the lord mayor, Walworth; Richard's courage and presence of mind put an end to the rebellion. Another hand, under John the Litestere, is overcome and dispersed, near Northwalsingham, by De Spenser, bishop of Norwich (see 1369). The Venetian admiral, Carlo Zeno, restores the maritime ascendancy of the republic; its rulers abandon their designs of territorial aggrandizement, and to save Treviso from Francesco da Carrara, give it up to Leopold, duke of Austria. Peace concluded under the mediation of Amadeus of Savoy. Patents of nobility given to thirty citizens of Venice, who had distinguished themselves in defence of the city. Charles of Durazzo conquers Naples and occupies the throne; Joanna and her husband remain captives; her dominions in Provence are given by pope Clement to the duke of Anjou. League of the free cities in Germany to maintain their privileges. Francis Crispo assassinated Nicholas III., duke of Naxos, and seizes the duchy. Through the intercession of the king of Castile, the family of Charles of Navarre are liberated from their confinement to Paris. The duke of Lancaster holds a court of minstrels at Toulouse. An Act of parliament surreptitiously obtained against heretics. John V. escapes from his prison; under the protection of Amurath, he is restored to his throne, and reigns at C.P. as joint emperor with his son, Andronicus, who resides at Selymbria. The chancellor of Oxford prohibits Wickliffe's preaching against Transubstantiation.
1382	Marriage of king Richard, Jan. 14, to Anne, sister of Wenceslas, king of Germany and Bohemia. Expedition of the duke of York to assist the Portuguese in their war against Castile, and support John of Gaunt's claim to the crown of that kingdom; Portugal obtains an honourable peace, but the claim of the English prince is disregarded. Defeat of the Flemings at Rosebecque, near Ypres, by a French army. Continued tumults in France; insurrection of the Maillottins at Paris. The duke of Anjou attacks Charles, the new king of Naples, who puts Joanna to death, and engages Sir John Hawkwood in his service. Death of Louis, king of Hungary and Poland; he is succeeded by his daughter, Maria, betrothed to Sigismund, margrave of Brandenburg. The doctrines of Wickliffe are condemned as heretical by Courtenay, archbishop of Canterbury; he is compelled to retire from Oxford to Lutterworth; the young queen, and her mother-in-law, Joan, widow of the Black Prince, save him from severe punishment. Urban appoints the bishop of Norwich commander of a crusading force gathered in England against the supporters of Clement. Conrad Zöllner von Rothenstein, Teutonic grand master in Prussia. The English parliament repeals the Act of the preceding session against heretics.
1383	Unsuccessful crusade of the bishop of Norwich in Flanders. Urban visits Naples, where he obtains dignities, lands, and advantageous marriages for his relatives. The plague destroys a great part of the duke of Anjou's army, and deprives him of his most important ally, Amadeus VI. of Savoy. Tumults in Genoa; the doge, Niccolò di Guarco, is deposed, and Leonardo de Montano appointed in his place. Frederic, king of Portugal, marries his only child, Beatrice, to John I. of Castile; on his death, Oct. 20, et. 43, the Portuguese resist the union of the two kingdoms, and elect John, natural son of their former sovereign, Peter I. The emperor Wenceslas attempts to reform the dissolute habits of the priesthood, and is hated by them. Turkistan conquered by Timour.
1384	On the decease of Louis, count of Flanders, his territories descend by inheritance to Philip, duke of Burgundy, and constitute henceforth part of that duchy. The duke of Anjou dies at Bari; the remains of his army disperse. The arrogance of Urban produces discord between him and Charles of Naples. The duke of Austria sells Treviso to Francesco da Carrara. John of Castile invades Portugal and besieges Lisbon. Birth of Henry of Visen, son of John, king of Portugal. The Poles transfer their crown from Maria to her sister, Hedwig. Manuel, second son of John V., crowned joint emperor at C.P. Death of Wickliffe, Dec. 30, at Lutterworth. The Fishmongers' Company in London founded.

1385	Fruitless expedition of Richard II. into Scotland; the Scotch make an incursion into England to as little purpose; their French auxiliaries return home. Sir John Holland, son of the princess of Wales by her first marriage, and half-brother to the king, kills Lord Stafford in a private quarrel; Richard refusing to pardon the murderer, his mother dies of grief at Wallingford. Battle of Aljubarrotte, near Leyria, July 29; 30,000 Castilians defeated by 2500 Portuguese, commanded by their king, and the constable Nunho Alvarez Pereira; the independence of Portugal established; the convent of Batalha built to commemorate this victory. Urban in Nocera; six cardinals, accused of a plot against him, are degraded, imprisoned, and put to the torture; he excommunicates Charles, and lays Naples under an interdict; Charles orders the interdict not to be observed, and besieges Nocera; Urban escapes to Salerno, and thence by sea to Genoa. Charles, invited to Hungary, leaves Naples to his son, Ladislas, under the regency of his mother, Margaret. Fall of Bernabo Visconte; treacherously seized by his nephew, John Galeazzo, he soon afterwards dies in prison, Dec. 18, et. 66 ; all his dominions submit to John Galeazzo, who relieves them from oppressive taxation, restores their privileges, and becomes the greatest potentate in Italy.
1386	Robert de Vere, earl of Oxford, king Richard's favorite, is created marquis of Dublin, duke of Ireland, and governor of that island, for life. Michael de la Pole, earl of Suffolk, and chancellor, is impeached by parliament, and deprived of his office. John of Gaunt charged with disloyalty; the queen intercedes for him, and he is allowed to take an army to Spain; he lands at Corunna, July 25, and in alliance with the king of Portugal, to whom he marries his daughter, Philippa, invades Castile to claim the crown. The duke of Gloucester, Richard's uncle, induces parliament to appoint a commission of fourteen persons to execute the sovereign power in the kingdom for a year. The king of France collects a large armament at Stuyas to invade England; some of his ships are taken by the English, and the rest dispersed by a storm. At the intercession of the king of England, Urban pardons Adam Easton, one of the accused cardinals; the other five are barbarously murdered, without any proof of their guilt, and protesting their innocence to the last; two other cardinals, fearing his violence, escape, and join his rival, Clement. Charles of Durazzo assassinated, in Hungary; queen Maria imprisoned. Urban gives Naples to Louis, son of the late duke of Anjou. At the request of her subjects, Hedwig marries Jagellon, grand-duke of Lithuania, who takes the name of Ladislas II., and unites his territories to Poland; the Lithuanians abandon paganism. Battle of Sempach, July 9; Leopold of Austria totally defeated by the Swiss. Timour conquers Georgia. Nerio Acciaiuoli, governor of Corinth, obtains possession of Athens and Thebes. Urban's conduct provokes the disrespect of the Genoese; he retires to Lucca. Marriage of Joanna of Navarre to John V., duke of Brittany, Sep. 11. The Duomo of Milan built by John Galeazzo Visconte.
1387	Consultation of Richard II. at Nottingham, with Sir Robert Tresilian and the other judges; they declare the late commission to be a criminal act, and the authors of it punishable with death. The duke of Gloucester, and Henry, earl of Derby, John of Gaunt's eldest son, accuse the king's friends and ministers of treason, and compel them to flight; the duke of Ireland retires to the Netherlands. Charles the Bad, king of Navarre, accidentally burnt to death, Jan. 1, at Pamplona, et. 56 ; his son, Charles the Noble, inherits the throne. Peter IV., king of Aragon, dies, Jan. 5, at Barcelona, et. 76 , is succeeded by his son, John I. Civil war in Naples; Margaret maintains courageously the rights of her son Ladislas; Otho of Brunswick, at first employed against her, enters into her service. John Galeazzo Visconte, assisted by Sir John Hawkwood, takes Verona and Vicenza; marriage of his only daughter, Valentina, to Charles de Valois, brother of the king of France. Death of Olaf, the young king of Denmark and Norway, et. 17 ; his mother, Margaret, is acknowledged queen of both countries. Sigismund, with a Bohemian army, liberates Maria, and takes upon himself the government of Hungary. The conquests of Amurath extend from Cilicia in the East, to Albania in the West. Antonius IV. patriarch of CP.

1388	Violent proceedings of the duke of Gloucester's party; the judges, Sir Robert Tresilian, and Sir Nicholas Brembre, with Lord Beauchamp of Holt, Sir James Berners, Sir Simon Burley, and others, unjustly executed for treason. Battle of Otterburne (Chevy Chase), Aug. 15; a private feud, not a national quarrel; the earl of Douglas slain by Percy (Hotspur), who is afterwards made prisoner; the result of the day uncertain. Urban claims the kingdom of Naples; while proceeding at the head of an army to put down the two contending parties, he is thrown from his mule, and lamed; his troops mutiny and disperse, and he is conveyed to Rome. Overthrow of the house of Carrara by a powerful league; John Galeazzo Visconte takes Padua, and the Venetians recover Treviso. The Swedes offer their crown to Margaret.
1389	Richard II. asserts his right to govern for himself; he gives the office of chancellor to William of Wykeham. John of Gaunt resigns his pretensions to Castile, and returns to England. On the death of Urban, the schism is continued by the election of Boniface IX. Marriage of Ladislas, the king of Naples, to Constance, daughter of Manfred, count of Chiaramonte; his rival, Louis of Anjou, is crowned at Avignon by Clement. The duke of Bourbon and a Genoese fleet unsuccessfully attack Tunis. Albert, king of Sweden, defeated and made prisoner at Falköping, by Margaret, who reigns over the three northern kingdoms. The Servians defeated at Kossova by Amurath, who is killed after the battle by one of the conquered nobles; his son, Bajazet I. (Jlderim), succeeds him. Victory of the Swiss at Nâfels; the Austrians treat for peace.
1390	Cession of the duchy of Guienne by Richard II. to John of Gaunt, for life. The two popes mutually excommunicate each other. Boniface makes great efforts to support Ladislas in defending Naples against Louis of Anjou. John Galeazzo Visconte attacks Bologna; the Florentines send Sir John Hawkwood to oppose him, and assist Francesco Novello da Carrara to recover Padua. Venice and Ferrara join the league against Visconte. Another jubilee replenishes the papal treasury. Jacopo da Camposregoso doge of Genoa. Conrad von Wallenrode Teutonic grand-master in Prussia. Bajazet compels John V. to destroy new fortifications which he is constructing, and summons Mamel to attend him with a Greek contingent at the siege of Philadelphia, which surrenders to him. Manuel III., eighteenth emperor of Trebizond, succeeds his father, Alexius.
1392	The Liberties of London, seized by Richard, are restored through the queen's intercession and the submission of the citizens. Robert de Vere, Richard's former favourite, accidentally slain during a bear-hunt in Brabant. The parliament confirms the "Statute of Provisors," and by other Acts restrains the papal power. The king of France attacked by fits of melancholy madness; his uncles resume the government; cards are invented, or introduced, for his amusement in his idle intervals. Through the mediation of Boniface, and Caracciolo, grand master of Rhodes, a treaty of peace terminates the hostilities in Northern Italy, but the coalited States maintain their union to guard against the encroachments of Visconte. By the death of queen Maria, Sigismund becomes sole sovereign of Hungary. Ladislas appoints Witold grand-duke of Lithuania. Timour attacks the Golden Horde in Kazak. University of Erfurt founded. Antonio di Montaldo doge of Genoa.
1393	A rebellion in Ireland. Visconte makes a vain effort to drain the Lake of Mantua, by diverting the waters of the Mincio. Violent commotions in Genoa; four rivals attempt to expel Montaldo from the dogeship; he retains the office. Origin of the Mercers' Company in London.

1394	Death of Anne of Bohemia, the "Good Queen Anne," at the palace of Shene, in Richmond, June 7, et. 27 . Sigismund favours a revolt of the Bohemian nobles, who keep his brother, Wenceslas, for a time in captivity, but soon set him free again. Death of Clement VII.; his cardinals elect Benedict XIII., and the schism continues. Renewed discord at Genoa; doges rise and fall almost monthly. Sir John Hawkwood dies in the service of Florence, and is interred there with funeral honours. Death of Constance of Castile, wife of John of Gaunt; also of the countess of Derby, his son's wife. Nerio Acciaiuoli obtains the title of duke of Athens, and dying soon afterwards, leaves his territories to his natural son, Antonio. Conrad von Jungingen grand master of the Teutonic knights in Prussia. Nicholas de Clemangis, rector of the University of Paris, publishes his work De Ruina Ecclesie , exposing the corruptions of the church.
1395	Richard, endeavouring in person to suppress the Irish insurrection, is recalled to England by the agitation arising from the spread of Wickliffe's doctrines; the favourers of them appeal to parliament. Vain attempt of the university of Paris to heal the schism of the church. John Galeazzo Visconti obtains from Wenceslas the titles of duke of Milan and count of Pavia. Ladislas falls in his efforts to dislodge Louis of Anjou from the city of Naples. Death of John, king of Aragon; his brother, Martin, succeeds him.
1396	Marriage of Richard II., at Calais, Nov. 1, to the French king's daughter, Isabella of Valois, only nine years old. A truce for 25 years concluded between England and France. John of Gaunt marries Katharine Swinford, daughter of Paon de Ronet, a knight of Hainault; their son, John Beaufort, and other children, born before their marriage, are legitimized by the king and the pope. Battle of Nicopolis, Sep. 28; Sigismund, king of Hungary, with a confederate army of French princes and nobles, other European chivalry, and knights of Rhodes, defeated by Bajazet. The Greek emperor sends Emanuel Chrysoloras to implore assistance from the Christians of the West; after having completed his mission, the ambassador is engaged by the government of Florence to teach Greek. The Genoese place themselves under the protection of France. Margaret obtains the recognition of her sister's grandson, Erik the Pomeranian, as her successor in Denmark. The dissection of dead bodies in the surgical schools in France authorized by a royal edict. A council at London condemns the doctrines of Wickliffe. Callistus II. patriarch of CP. The convent of La Certosa, near Pavia, built by the duke of Milan.
1398	Quarrel of the dukes of Hereford and Norfolk; they are both banished by Richard. Mortimer, earl of March, presumptive heir to the throne, and governor of Ireland, is slain by a rebel force in that island. Wenceslas and the French government, in concurrence with the council of Paris, ineffectually endeavour to terminate the schism of the church; France withdraws from obeying Benedict. Peace concluded, May 11, between the confederates and the duke of Milan; he falls in an attempt to surprize Pisa. Ladislas gains the support of Marzano, the admiral of Naples, and many other influential nobles. Marshal Boucicault arrives at CP. with a fleet and troops to assist the emperor Manuel. Bloody strife in Genoa; the French governor, the bishop of Meaux, withdraws to Savona. The Teutonic knights complete their conquest of the Isle of Gothland; Margaret attempts, without success, to recover it from them, but by the treaty of Copenhagen obtains the right of redeeming it for an equivalent. John Huss, professor of theology at Prague. Froissart writes his Chronicles . Matthew I. patriarch of CP.

1399	Death of John of Gaunt; his lands are withheld by Richard from his son, the banished duke of Hereford. Richard embarks for Ireland, leaving the duke of York regent. The new duke of Lancaster claims his inheritance and lands, July 4, at Ravenspar, in Yorkshire, with a few attendants, who, by the accession of his friends, are soon increased to a numerous army. Richard returns from Ireland, is deserted by his army, surrenders himself to Henry, Aug. 20, is deposed by the parliament, Sep. 29, and sent a prisoner to Pontefract castle; Henry IV. takes the throne. Benedict, besieged in Avignon by a French army, surrenders, and promises to abdicate on condition of Boniface doing the same. The San Severini come over to Ladislas, and assist him to recover the city of Naples; Louis of Anjou, deserted by all, returns to Provence. Gherardo d'Appiano sells Pisa to the duke of Milan. Marshal Boucicault returns to France, Dec. 10; the emperor Manuel accompanies him to seek assistance in Western Europe, leaving his nephew, John of Selymhria, regent at CP. By the death of his queen, Hedwig, Ladislas II. becomes sole sovereign of Poland. Timour takes Delhi, and returns from the conquest of Hindostan to Samarcand. The Bianchi, or White Penitents, produce a great impression in Northern Italy; the hymn, "Stabat mater dolorosa," is first composed and sung by them in their processions. Death of John V., duke of Brittany; his widow, Joanna, governs the duchy for her young son, John VI.
1400	A plot against Henry IV. defeated; the earls of Kent, Salisbury, and Huntingdon, lords Lumley and Spenser, and other conspirators, suffer death; the young queen, Isabella, who had taken part in it, is made prisoner, and confined at Haverfing-atts-Bower; soon after this event, Richard is murdered, æt. 34. Marriage of Henry's eldest daughter, Blanche, to Louis of Bavaria. Wenceslas, deprived of his German crown, retains that of Bohemia; Frederic, duke of Brunswick, chosen as his successor, is killed in a fray; the electors then appoint Rupert of Bavaria, count Palatine. The emperor Manuel, received with great honours at Venice, visits France and England. The jubilee at Rome is disturbed by an insurrection of the Colonna family; the plague carries off many of the pilgrims; Boniface forbids the Bianchi to enter Rome, and suppresses their processions. Bajazet's designs against CP. are interrupted by the approach of Timour, who invades Syria and sacks Aleppo. Death of Chancer.
1401	Revolt of Owen Glendower in Wales. The Scots invade England, retire on the advance of Henry, and are pursued by him to Edinburgh. Isabella, Richard's virgin-widow, refuses a proposal of marriage with Henry, prince of Wales, and is allowed to return to France. An Act of parliament is passed for the punishment of heretics; its first victim is William Sawtre, parish priest of St. Osyth, London, who, for denying Transubstantiation, and professing the principles of Wickliffe, is burnt alive in Smithfield, Feb. 19. Rupert enters Italy to repress the ambition of the duke of Milan, and is defeated by him, Oct. 21; Leopold, duke of Austria, is taken prisoner. Marshal Boucicault appointed governor of Genoa, restores order there. Timour takes Damascus and Bagdad. Hussa confessor to the queen of Bohemia. Birth of Francesco Sforza, July 23, at S. Miniato. Death of Froissart; his Chronicle is continued by Monstrelet, from 1400.
1402	Marriage of Henry IV., at Eltham, April 3, by proxy, to Joanna of Navarre, widow of the duke of Brittany. Defeat of the Scots by the Percies at Homedon Hill; Archibald, earl of Douglas, Morduc, earl of Fife, the earls of Angus, Murray, and Orkney, with many other nobles and gentry, captured. Henry offends the earl of Northumberland, by forbidding him to ransom his prisoners. Wenceslas, unpopular with his subjects, is for a time held in captivity by his brother, Sigismund, and restored to freedom; Ladislas of Poland refuses the crown of Bohemia, which is offered to him. Sigismund sells the province of Neumark, on the right bank of the Oder, to the Teutonic knights. Rupert returns to Germany. The duke of Milan obtains possession of Bologna, and at the summit of power is carried off by the plague, Sep. 3, at Marignano, æt. 55; his sons divide his dominions; the eldest, Gion Maria, succeeds to Milan and the title. Death of Maria, queen of Sicily; her husband, Martin, remains

1403	sole sovereign of the island. Timour invades Asia Minor. Battle of Angora, or Ancyra, July 28; Bajazet totally defeated and made prisoner, dies in captivity; civil wars follow among his sons. The "Confrérie de la Passion" licensed by royal letters patent to exhibit sacred dramas, or Mysteries, in France. Death of Sir John Gower, the English poet. A large comet is seen. Queen Joanna arrives in England; her marriage is again solemnized at Winchester, and she is crowned at Westminster, Feb. 26. The earl of Northumberland releases his prisoner, Douglas; conspiracy between them and Owen Glendower, to place Mortimer, earl of March, on the throne. Battle of Shrewsbury, July 21; defeat of the confederates, Harry Percy (Hotspur) slain; Henry of Monmouth, prince of Wales, performs his noviciate in arms; the earl of Northumberland pardoned. The power of the Visconti declines; Bologna and Perugia are recovered by pope Boniface; Sienna and other cities revolt; the Guelf and Ghibelin factions revive; Florence and Venice prepare to take advantage of these disorders. Ladislas of Naples, invited by some nobles to Hungary, finds Sigismund too firm on his throne, and abandons the enterprise. Return of the emperor Manuel to C.P. from an unsuccessful journey; Marshal Boucicault, having escorted him with a Genoese fleet, provokes the Venetians, and is defeated by their admiral, Carlo Zeno, near Modon. An Act of parliament restricts the dealings of merchant strangers, who visit England. A Bohemian knight, Hieronymus Faulfisch (Jerome of Prague), returns from Oxford to his own country, and, in conjunction with John Huss, preaches Wickliffe's doctrines. Laonicus Chalcocondylas records the observations made in the West, by the emperor Manuel and his followers.
1404	Henry IV. and the lords oppose a petition of the House of Commons, that the revenues of the church should be applied to the service of the State. On the death of Boniface, the Roman cardinals elect Innocent VII.; Benedict persists in not abdicating, and the schism goes on. The Visconti continue to lose their possessions. The Venetians obtain Vicenza, and Verona surrenders to Francesco da Carrara. The elector of Mentz and other German princes join in the league of Rarbach, to oppose Rupert. Death of Philip, duke of Burgundy; his son, John the Fearless, is involved in a struggle with the duke of Orleans, for the regency of France. Margaret claims Holstein and Schleswig on the demise of Gerard VI. The Teutonic knights obtain Samogitia from the king of Poland, and reach the summit of their prosperity. Timour returns to Samarcand, and celebrates his triumph.
1405	Insurrection of the earl of Northumberland, and Scrope, archbishop of York; the earl escapes into Scotland; the archbishop is taken, condemned by a civil judge, Sir William Fitzthorpe, and beheaded. Owen Glendower defeated by the prince of Wales, at Monmouth, May 11; still maintains himself in his mountain retreats. Venice conquers Padua and Verona; Francesco da Carrara and his sons are murdered, and the family becomes extinct. Timour, on his march to China, dies at Otrant, April 1, æt. 68; his vast conquests fall in pieces. Walsingham writes his English History. The duke of Albany, brother of the king of Scotland, usurps absolute power, and puts to death his eldest nephew, David. The estates of the earl of Northumberland confiscated; the Isle of Man granted to Sir John Stanley. An Act of parliament prohibits any one, not possessing twenty shillings a year in land, from apprenticing his sons to any trade.
1406	Philippa, daughter of Henry IV., goes to Denmark, contracted in marriage to Erik, Margaret's destined successor. Robert, king of Scotland, sends his youngest son for security to France, who is captured on his way by the English. On the death of Robert, April 4, the young prince, æt. 9, succeeds to the throne as James I., but is detained and educated in London; the duke of Albany, meanwhile, is regent. Death of Innocent VII., and election of Gregory XII. Gerson, chancellor of the university of Paris, proposes a general council, to terminate the schism of the church. Pisa conquered by the Florentines, Oct. 9. Death of Henry III., king of Castile, Dec. 25. æt. 27; his brother, Ferdinand, is appointed regent to the infant king, John II.

1407	The earl of Northumberland and lord Bardolf, endeavouring to raise another rebellion, are defeated and slain at Bramham, by Sir Thomas Rokesby. Death of Owen Glendower; Wales becomes tranquil, and Henry's reign from this time undisturbed. The government of France distracted by the animosities of the leading families; the duke of Orleans assassinated at the instigation of the duke of Burgundy. The rival popes agree to a conference at Savona, which Gregory at last evades. Bajazet's sons, Suleiman, Isa, and Mousa, gradually restore portions of his subverted empire, but remain at enmity with each other. Ulrich von Jungingen grand master of the Teutonic Order in Prussia.
1408	Valentina, widow of the duke of Orleans, demands justice on her husband's assassins; the duke of Burgundy, proclaimed an enemy of the State, occupies Paris with his army, and drives out the royal court. The two popes interchange hollow professions of a desire for peace, but neither abdicates; France renounces obedience to either of them; Benedict takes flight to Perpignan; Gregory fixes himself at Lucca. Ladislas of Naples takes possession of Rome. The cardinals of both parties retire to Pisa, and call a general council for the following year. The Venetians obtain Patras in the Morea. Death of Martin, king of Sicily; his father inherits the island, and unites it to the kingdom of Aragon. Sforza da Cortignuolo, father of Francesco, distinguishes himself in the service of Niccolò d'Este, marquis of Ferrara, and defeats Ottobuono, lord of Parma and Reggio, but sustains afterwards a check.
1409	Council of Pisa; the two popes refuse to appear; they are deposed, and Alexander V. elected, who is obeyed as the true pope by the greater part of Europe; Gregory is still revered in Bavaria, Friuli, and Naples, and holds his council at Cividale. Benedict is upheld by Aragon, and calls his council at Perpignan. The three popes mutually excommunicate, revile, and condemn each other, and all their opponents. The adherents of Alexander dispossess Ladislas of the city of Rome. Unsuccessful attempt of Boucicault to surprise Milan; during his absence the Genoese overpower and expel their French garrison, and place themselves under the protection of the marquis of Montferrat; the marshal returns to France. Sforza overcomes Ottobuono, who is treacherously slain. Parma and Reggio submit to Niccolò d'Este; Sforza rewarded for his services by the lordship of Montecchio. Louis of Anjou, under the auspices of pope Alexander, revives his pretensions to the throne of Naples. A grand tournament in London between the marshal of Hainault and the earl of Somerset; the mystery of "the Creation of the World" is exhibited by the parish clerks. Huss and Jerome make many converts at Prague; the orthodox professors and students secede, and found the university of Leipzig.
1410	The Commons again urge Henry IV. to use the temporalities of the church for the benefit of the people, and petition for a mitigation of the Acts against heretics; the king rejects their prayer, and orders the execution of Bradby, a condemned Lollard, in consequence of which, they refuse to vote supplies. The young duke of Orleans marries the daughter of the count d'Armagnac, whence his faction takes the name of Armagnacs, and fiercely contends with the Burgundians; both parties court the alliance of the king of England. Death of pope Alexander; John XXIII. elected in his place; new excommunications are fulminated by the papal trio. Louis of Anjou is recognized at Rome; his fleet, conveying an army from Provence, on its way to Naples, is totally defeated and driven back by the Genoese allies of Ladislas. On the decease of Rupert, Sigismund, brother of Wenceslas, and king of Hungary, is raised to the throne of Germany; some of the electors choose Jodocus, or Josse, margrave of Moravia, whose death soon after puts an end to the dispute. War between Castile and Granada; Antequera surrenders to the regent Ferdinand. Death of Martin, king of Aragon, the last of his ancient line; five candidates claim the vacant throne. The Teutonic knights defeated at Tannenberg by the Poles and Lithuanians, July 15, with great loss; their grand master falls in the battle; his successor, Henry von Plauen, concludes a treaty at Thorn, by which he relinquishes Samogitia. Bajazet's son, Suleiman, is surprised by his brother, Mousa, and slain. Euthymius II. patriarch of CP. The Cordwainers' Company (workers in Spanish leather from Cordova) founded in London.

1411	Henry IV. supports the duke of Burgundy by an auxiliary force under the earl of Arundel. Pope John excommunicates Ladislas, who is defeated by Louis, at Roccasecca, May 19; through want of money and provisions, the conqueror is compelled to retreat, and goes back to Provence. The Aragonese appoint nine judges or commissioners, to examine and decide on the claims of the candidates for their crown. Appenzel invites the protection of the Swiss cantons against the abbot of St. Gall. War between Hungary and Venice. John Huss excommunicated, and forbidden to preach. University of St. Andrew's founded. The Guildhall, London, built.
1412	Henry IV. transfers his alliance from the Burgundians to the Orleanists. The prince of Wales insults the chief justice, Sir William Gascoigne, and is committed by him. Sforza leaves the papal service, and enters into the Neapolitan; a treaty of peace ensues between Ladislas and John XXIII., who mutually recognize each other. Gregory is desired by the king of Naples to leave Gaeta, and removes to Rimini. The cruelties of Gian Maria Visconte, duke of Milan, provoke a conspiracy, and he is assassinated; his brother, Philip Maria, re-unites all that remains of their father's extensive dominions. The Hungarians penetrate to Treviso, but are defeated by the Venetians, who recover part of Friuli. Antonio Doria, with a Genoese fleet, infests the coast of Catalonia. The Aragonese commissioners decide in favour of Ferdinand, who, on ascending the throne awarded to him, resigns the regency of Castile. Margaret, et. 60, dies at Flensburg, while negotiating a treaty with the princes of Holstein and Schleswig; Erik succeeds, in virtue of the Union of Calmar. Sigismund urges a reform of the church, and is supported by Gerson in calling for a general council to carry it into effect. John Huss publicly burns, at Prague, a papal indulgence; he and Jerome protest against the doctrine and sale of them.
1413	Death of Henry IV., at Westminster, et. 47. Henry V. discards his former associates, and reforms his conduct. Sir John Oldecastle, Lord Cobham, head of the Wickliffites, condemned to death by the bishops, escapes into Wales. Civil war of the two factions in France; atrocious murders in Paris; the whole kingdom desolated. Ladislas takes forcible possession of Rome, the castle of S. Angelo, Ostia, Viterbo, and most of the papal States. The pope retires to Florence and Bologna, holds a conference with Sigismund at Lodi, and agrees to call a general council at Constance. George Adorno doge of Genoa. The duke of Milan leagues with Genoa and other States against Sigismund, and prevents his receiving the Iron crown of Italy. A council held at Rome, before the pope's departure, condemns again the writings of Wickliffe, excommunicates John Huss, and lays an interdict on every place that harbours him. Michael Knechtelster von Sternberg, Teutonic grand-master, persecutes the Hussites in Prussia. Mahomet, son of Bajazet, overcomes his brothers, re-unites Anatolia and Romania, and restores the Ottoman empire. Leonardo Bruno Aretino, the future historian of Florence, is epistolary secretary to John XXIII.
1414	Sir John Oldecastle engages in a conspiracy, which is detected; he again escapes, but many of his confederates suffer death. Henry asserts his claim to the crown of France, and makes exorbitant demands, to which he receives an insulting reply. The parliament again recommends that the church lands should be seized, to supply the wants of the king's treasury; 110 alien priories are surrendered to him. The royal party in France, and the duke of Burgundy, suspend their hostilities for a time by the treaty of Arras. Ladislas threatens to besiege the pope in Bologna, but is dissuaded by the Florentines; he dies, Aug. 8, et. 39, and is succeeded by his sister, Joanna, widow of William, son of duke Leopold of Austria. The Neapolitan army retires from Rome, but retains the castle of S. Angelo. Sigismund returns from Italy to Germany, is crowned at Aix-la-Chapelle, and attends the council of Constance, Seventeenth General Council, which is opened by the pope, Nov. 5; his two rivals refuse to appear in person, but send their representatives. Peter d'Ailly urges the reforms recommended by the university of Paris. Erik renews the war against Holstein and Schleswig.

1415	The earl of Cambridge, lord Scrope, and others, beheaded, for designing to rebel in favour of Mortimer, earl of March, the rightful heir to the throne. Henry embarks at Southampton, Aug. 13, invests Harfleur, Aug. 17, which surrenders, Sep. 26; Battle of Agincourt, Oct. 15; Queen Joanna goes in procession from St. Paul's to Westminster, to return thanks for the victory. A truce granted to France. Henry returns to England, and makes his triumphal entry into London, Nov. 23. The king of Portugal engages in a maritime enterprise, and takes Ceuta; he discontinues the use of the Julian period in his dominions, and introduces the computation of time from the Christian era. John resigns the popedom, revokes his resignation, is deposed by the council of Constance, and imprisoned for the rest of his life; at last he formally submits. Gregory abdicates voluntarily, is allowed to retain the dignity of cardinal, and made governor of the March of Ancona. Benedict refuses to lay down his office, and resists the entreaties, as well as the threats, of Sigismund and Ferdinand, king of Aragon, who repair to Perpignan, and hold a conference with him. John Huss and Jerome of Prague are invited to Constance, furnished with a safe-conduct by Sigismund; the council perfidiously asserts that no civil power can protect heretics, and by their decree, Huss perishes in the flames, July 6. Joanna, queen of Naples, marries James of Bourbon, who deprives her of all authority, puts to death her chamberlain and favourite, Pandolfo Alopo, and imprisons Sforza. The restless Genoese appoint two new doges in succession, the last of whom is Tommaso da Campofregoso. The emperor Manuel visits the Morea, and attempts to fortify the Isthmus of Corinth.
1416	An attempt of the French to recover Harfleur is repelled by the duke of Bedford. Visit of Sigismund to London and Paris; he concludes a treaty of alliance with Henry, hoping to acquire the former kingdom of Arles. The late disasters of France render the animosities of the two factions more virulent. Ferdinand of Aragon, infirm in health before his journey to Perpignan, dies on his return, April 2, and is succeeded by his son, Alfonso, whose patronage of letters has obtained for him the surname of the Wise . Jerome of Prague, victim of the same treachery, shares the fate of his brother-reformer, Huss, May 30; their disciples in Bohemia take up arms to defend the liberty of conscience. Joanna of Naples regains her freedom; her husband is compelled to dismiss his French guards, and renounce the regal title; Sforza is liberated, and receives again the office of constable, with new grants of land; Ariano and some other fiefs are given to his son, Francesco. Joseph II. patriarch of CP. George Gemisthus Pletho attempts to revive the Platonic philosophy, and reform Greek society.
1417	Isabella, queen of France, quarrels with the Armagnacs and her son, the dauphin, Charles; she is confined at Tours, and invites the assistance of the duke of Burgundy, who liberates her, and conquers a great part of the kingdom. The council of Constance elects the cardinal Otho Colonna to be pope, who takes the name of Martin V.; Benedict still contumaciously opposes him. The ex-pope, Gregory, dies, Oct. 13. Sforza, with a Neapolitan army, dislodges the condottiere Braccio from Rome; his son, Francesco Sforza, performs his first feat of arms, Oct. 16, and displays the courage of a veteran. Sir John Oldcastle is apprehended, and suffers death in Smithfield. The Hussites elect Ziska for their leader. Alexis IV. nineteenth emperor of Trebizond. Gypsies in Transylvania.
1418	Henry renews the war in France, conquers the greater part of Normandy, and lays siege to Rouen; the queen and duke of Burgundy negotiate with him; they obtain possession of Paris, and of the king's person; dreadful massacre of their opponents; the count d'Armagnac and many of the nobility hatched by the populace in their prison; the dauphin and his adherents transfer their seat of government to Poitiers. Close of the council of Constance, April 22; the new pope returns to Italy, attended by Sigismund and a numerous train. The duke of Milan, Philip Maria Visconte, condemns his wife, Beatrice Tenda, to be beheaded, for alleged infidelity.
1419	Surrender of Rouen, Jan. 19; Henry pursues his victorious career. The dauphin beguiles the duke of Burgundy by a treaty, and when they meet, causes him to be assassinated, Aug. 18. Great irritation throughout France. Philip, duke of

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

- Burgundy, and the queen open new negotiations with Henry. Martin V., invited to Florence, fixes his residence there. The ex-pope, John, escapes, is pardoned, and dies. James of Bourbon returns to France. Sforza appointed gonfalonier of the church, recovers Spoleto from Braccio. The duke of Milan, through his general, Carmagnola, concludes peace with Genoa, and regains Bergamo. Death of Wenceslas; his brother, Sigismund, inherits Bohemia; the Hussites refuse to acknowledge him, and storm the town-hall of Prague; the Venetians are successful in their war against him, and take Belinno, and other towns. Queen Joanna, of England, accused of witchcraft, is arrested by the duke of Bedford, confined at Povensey, and deprived of all her possessions. Sir Richard Whittington, third time lord mayor of London.
- 1420 The treaty of Troyes, May 24, disinherits the dauphin, declares Henry heir to the crown of France, and regent during the life of Charles VI., whose daughter, Katharine de Valois, he marries, June 3; he subdues Sens, and other towns, and takes possession of Paris. Henry of Viseu, prince of Portugal, grandson of John of Gannt (see 1396), promotes the study of navigation at Sagres, near Cape St. Vincent, and sends out squadrons, by one of which the island of Madeira is discovered. The influence of Alvarez de Luna over John of Castile causes troubles in that kingdom. Pope Martin encourages Louis III., of Anjou, to claim the crown of Naples, and assists him with an army. Joanna applies to Alfonso of Aragon for protection, and adopts him as heir. Braccio submits to the pope, and recovers Bologna for him. Carmagnola re-annexes Cremona, Parma, and Brescia, to Milan. The Venetians conquer Friuli and Dalmatia. The pope makes his entry into Rome, Sep. 30. Sigismund besieges the Hussites in Prague, and is defeated by them at Wissehrad, July 14.
- 1421 Battle of Baugé; a division of the English army defeated by a Scotch auxiliary brigade, under the earl of Buchan; the duke of Clarence slain; Henry repairs the disaster, besieges Meaux, and drives the dauphin beyond the Loire. Joanna and Alfonso engage Braccio, who stops the progress of Louis. The Florentines obtain Leghorn. Genoa surrenders to Carmagnola. Death of sultan Mahomet, and accession of Amurath I. John de' Medici gonfalonier of Florence. Flight of Jacqueline of Brabant into England. Namur united to Burgundy.
- 1422 Surrender of Meaux, May 2. Death of Henry V., at Vincennes, Aug. 31, æt. 35; his son, nine months old, is proclaimed king of England and France, Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, protector of the former kingdom, and John, duke of Bedford, regent of the latter. Death of Charles VI., Oct. 22, æt. 53; the dauphin crowned at Poitiers, as Charles VII. Before his death, Henry does justice to the queen-dowager, Joanna, and orders the restitution of her lands. Alfonso puts an end to Martin's hostilities, by threatening to recognize again Benedict XIII. Peace restored to Naples; Sforza and Braccio unite in its defence; Louis at Rome. Carmagnola governor of Genoa. The Hussites offer Bohemia to Ladislas, king of Poland, and Witold, duke of Lithuania; Korybut, nephew of the former, is sent to them. Marriage of Albert, duke of Austria, to Elizabeth, daughter of Sigismund. Paul Bellizer von Russdorf Teutonic grand-master; the dissensions of the High and Low Germans weaken the Order; they are defeated by the Poles and Lithuanians, and lose Sudauer. Gypsies first appear in Italy.
- 1423 League against France renewed at Amiens, April 17; the duke of Bedford marries Anne, sister of the duke of Burgundy. Defeat of the French and Scotch, at Crevant sur Yonne, by the earls of Salisbury and Suffolk. James, king of Scotland, released after a captivity of seventeen years, marries a daughter of the earl of Somerset. Joanna, and her favourite, the seneschal Caracciolo, quarrel with Alfonso, whose adoption she annuls, and takes Louis of Anjou in his place; war ensues. Alfonso, during a voyage to Aragon, attacks and plunders Marseilles. The duke of Milan supersedes Carmagnola, and appoints Guido Toello to command the Genoese fleet sent to assist the queen of Naples. Amurath besieges C.P., and for the first time uses cannon, ill-constructed and ill-served; he is compelled to raise the siege. The death of Yusef, king of Granada, and accession of his son, Muhamad el Haysari (the left-handed), followed by tumults and rebellions. The council summoned at Pavia is transferred to Sienna.

1433	Congress of Arras; the English commissioners withdraw; the duke of Burgundy claims many concessions from Charles VII., and continues to treat with him; he acquires Holland and Hainault. Nicholas, marquis d'Este, the pacificator of Italy, mediates a treaty, which the belligerents sign at Ferrara, April 26. Sigismund crowned emperor at Rome, May 31. The duke of Milan secretly authorizes Francesco Sforza to occupy the March and city of Ancona. The Hussites divide into two sects, the Calixtines and Taborites; the former, satisfied by the concessions made to them by the council of Basle, secede from the league. The peasants of Dalecarlia revolt; Engelbrechtson, a nobleman, places himself at their head, and drives Erik's officers out of Sweden. Cosmo de' Medici founds the university of Florence; through the intrigues of his enemies, he is banished. The Portuguese, for the first time, explore the coast of Africa beyond Cape Bojador. Death of John I., king of Portugal, Aug. 12, et. 77 ; he is succeeded by his son, Edward. Belgrade given up to Sigismund by the Servians.
1434	The council of Basle limits and defines the papal authority. Eugenius confirms the March of Ancona to Francesco Sforza for his life, and appoints him gonfalonier of the church. Nicholas Fortebraccio takes Rome; Eugenius escapes in disguise, and retires to Florence. Cosmo de' Medici recalled by the Florentines, and his enemies are banished. The Calixtines join the Imperial army, and defeat the Taborites at Böhmisch-Brod. Death of Louis of Anjou; Joanna is beset by adverse factions. Amadens, duke of Savoy, retires into a hermitage at Ripaglia, near the Lake of Geneva, leaving the regency of his States to his sons. Death of Ladislas, king of Poland, et. 90 ; the States assume the regency during the minority of his son.
1435	The treaty of Arras concluded, Sep. 22. The duke of Burgundy announces to the English council his alliance with the king of France. Death of queen Isabella, Sep. 30, and of the duke of Bedford, Dec. 14; his office of regent is taken by the duke of York. The annats, or first-fruits, hitherto paid to the pope, are abolished by the council of Basle. The condottiere Fortebraccio is defeated and slain at Capo del Monte. Death of queen Joanna; she bequeaths her dominions to Regnier d'Anjou, who, being a prisoner in the hands of the duke of Burgundy, sends his queen, and his son, Louis, to take possession; the pope asserts his claim, and supports it by an army. Alfonso, king of Aragon, another competitor, lays siege to Gaeta; in a naval battle with the Genoese, near the Isle of Ponza, Aug. 5, he is defeated and made prisoner, with his brother, the king of Navarre, and many of his principal nobles; the captives are sent to Milan; the duke releases them without a ransom, and enters into a league with Alfonso against the pope. The Genoese, angry at losing the fruits of their victory, expel their Milanese masters, and restore their own independent government. Alfonso's brother, don Pedro, takes Gaeta. The Calixtines, deceived in the execution of their treaty, reunite with the Taborites; Sigismund concedes the fourteen points demanded by them, on which they submit to him, and allow him to enter Prague. Erik, by a treaty of peace, relinquishes the greater part of Schleswig to the duke of Holstein, and makes concessions at Stockholm, which restore tranquillity in Sweden. War renewed in Granada; the Castilians take Huesca. Charles Cantesson, regent, or statholder, in Sweden. Death of Antonio, duke of Athens; his widow employs Chalcocondylas (father of the historian) to negotiate with Amurath, for his support; Phranza is sent by Constantine to treat with him for the surrender of Athens and Thebes.
1436	Paris retaken by the French. The duke of Burgundy besieges Calais, but retires on the approach of the duke of Gloucester. Eugenius, invited to return to Rome, fixes his residence at Bologna. Genoa joins the league of Florence and Venice; Francesco Sforza is taken into their service. Alfonso arrives at Gaeta, and is acknowledged by many towns in the Abbruzzo and other provinces. Treaty of Iglau between Sigismund and the Hussites. Erik withdraws from the government, but returns at the request of his subjects. The duke of Gloucester separates queen Katharine from Owen Tudor; she is compelled to retire to the abbey of Bermondsey; her husband confined in Newgate; their three sons committed to the care of the earl of Suffolk's sister. Remarkable severity

Unfortunate expedition of the Portuguese against Tangier; prince Ferdinand, taken by the Moors, dies in captivity. Phranza is employed by Constantine to negotiate with Amnraath.
1438	Albert crowned king of Hungary, Jan. 1, recognized by the diet of Francfort, March 20, and soon afterwards crowned at Aix-la-Chapelle. The fathers of the council of Basle continue their sittings, declare Eugenius contumacious, and decree the suspension of his authority. The council of Ferrara opened, Jan. 8, by cardinal Nicholas Albergati; declares that of Basle at an end; the pope arrives there, Jan. 27, and the Greek emperor, John, March 4, followed by the patriarch of CP., and the prelates of his church. The pragmatic sanction of Bonrges declares the pope subordinate to a general council, and annuls his fiscal rights in France. Regnier d'Anjou regains his liberty, and arrives in Naples. All Italy is distracted by the petty wars of its different States. The duke of Milan induces Sforza to return to his service, by promising to give him his daughter in marriage. Cosmo de' Medici goes as ambassador to revive the cooling friendship of Venice for Florence. The plague rages in all parts of Europe; it is aggravated in England and France by a direful famine. Laurence Koster, of Haerlem, originates the first idea of printing, by cutting letters on blocks of wood, and produces his Speculum humane Salvationis. Edward (Duarte), king of Portugal, dies of the plague, at Thomar, Sep. 19, et. 47; his son, Alfonso, et. 6, has his uncle, Henry of Visen, for his guardian and regent. Some Hussites offer the crown of Bohemia to Casimir of Poland; he brings an army to support them; they are defeated by Albert, at Tabor.
1439	Eugenius removes his council from Ferrara to Florence, where an ostensible union of the Latin and Greek churches is signed, July 6. The council of Basle deposes Eugenius, June 25, and renews the schism of the church by electing Amadeus, the hermit-duke of Savoy, who accepts the papal dignity under the name of Felix V.; all the parties to this proceeding are excommunicated. Albert of Austria undertakes an expedition against the Turks, which is interrupted by his sudden death, Oct. 27; his widow, Elizabeth, gives birth to a son, named Ladislas, who is sent into Austria to be brought up. The Venetians, hard pressed in their war, send ambassadors to Florence; the gonfalonier, Cosmo de' Medici, renews the league with them. Francesco Sforza, irritated by the broken promises of the duke of Milan, engages in their service, and restores victory to their arms. The Danes depose Erik, and elect his nephew, Christopher, to be their king. The Russian patriarch, Isidore, on his return from Florence, is deposed by his indignant countrymen. Amurath conquers Servia, but fails in his attempt on Belgrade. Masaccio, the Florentine painter, prepares the way for the modern style of that school. The Drapers' Company, London, founded.

1440	The duke of Orleans, taken prisoner at Agincourt, is released for a ransom. Death of the earl of Warwick, while regent in France. Revolt of the dukes of Bourbon and Alençon, with many other nobles, against Charles VII. Frederic, count of Tyrol, elected king of Germany. The Bohemians choose Albert's infant son, with two regents: Meinhard, a Catholic, and Ptarsko, a Hussite. At the request of her subjects, under the advice of John Huniades, Elizabeth marries Ladislas, king of Poland, and associates him on the throne of Hungary. Alfonso of Aragon takes Aversa and besieges Naples. The Swedes elect Christopher for their sovereign. The Greek emperor is received with great dissatisfaction on his return to CP.; no real union of the churches is effected. The Turks attack Rhodes, and are defeated by the knights. League of Marienwerder against the Teutonic Order; the grand master resigns. Metrophanes II, patriarch of CP.
1441	The Castilian grandees, and Henry, prince of Asturias, compel the king, by force of arms, to dismiss Alvarez de Luna. Death of Blanche, queen of Navarre; her rights descend to her son, Charles, prince of Viana; his father retains the throne, and long discord ensues between them. A general peace concluded in Italy. The generals of the duke of Milan claim portions of his territories; he puts an end to their pretensions, by marrying his daughter, Bianca, to Francesco Sforza. The Venetians, by treachery, obtain Ravenna. Death of Nicholas, marquis d'Este. Henry VI. founds King's College, Cambridge, and Eton College. Conrad von Erlichshausen Teutonic grand master in Prussia. Hadji Keraï separates from the Golden Horde, and establishes the independent khanate of Crim Tartary, or the Crimea, where he has long to contend with the Genoese.
1442	Intrigues and cabals of the cardinal-bishop of Winchester against the duke of Gloucester; the duchess, for imputed witchcraft, is condemned to do penance in St. Paul's church, and to be imprisoned for life; her confessor, Bolingbroke, and Margery Jordan, of Eye, are hanged for alleged participation in her crime. Alfonso takes the city of Naples, and the whole kingdom submits to him. Regnier d'Anjou returns to Provence. Death of Elizabeth; her husband, Ladislas, remains king of Hungary; his general, John Huniades, by his victories, repels the Ottoman invasion of Transylvania. George Castriot (Scanderbeg) distinguishes himself in the Ottoman army. The African Moors redeem some of their countrymen from captivity in Portugal, by paying their ransom in gold-dust and black slaves, from the coast of Guinea; this gives rise to the slave-trade. John Faust improves Koster's invention, sets up a press at Mentz, and begins by printing the Tractatus Petri Hispani . Amurath resigns the sceptre to his son, Mahomet II., and retires to Magnesia. Christ College, Cambridge, founded.
1443	Close of the council of Basle. Eugenius leaves Florence, and fixes his residence again in Rome; he acknowledges Alfonso, king of Naples, and employs him to recover the March of Ancona for him from Francesco Sforza; this produces a new war. Sforza defeats his most able adversary, Niccolò Piccinino, at Monteloro, Nov. 8. Scanderbeg escapes from the Ottomans, seizes Croya, and maintains an independent principality in Albania. John Huniades crosses the Danube, takes Nissa (Naissus) and Sofia, and defeats the Ottoman army, at Kunobitza, in the defiles of the Balkan, Dec. 24; Amurath is recalled from his retirement, and resumes the command.
1444	Cardinal Beaufort prevails over the duke of Gloucester in the English councils; under his influence, the earl of Suffolk concludes a treaty with France, May 28, and negotiates a treaty of marriage between Henry VI. and Margaret, daughter of Regnier d'Anjou; the county of Maine ceded to her uncle. At the request of Frederic, king of Germany, the dauphin, assisted by his best generals, employs a part of the French army against Switzerland. Battle of St. Jacob's on the Birs, near Basle, Aug. 26; for ten hours 1600 Swiss resist 30,000 veterans, and all perish; the conquerors lose 10,000 men, and are deterred from encountering more of such resolute defenders of their country. The duke of Burgundy purchases Luxembourg. George von Podjebrad succeeds Ptarsko as the Hussite co-regent of Bohemia. The victories of Huniades induce Amurath to solicit peace; treaty of Segedin; Servia restored; the Hungarian frontier evacuated, and a truce for ten years concluded; the papal legate, Julian Cesarino, persuades Ladislas to break the truce. Battle of Varna, Nov. 10; triumph of the Ottomans; the king and the legate perish; Huniades escapes. Amnrath retires again to Magnesia. Piccinino sustains another defeat at Montemillone, and his son, Francia, who is made prisoner, at Monte Olmo, Aug. 23; Niccolo repairs to Milan, by desire of the duke, and dies there, Oct. 15. John Guttentberg invents cut metal types, and commences printing the first edition of the Bible. Birth of Leonardo da Vinci. Death of Brunelleschi, the architect, and of Leonardo Bruno Aretino, the secretary and historian of Florence; both patronized by Cosmo de' Medici; the Library of Florence founded by him. The Portuguese discoveries are extended to Cape Verde. First entrance of the Cossacks into Russia.

1445 The marriage of Henry and Margaret, already celebrated by proxy, is duly solemnized on her arrival in England, April 22; the queen joins the duke of Gloucester's enemies. The earl of Suffolk created a duke. Variance between Sforza and his father-in-law, the duke of Milan. To fill their vacant throne, the Hungarians elect Ladislas, the young son of Albert, already king of Bohemia, and appoint John Huniades regent. The Poles offer their crown to Casimir, duke of Lithuania, who for some time refuses, but at last accepts it. Eugenius deposes the archbishops of Cologne and Treves, for their adherence to the council of Basle. The insubordination of the Janizaries compels Amurath to leave his retreat again; he leads them to attack the Morea. Chalcocondylas, now in the service of Constantine, is deputed to propose terms of peace, and imprisoned by Amurath for his arrogant demands. Vassili, grand prince of Moscow, is taken prisoner by the Golden Horde. Gregory III, patriarch of CP. The king of Granada is deposed by his nephew, Muhamad Aben Osmiin; another of his nephews, Muhamad Aben Ismail, is encouraged by the king of Castile to claim the throne. Owen Tudor, having escaped from his persecutors into Wales, is appointed by Henry VI. keeper of the royal parks of the principality.

1446 The electors of Germany, assembled at Francfort, threaten to declare for Felix V., unless Eugenius restores the deposed archbishops, and acknowledges the liberties of their national church. The Hungarians call upon Frederic to give up to them their young king, and on his refusing, invade Austria. Aeneas Syllivius is the tutor of Ladislas in Frederic's court. Sforza, excommunicated by Eugenius, and hard-pressed by the papal and Neapolitan forces, is supported by Florence and Venice. Amnrath breaks through the fortified hexamillon of the isthmus of Corinth; Constantine is allowed to retain his despotat, as a tributary of the Porte; Laonicus Chalcocondylas witnesses these operations, afterwards described by him. Alexius IV. murdered by his son, John IV., who occupies his throne, as twentieth emperor of Trebizond. Cardinal Bessarion promotes the study of Plato's philosophy. Syropolus writes his History of the Council of Florence. George von Peurbach professor of astronomy at Vienna. The embankment of the river Menne gives way, near Dordrecht, April 17; a large tract of country is inundated, many thousand lives lost, and the Lake of Bies-Bosch formed.

1447 The duke of Gloucester murdered at Bury St. Edmund's, Feb. 28; his enemy, cardinal Beaufort, dies six weeks afterwards. The county of Maine is given up; Sir Francis Surienne, the governor of Mans, resists, but is forced to surrender by the count Dunois. By the advice of Aeneas Syllivius, Eugenius assents, by a concordat, to the demands of the German electors, soon after which he dies, Feb. 23, and is succeeded by Nicholas V. Death of Philip Maria, duke of Milan, the last of the Visconti, Aug. 13; his son-in-law, Sforza, claims the inheritance of his States, which is disputed by Alfonso, king of Aragon and Naples, Charles, duke of Orleans, and other princes. The Milanese restore their republican government, and appoint Sforza their captain; he musters a powerful army; Pavia submits to him, and he takes Piacenza by storm. Amurath leads a large force against Scanderbeg, and besieges Croya, but is discomfited, and withdraws. The new pope, Nicholas V., patronizes men of learning, and founds the Library of the Vatican. The first grammar-schools established in London. The Harbours' Company, London, originated.

1448	Surlenne, receiving no pay, subsists his troops at free quarters in Brittany; the duke demands compensation; Charles VII. supports his claim, and prepares to renew his war against England. The English nation, tired of the contest, and the government, influenced by the queen and her favourites, make no provision for the defence of their French provinces. Frederic of Germany, without the concurrence of the diet, agrees to another concordat at Vienna, in which he sacrifices some of the privileges gained by the former. Sforza defeats the Venetians at Caravaggio, Sep. 15; quarrels with the Milanese; enters into a league with Venice, and prepares to conquer Milan. Death of John Palaeologus VI.; accession of his brother, Constantine, the last emperor of CP. Dissolution of the Union of Calmar; on the decease of Christopher, the Swedes and Norwegians take Charles Canutson for their king; Christian, duke of Oldenburg, is chosen by the Danes. Vassili, grand prince of Moscow, after his release by the khan of the Golden Horde, is seized by Dmitri Schemjaka, and deprived of his sight; his boyars regain the throne for him. Queen's College, Cambridge, founded by queen Margaret. Huniades defeated by Amurath at Cossova.
1449	War renewed in France; Charles and his generals conquer Normandy; the duke of Somerset surrenders Rouen, and retreats to Harfleur, Nov. 4. Richard Mortimer, duke of York, suppresses a rebellion in Ireland, and renders himself popular by the mildness of his government. Amadeus, duke of Savoy, resigns his papal title, and goes back to his hermitage, at Ripaglia. The Venetians league with the Milanese against Sforza; he persists in his enterprize, and blockades Milan. Death of Ulug Beg, grandson of Timour, celebrated for his study of astronomy and chronology. Louis von Erlichshausen, Teutonic grand-master in Prussia. George von Podjebrad expels his colleague, Meinhard, and governs Bohemia by himself alone.
1450	A small reinforcement sent by the English government into France, is dispersed by the count de Clermont, at Formigny. The conquest of Normandy is completed, and the count Dunois invades Guienne. General discontent prevails in England. The queen's arrogance and partiality for France render her unpopular; her minister and favourite, the duke of Suffolk, is accused of treason, banished, and murdered at sea; his successor, the duke of Somerset, is equally disliked. Insurrection of Jack Cade suppressed, by the defeat of the rebels near Rochester, and the death of their leader, killed by Iden, a gentleman of Sussex. Public attention begins to be fixed on the duke of York's personal merits, and his prior right to the throne, derived from his mother, the daughter of Philippa, the only child of the duke of Clarence, second son of Edward III., while that of the Lancaster family descends from John of Gaunt, Edward's third son. Milan surrenders to Sforza, and he is proclaimed duke. Pope Nicholas mediates peace between Alfonso and the republics of Florence and Venice. Another jubilee at Rome; 200 persons smothered or drowned by the pressure of the crowd on the bridge of S. Angelo; the large sum collected on this occasion is employed by Nicholas in works of charity and public improvements. The Portuguese colonize the Azores. Death of Agnes Sorel. The crown of Norway transferred from Charles, king of Sweden, to Christian, king of Denmark.
1451	The weakness of Henry, the influence of the queen, and the treachery of the ministers, allow Guienne to be conquered by Dunois, without a struggle. The duke of York returns from Ireland; the parliament petitions for the removal of the duke of Somerset and his colleagues. Death of Amadeus, duke of Savoy, late Felix V., Jan. 7. The pacific spirit of Nicholas V. gives Italy the first year of tranquillity known there for many ages; among his new edifices are the palace of S. Maria Maggiore, and the church of S. Theodore. Venice, however, is preparing a league against the duke of Milan, who forms alliances with Florence, Genoa, and Mantua. The flourishing commerce of the Venetians makes them rich and powerful. Death of Amurath; his son and successor, Mahomet II., prepares to attack CP. Embassy of Phranza to Trebizond and Georgia, to negotiate a marriage for Constantine.

1452	The duke of York raises an army; after an interview with the king in Kent, he retires to his castle, at Wigmores, on the borders of Wales. A deputation of Gascon lords invites the support of the English government to restore their province to its former allegiance. Frederic, king of Germany, is married at Rome, to Eleanor, sister of the king of Portugal; he receives from Nicholas the imperial crown, and the iron crown of Italy, visits Alfonso at Naples, and creates the marquis Borso d'Este duke of Modena and Reggio. War begins between the Venetians and the duke of Milan, and their allies. Mahomet erects a fort at Asomaton, on the Bosphorus, within five miles of CP. Isidore, the former patriarch of Russia, now a cardinal, arrives at CP., and celebrates, in St. Sophia, a new Union of the Greek and Latin churches. Great preparations are made on both sides for the siege and defence of CP. League of amity between the Swiss confederacy and France. Peter Schäfer, Faust's son-in-law, introduces the use of cast metal types. Struggle between James II. of Scotland and the nobles; he slays the earl of Douglas with his own hand, in Stirling Castle. John of Navarre disinherits his son, the prince of Viana.
1453	Talbot, earl of Shrewsbury, is sent to Guienne with 8000 men; Bordeaux and other towns open their gates to him; he is defeated and slain, et. 60 , at Castillon, July 20. The English have now lost all their possessions in France, except Calais. The birth of Edward, prince of Wales, Oct. 13, prevents that amicable adjustment of the duke of York's claims, for which he had been willing to wait. Mahomet forms the siege of CP., April 6; takes the city by assault, May 29; death of the emperor Constantine; final extinction of the Roman empire. Mahomet grants toleration to the Christians, and appoints Gennadius II. patriarch of the Greek church. Conspiracy of Porcario at Rome; forbearance of Nicholas; obstinacy of the conspirators; they are condemned and executed. Kindness of Nicholas to the fugitives from CP.; they assist the progress of literature in Italy. Sforza invites Regnier d'Anjou to oppose Alfonso of Naples: war of plunder and devastation in Tuscany and Lombardy. The emperor Frederic gives up the custody of young Ladislas, who is crowned at Buda and Prague. Alvarez de Luna, after having been 33 years all-powerful in Castile, is abandoned by the king to his enemies, accused of various crimes, condemned, and beheaded at Burgos, July 5. Austria created an archduchy by the emperor.
1454	Mental aberration of Henry VI.; committal of the duke of Somerset to the Tower; the duke of York appointed protector. Hostilities cease between England and France, without any formal treaty of peace. Regnier d'Anjou returns to France. Treaty of peace between Milan and Venice concluded at Lodi, April 9; Alfonso refuses his adhesion. The Prussian cities of the Marienwerder league (see 1440) renounce their allegiance to the Teutonic knights, and place themselves under the protection of the king of Poland. The knights of Rhodes refuse to pay the tribute demanded by Mahomet. The University of Glasgow founded. Death of John II., king of Castile, at Valladolid, July 20, et. 49 ; his son, Henry, succeeds him. Muhammad Aben Ismail takes the throne of Granada from his cousin; provokes war with Castile; is defeated, and loses Fort Ximena.
1455	Recovery of king Henry; release of Somerset; the protectorate annulled; beginning of the civil war; the Yorkists take the White Rose for their party emblem, and the Lancastrians the Red; victory of the former at St. Alban's, May 22; the duke of Somerset, earls of Northumberland and Stafford, and lord Clifford, slain; the king made prisoner; the duke of York re-appointed protector by the parliament. Nicholas prevails on Alfonso to assent to the peace of Lodi, Jan. 26, and to join him, with Milan, Florence, Venice, and the other Italian States, in a league for resisting the Ottoman power; soon after which, this, the best of the popes, dies, March 24; Alfonso Borgia, elected in his place, takes the name of Callistus III. Edmund, earl of Richmond, eldest son of Owen Tudor and queen Katharine, marries Margaret Beaufort, daughter and heiress of John Beaufort, duke of Somerset, grandson of John of Gaunt. The Douglas family, overcome in their contest with the king, take flight into England.

1488	James III. of Scotland defeated by his barons near Bannockburn, and murdered in Beaton's Mill, June 11; his son inherits the crown. Defeat of the Bretons, at St. Auhin, July 28; the duke of Orleans prisoner. Death of Francis II., duke of Brittany; distress of his subjects, and contests for the hand of his daughter, Anne. Malaga submits to Ferdinand; he advances against Guadix and Almeria. Zizim, Bajazet's brother, is at his own desire conveyed to Civita Vecchia. The Homer of Demetrius Chalcocondylas printed at Florence.
1489	Birth, Nov. 29, of the princess Margaret, the future queen of James IV. of Scotland. Henry VII. sends an auxiliary force into Brittany; confusion in the province; intrigues for the marriage of the duchess; return of the English army. Bartholomew, brother of Christopher Columbus, tries to arouse maritime enterprise in England. Surrender of Guadix, Almeria, and Baza, to the Spaniards. Reception of Zizim by the pope, March 14. Creation of cardinals, D'Anhusson, grand master of Rhodes, and John, son of Lorenzo de' Medici, et. 14 , afterwards pope Leo X. Ferdinand of Naples excommunicated and deposed, for refusing to pay his annual tribute to the pope; marriage of his grand-daughter, Isabella, to the duke of Milan. Death of John Wessel, professor of theology at Groningen. Johann von Tiefen, grand master of the Teutonic Order.
1490	Anne of Brittany betrothed to Maximilian, king of the Romans. Death of Alfonso, son of the king of Portugal, by a fall from his horse, during the festivities after his nuptials with Isabella, eldest daughter of the Spanish sovereigns. Abdallah el Zagal gives up to Ferdinand his remaining territories, and retires to an estate allotted to him; his nephew still holds out in Granada. War between Bajazet and Kalthai, sultan of Egypt; both send ambassadors to Rome; the Ottoman requesting the pope to keep his brother, Zizim, in safe custody, and offering a pension for his maintenance; the Egyptian proposing that he should be released, and supported in his claim to the throne. Death of Matthias Corvinus, et. 47 ; Ladislas, king of Bohemia, is elected by the Hungarians; Maximilian contends unsuccessfully for the crown, but recovers the Austrian provinces which Matthias had conquered. Marriage of Lodovico Sforza il Moro to Beatrice of Ferrara. A more perfect German version of the Bible is published. Elizabeth, widow of Edward IV., retires into the convent of Bermondsey.
1491	Queen Elizabeth gives birth, at Greenwich, June 28, to a son, afterwards Henry VIII. Charles VIII. sends back to her father his affianced bride, Margaret; compels Anne of Brittany to break her engagement to Maximilian, and marries her himself; this unites Brittany to France; Henry VII. and Maximilian league against him. To prepare for a war, Henry levies a benevolence on his people, and the parliament, Oct. 27, grants a supply. Ferdinand begins the siege of Granada. The rivalry of the two lately-married princesses, Isabella and Beatrice, is the beginning of discord in Milan. Marriage of the duke's sister, Anna Sforza, to Alfonso d'Este, son of the duke of Ferrara. After a struggle of many years, Riga submits to the Livonian knights of the Teutonic Order.
1492	Henry lands his army at Calais, Oct. 6, and lays siege to Boulogne. Charles agrees to pay him 745,000 crowns, and an annual tribute of 25,000; peace is concluded, and France retains Brittany. Imposture of Perkin Warbeck; he lands at Cork and gains partisans; is invited to the court of France; dismissed after the peace of Estaples; received and protected by the duchess of Flanders. Surrender of Granada, Jan. 2; end of the dominion of the Moors in Spain; Abn Abdallah receives a pension, and retires into Africa. After seven years of application, Columbus obtains from Ferdinand, in his camp before Granada, the means of undertaking his voyage of discovery; sails from Palos, Aug. 3; arrives, Oct. 12, at one of the Bahama islands, which he names S. Salvador, after which he reaches Cuha and Hispaniola. Death of Lorenzo de' Medici, April 7, et. 44 ; his eldest son, Pietro, takes his station in Florence. The cardinal Rodrigo Borgia, elected pope, takes the name of Alexander VI. On the death of Castmir, et. 64 , the Poles choose his son, John Albert, to succeed him. The queen dowager, Elizabeth, dies in the convent of Bermondsey. Expulsion of the Jews from Spain.

1493	Many of the English nobility, deceived by Perkin Warbeck, concert measures in his favour; Sir Robert Clifford insinuates himself into their confidence, and betrays their schemes; he discovers and publishes the history of the impostor. Death of the emperor Frederic, Aug. 20, æt. 78; his son, Maximilian, succeeds him; the first who takes the title of emperor of Germany, without being crowned at Rome; he marries Bianca Maria Sforza, sister of the duke of Milan, and concludes a peace with France at Senlis; by which Artois and Franche Comté, the dowry of his daughter, Margaret, are restored to him. Charles VIII. restores also to Spain, by the treaty of Narbonne, the counties of Roussillon and Cerdagne. Cadiz given up to Ferdinand. Columbus arrives at Lisbon, March 4, and is received by Ferdinand and Isabella at Barcelona, April 15; commences his second voyage, Sep. 25. The pope divides the yet undiscovered regions of the New World between the Spaniards and Portuguese, by a line, which, in the progress of discovery, he is obliged to correct, by removing it 370 leagues further westward. Defeat of the Turks in Transylvania, by Ladislas, and in Syria, by Kaitbai. The duke of Milan being now of full age, his uncle, Lodovico, intrigues to retain his power as regent; he creates discord between the pope and Ferdinand of Naples, and invites the king of France to revive the Anjou claim on that crown. The Court of Requests instituted in London.
1494	Henry punishes the Flemings for their support of Perkin Warbeck, by stopping their trade with England. Sir William Stanley, and other favourers of the pretender, are condemned and executed. Sir Edward Poyning, governor of Ireland, induces the parliament of that country to pass the Act, which bears his name, giving full force there to all the laws of England. Warbeck fails in an attempt to land in Kent. Ferdinand of Naples prepares to resist the threatened invasion, but dies, Jan. 25, æt. 70; his son, Alfonso, conciliates the pope. Charles sends agents into Italy, one of whom is Philip de Comines. The Neapolitan fleet defeated near Genoa, Sep. 8. Death of the duke of Milan (supposed to be poisoned by his uncle), Oct. 22, æt. 25; his widow, Isabella, and her children, are sent to the castle of Pavia; to the exclusion of her eldest son, the emperor Maximilian invests Lodovico with the dukedom. Submission of Florence to Charles, and expulsion of Pietro de' Medici and his brothers, Nov. 9. Zizim is placed by the pope in the castle of S. Angelo, and the knights who had attended him are sent back to Rhodes. Aldus Manutius sets up his press at Venice. Death of John Picus de Mirandola, æt. 33, and of Angelo Politiano, æt. 40.
1495	Warbeck retires to Flanders; is unsuccessful in Ireland; favourably received by James IV. in Scotland, and married to Katharine Gordon, daughter of the earl of Huntley. Charles enters Rome, Jan. 1; he is urged to depose Alexander, whose scandalous mode of life had given universal offence, but concludes a treaty with him, and continues his progress, Jan. 28. Alfonso resigns the crown of Naples, Jan. 23, to his brother Ferdinand, and retires to a monastery at Mazzara, in Sicily, where he dies, Nov. 19. Zizim, who by treaty had been delivered into the hands of Charles, is carried off by a slow poison, previously administered to him. Cardinal Cæsar Borgia, given by the pope as a hostage, makes his escape. Ferdinand retires to the Isle of Ischia; Charles enters Naples, Feb. 24; alarmed by his rapid success, the emperor Maximilian, Ferdinand of Spain, the pope, Venice, and Lodovico of Milan league against him; leaving a part of his army to occupy his conquests, Charles quits Naples, May 20; reaches Rome, June 1; the pope retires to Perugia; Charles breaks through the allied forces, posted on the river Taro to intercept him, July 6; arrives at Turin; concludes a separate treaty with Lodovico, at Vercelli, Oct. 10, and returns to France. Pisa regains independence. Supported by a Spanish and papal army, under Gonsalvo Fernandez di Cordova, and Prosper Colonna, Ferdinand II. enters Naples again, July 7, and recovers a great part of his kingdom. The diet of Worms establishes the Imperial Chamber of Wetlar. Wirtemberg created a duchy. John, king of Portugal, oppressed by grief for the loss of his son, Alfonso (see 1490), and the pope's refusal to legitimize his natural son, George, dies of the dropsy, at Albuera, Sep. 14; his cousin, Emanuel, succeeds. Jamaica discovered by Columbus, May 3. Alliance of the Valais with Switzerland.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

- 1496 The king of Scotland, with Warbeck, makes an inroad into Northumberland, but retreats before an English army. Encouraged by the success of Columbus, Henry sends out John Cabot, and his son, Sebastian, on a voyage of discovery. Columbus returns from his second voyage. Marriage of Philip, son of the emperor Maximilian, and Mary of Burgundy (see 1477), to Joanna, second daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella. The duke de Montpensier, French viceroy in Naples, dies at Pozzuolo, Oct. 19; his garrisons capitulate, and return to France. Ferdinand, on the point of regaining full possession of his kingdom, dies, Oct. 5, and is succeeded by his uncle, Frederic. The Venetians occupy Brindisi, Otranto, and other ports, as security for subsidies advanced by them. Maximilian enters Italy with an army; quarrels with the Venetians, and returns to Germany. Emanuel, in his treaty of marriage with Alfonso's widow, Isabella, eldest daughter of the Spanish sovereigns, agrees to expel all Jews and Mohammedans from Portugal; he fits out an expedition, under Vasco de Gama, to explore the eastern seas; departure from Belem, July 9. The Florentines besiege Pisa. Jesus College, Cambridge, founded by John Alcock, bishop of Ely.
- 1497 Insurrection in Cornwall; the rebels, headed by lord Audley, march into Kent, encamp at Eltham, are defeated on Blackheath, June 22; the leaders are executed, the multitude pardoned. The Scottish king makes another invasion, finds Norham castle well defended, and goes home again; a truce concluded, and Warbeck dismissed; the Flemings refuse him shelter, on which Henry allows them to renew their commercial intercourse with England. The adventurer still gathers some adherents in the West, with whom he attempts to besiege Exeter; his followers submit to the king's army at Taunton, and he takes refuge in the sanctuary at Beaulieu, in the New Forest. The marriage of Emanuel and Isabella is solemnized. Sep. 30. Maximilian's daughter, Margaret (see 1491), is married in April, at Burgos, to John, the only son of Ferdinand and Isabella; in Oct. the young prince dies. Sten Sture offends the Swedish nobility, is defeated, and deprived of his protectorate, by John, who enforces the union of Calmar, is crowned at Stockholm, and his son, Christian, is declared his successor. Divorce of the pope's daughter, Lucretia Borgia, from John Sforza. The church lands of Benevento and others are secularized by the pope, re-constituted into a duchy, and given to his son, John, who is assassinated seven days afterwards; the crime is imputed to his brother, Cæsar Borgia, who had laid aside his cardinal's purple, and resumed the position of a layman. The Grisons allies of the Swiss cantons. Vasco de Gama passes the Cape of Good Hope, and arrives at Calicut. The Medici repulsed from the gates of Florence. Birth of Philip Melancthon. Cabot discovers Newfoundland, and the coast of North America, as far as that part now called Virginia. University of Aberdeen founded. Maximilian licenses the fairs of Leipzig.
- 1498 Surrender of Warbeck; he confesses his imposture; his life is spared, but he is exposed to the derision of the populace, and detained in custody. A fit of apoplexy ends the life of Charles VIII., at Amboise, April 7, et. 28; the succession goes into the Orleans family, and Louis XII. takes the throne of France; he grants to Cæsar Borgia, and creating him duke of Valence, he obtains a papal Bull for his divorce from his first wife, a daughter of Louis XI., and marries Anne of Brittany, widow of his predecessor; he asserts his claims to the duchy of Milan, and the kingdom of Naples. Columbus, in his third voyage, discovers Trinidad. Vasco de Gama, having laid the foundation for the Portuguese empire in India, returns to his country. Birth of Henry's daughter, Mary, the future queen of Louis XII., and afterwards married to the duke of Suffolk. The Venetians, under the pretence of assisting Pisa, endeavour to gain possession of it for themselves; the duke of Milan aids the Florentines in prosecuting the siege. Savonarola, a Dominican, with two of his disciples, burnt at Florence, May 23, by desire of the pope, for preaching the necessity of reform in the church; his Life written by John Francis Picus Mirandola. Frederic, duke and elector of Saxony, grand master of the Teutonic Order. An Act of parliament forbids the Company of Merchant Adventurers to exclude other merchants from the trade of the Low Countries.

1499	Warbeck plots with the earl of Warwick to effect their escape from the Tower; hanged at Tyburn, Nov. 16; the earl, the last of the male line of the Plantagenets, beheaded, Nov. 28. The Florentines, unsuccessful against Pisa, behead their general, Paolo Vitell. Alliance of France and Venice, conquest of Milan; flight of Lodovico Sforza into Germany, with his family and treasure; entry of Louis, Oct. 8; Cremona acquired by the Venetians. Jean Jaques Trivulce, marshal of France, governor of the conquered State. Voluntary submission of Genoa. The emperor Maximilian makes war on the Swiss, is defeated, and concludes a treaty of peace at Basle. The Turks enter the Venetian States, and ravage Friuli. Ojeda, a former companion of Columbus, and Amerigo Vesputci, a Florentine, are employed by Emanuel to explore the New World: they discover Brazil; and Amerigo, writing an account of their voyage, calls the new continent after himself, America. Death of Marsilio Ficino, translator of Plato, and restorer of Greek philosophy, in Italy, Oct. 1. Ferdinand compels all the Moors in his kingdom to embrace Christianity, or quit the land.
1500	Henry VII., to avoid the plague raging in London, takes his family to Calais; interview there with Maximilian's son, Philip, governor of the Netherlands; projected marriage of his son, just born at Ghent (the future emperor Charles V.), with Henry's young daughter, Mary. The oppression of the French provokes a revolt in Milan; Lodovico Sforza returns with an army of Swiss mercenaries, by whom he is at last betrayed into the hands of his enemies, and consigned for the remaining ten years of his life to the castle of Loches, in Berry. The year of jubilee affords a pretext for the sale of indulgences in all countries, without requiring the purchasers to visit Rome. Murder of Alfonso of Aragon, third husband of Lucretia Borgia, ascribed to her brother, Caesar. Columbus, the victim of false accusations, is brought back to Spain a prisoner. Pedro Alvarez Cabral sails from Lisbon, March 8, with a fleet of thirteen ships, destined for India; driven by storms out of his course, he arrives at Brazil, and shares the glory of being its first discoverer; pursuing his voyage, he visits Quiloa, Mozambique, and the eastern coast of Africa. Corte Real, also sent out by the king of Portugal, explores the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and Labrador, as far as Hudson's Bay. Modon and Coron taken from the Venetians by the Turks. The Florentines renew the siege of Pisa, which they again abandon with great loss. War of Independence in Dithmarsch; the king of Denmark defeated at Meldorf.
1501	Marriage of Arthur, prince of Wales, to Katharine, daughter of Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, Nov. 14, and of the princess Margaret, to James, king of Scotland. Maximilian forms the Aulic Council. Conquest and partition of Naples by France and Spain; the armistice commanded by the duke de Nemours, and Gonsalvo de Cordova; the duchy of Anjou given to Frederic, which he holds till his death, Sep. 9, 1504. The pope creates his son, Caesar, duke of Romagna, having aided him in acquiring possession of the territory by force, fraud, perfidy, and murder; Faenza, the last city that holds out, capitulates on terms that are violated, and its lord, Astorgio de' Manfredi, a youth of 17, barbarously put to death. Sten Sture regains his ascendancy in Sweden. The duke of Saxony, as grand master of the Teutonic Order, refuses homage to Alexander, who succeeds his brother, John Albert, on the throne of Poland. Basle and Schaffhausen join the Swiss confederacy. Ismail I. founds the Soffi dynasty in Persia. Luther studies at Erfurt.
1502	Death of prince Arthur, April 2, æt. 16; his young widow retires to the palace of Croydon; the king projects her marriage to his son, Henry, now prince of Wales. Sebastian Cabot returns from his voyage; his report encourages Elliot, and some Bristol merchants, to undertake expeditions. Columbus, on his fourth voyage, reaches the isthmus of Panama. Continued atrocities of Caesar Borgia; by the same course of villany he makes himself master of Urbino and other cities; marriage of his sister, Lucretia, to her fourth husband, Alfonso d'Este, son of the duke of Ferrara. The kings of France and Spain begin to quarrel about the division of their plunder. Juan de Nova Castella, the Portuguese admiral, returning from India, discovers the island of St. Helena, May 21. Henry VII. builds his chapel in Westminster. University of Wittenberg founded.

1522	Charles breaks his promise to Wolsey, and obtains the papacy, Jan. 19, for Adrian VI., his former tutor, leaving Germany under the vicariate of his brother, Ferdinand, and the Netherlands well governed by his aunt, Margaret, he visits England again, May 26; soothes Wolsey by new promises and bribes; prevails on Henry to declare war against France; embarks at Southampton, July 6, and arrives at Santander, July 23; his presence restores order and tranquillity. The earl of Surrey, with a fleet and army, invades France; plunders Mortaix, besieges Hedim, and comes back, after a fruitless campaign. War with Scotland; the regent, Albany, advances to Solway Frith; his army refuses to proceed, and he concludes a truce with lord Dacres. Prospero Colonna defeats Lautrec, at La Bicocca, April 22; takes Genoa, May 30; the French are driven out of nearly all Italy. The duke of Urbino recovers his States. Rhodes surrenders to the Turks, Dec. 20; De l'Isle Adam, and his surviving knights, retire into Sicily. The Diet of Nuremberg sends to the pope a memorial of grievances, and demands a general council. Hasty changes, promoted by Carlstadt, produce disturbances at Wittenberg. Luther emerges from his retreat to appease them; he publishes his New Testament, and his Reply to Henry VIII. Cano returns with the ships of Mageihaens by the Cape of Good Hope, and arrives at Seville, having completed the first circumnavigation of the globe, in 1154 days. Death of Reuchlin, æt. 67. Anne Boleyn is recalled from France, and appointed maid of honour to queen Katharine.
1523	Henry assembles a parliament, April 15; Sir Thomas More speaker; supplies sparingly granted; the time of levying them arbitrarily anticipated. Venice, and the duke of Ferrara, join the league against Francis; the enemies who attack him on all sides, gain no permanent advantage. Flight of the duke of Bourbon into Germany. Admiral Bonnivet commands the French army in Italy, with the chevalier Bayard under him; they make no important progress. Death of Adrian VI., Sep. 14; Julius de' Medici elected, Nov. 19, takes the name of Clement VII. Wolsey sees the emperor's insincerity, and turns against him. Death of Prospero Colonna, Dec. 30; the duke of Bourbon takes the command in Italy. Gustavus Vasa king of Sweden. Christian, expelled by his subjects, takes refuge in Flanders; Frederic, duke of Holstein, is called to the throne of Denmark and Norway. Luther's opinions are widely propagated in the Netherlands, Denmark, Sweden, Prussia, Poland, and Hungary. A translation of the Bible is circulated in the Netherlands. Pilgrimage of Loyola to Palestine. Insurrection of the German peasants, headed by Munzer. Death of William Lily, the grammarian, first master of St. Paul's School.
1524	Retreat of Bonnivet; death of Bayard; the French driven out of Italy; the duke of Bourbon invades Provence; siege of Marseilles. Charles's allies jealous of his success. Francis collects a large army, and passes Mount Cenis; the imperialists retire into Italy; the French re-occupy Milan, and besiege Pavia; Venice maintains neutrality; Clement concludes a secret treaty for himself and Florence, with Francis. Treaty of Malmo; the independence of Sweden recognized; the union of Calmar dissolved; Denmark and Norway remain united; the island of Gothland given up to the Danes. Vassili makes unsuccessful war on the Tartars of Casan. Baber, a descendant of Timur, reigning in Cabul, takes Lahore. First discovery of Peru, by Pizarro and Almagro. Luther abjures his monastic vows; his monastery is secularized by the elector of Saxony. League of Ratisbon; cardinal Campeggio induces some German princes and bishops to support the established religion. Controversy begins among the Reformers respecting the Eucharist; Carlstadt withdraws to Strassburg, where Martin Bucer and Fabricius Capito adopt his opinions. Melancthon, professor of theology, at Wittenberg. The New Testament translated into Danish. Loyola returns from his pilgrimage and studies at Barcelona. Birth of Camoens.
1525	Henry Fitzroy, the king's natural son, by lady Talbot, is created duke of Richmond and Somerset; queen Katharine, annoyed by Wolsey's ostentation, provokes his resentment; he insinuates into Henry's mind doubts as to the validity of their marriage, and excites his admiration of Anne Boleyn; her father is created viscount Rochford, and treasurer of the household. Pavia defended by Antony de Leyva; the duke of Bourbon, marquis of Pescara, and Lannoy, viceroy of Naples, march to its relief; battle of Pavia, Feb. 24: Francis taken prisoner, and his army destroyed; Louis de la Tremouille, the admiral Bonnivet, and the duke of Albany, regent of Scotland, slain; among the prisoners are Henry, the titular king of Navarre, and Ferdinand Castriota, marquis of S. Angelo, a descendant of Scanderbeg. Francis conveyed to Madrid; the Spaniards, masters of Milan, leave the duke only a nominal sovereignty; they refuse to let the pope have Reggio; he negotiates with Venice. Charles gives his youngest sister, Katharine, in marriage to the king of Portugal, to whose sister, Isabella, he also contracts himself. Henry VIII. breaks off his alliance with Spain, and concludes a treaty, Aug. 30, with Louisa, mother of Francis, and regent. Great discontent excited in England by the king's attempt to raise money without authority of parliament; the insurgents submit, and are pardoned. Albert, the Teutonic grand master, embraces Lutheranism, secularizes the lands of the Order, and is declared duke of Prussia. Death of Frederic, elector of Saxony; his successor, John, assists the Reformation. The mass abolished in Zürich. Luther marries Katharine de Bora. The insurgent peasants defeated at Frankenhäusen, and Munzer beheaded. The Order of Capuchins takes its rise. Wolsey uses his legatine power to suppress several small monasteries, and with their revenues endows Christ Church College, Oxford, as also a school at his birth-place, Ipswich; he presents to Henry his new palace at Hampton Court.

1526 Treaty of Madrid, for the release of Francis, Jan. 17; he arrives in France, March 18; refuses to surrender Burgundy; concludes the treaty of Cognac, or Holy League, with the Venetians, the pope, and other Italian States, May 22, to which Henry VIII. accedes. Marriage of Charles to Isabella of Portugal, at Seville, March 3; he promises Milan to the duke of Bourbon. Soliman invades Hungary; battle of Mohacz, Aug. 28; defeat and death of Louis, et. 20; some magnates elect John von Zapolya, valvode of Transylvania, to be his successor, others acknowledge the claim of Ferdinand, archduke of Austria, who is quietly received in Bohemia; civil war enfeebles Hungary, and assists the progress of the Turks; the union of these two kingdoms to the house of Habsburg dates from this time. The elector of Saxony, and Philip, landgrave of Hesse, enter into a league at Torgau, which other princes join at Magdeburg, for their mutual support in the exercise of the reformed religion. The Diet of Spire resolves, that all the States of Germany are free to choose their own religion; the archduke Ferdinand, as vicar of the empire, signs and promulgates the decree. Conference between Reformers and Papists, at Hamburg. Publication of Luther's German Liturgy, and Tyndal's English version of the New Testament. Loyola studies at Alcalá de Henares; his zeal excites the jealousy of the Inquisition. Francis Guicciardini, a Florentine officer, is actively employed in the war, of which he afterwards writes the History. Hans Holbein comes to London.

1527 Rome stormed by the imperialists, May 6; the duke of Bourbon killed while mounting to the assault; dreadful massacre and pillage; the pope a prisoner in S. Angelo. A new treaty between England and France, May 29; stipulation, that Francis, or his son, the duke of Orleans, shall espouse the princess Mary. Wolsey's embassy, July 11—Sep. 16. The question of Henry's marriage begins to be publicly discussed. Mission of Dr. Knight, to negotiate with the pope for a divorce; he is admitted to him in S. Angelo. The Medici expelled from Florence, and the republican government restored. The duke of Ferrara takes Modena, and the Venetians Ravenna. Lautrec, with a French army, re-enters Italy; conquers Genoa, Alessandria, Novara, Pavia, and nearly all the duchy of Milan; marches towards Rome. After many negotiations for ransom and peace, Clement escapes in disguise from his confinement, Dec. 8, and reaches Orvieto. Ferdinand crowned king of Hungary, at Buda; John von Zapolya retires first into Poland, and then among the Turks. Marriage of Henry d'Albret, titular king of Lower Navarre, to Margaret, sister of Francis I., distinguished for her talents, and her patronage of learned men. The Diets of Odensee, in Denmark, and Westeras, in Sweden, establish religious liberty. Albert, duke of Prussia, marries Dorothea, princess of Denmark. Philip, landgrave of Hesse, founds, at Marburg, the first Lutheran university. Death of Nicholas Machiavelli, et. 58.

1528	Lautrec and the Venetians invade and nearly conquer Naples. Andrew Doria, after defeating and capturing a Spanish fleet, suddenly withdraws from assisting this enterprize, and returns to Genoa. Lautrec, and his successor, the marquis de Saluces, die of the plague, which carries off many thousands of the French army; the Imperialists, under the prince of Orange, recover the whole kingdom. The duke of Brunswick brings a large reinforcement to Leyva, in Milan; takes Pavia; is repulsed at Lodi; the plague attacks his men, and he returns to Germany. The emperor Charles V., although so powerful, is so poor, that he cannot pay his armies, and they subsist by plunder. The Venetians, under the duke of Urbino, retake Pavia. Andrew Doria restores the independence of Genoa. The pope, overawed by Charles, and veering as the fortune of war changes, temporizes in the affair of Henry's divorce; after long hesitation, the king's envoys, Gardiner and Fox, obtain from him a commission for the cardinals, Campeggio and Wolsey, to try the question. James V. of Scotland frees himself from the power of the Douglas family, and banishes them; commencement of the Reformation in that kingdom; Patrick Hamilton condemned by Beaton, archbishop of St. Andrew's, and burnt. Visit of De l'Isle Adam to Henry VIII., who recommends him to accept Malta for the seat of his Order. Death of Albert Dürer, the head of the German School, æt. 57.
1529	Campeggio and Wolsey open their commission, May 23; Katharine appeals to the pope, who evokes the cause to Rome. Treaty of Barcelona, between the emperor and the pope, June 29, stipulates for the restoration of the Medici at Florence. Peace between Charles and Francis, concluded at Cambray, Aug. 5, by Margaret, governess of the Netherlands, and Louisa of Savoy. Charles arrives at Genoa, Aug. 12; in his progress through Italy, makes peace with Venice, and other States; meets Clement, at Bologna, Nov. 5. Florence refuses submission to the Medici, and is besieged by the prince of Orange. Fall of Wolsey, Oct. 18; Sir Thomas More appointed chancellor. First interview of Henry with Dr. Thomas Cranmer, fellow of Jesus College, Cambridge, by whose advice the opinions of all the universities in Europe are taken, on the validity of his marriage with his brother's widow. The parliament, Nov. 3, passes Acts for reforming and regulating the clergy; impeaches Wolsey; Cromwell defends him in the House of Commons. The Moluccas are given up to Portugal by Charles V. Pizarro invades Peru. Soliman overruns Hungary, besieges Vienna, Sep. 22, is forced to retire, Oct. 15. John von Zapolya is crowned at Buda. Diet of Spire; the reformers deliver a protest against its decisions, April 19, and are thence called Protestants. First meeting at Schmalkalden. Conference at Marburg, Oct. 1. The Valais joins the Swiss confederacy. Oecolampadius completes the Reformation at Basle. Hans Holbein patronized by the new chancellor, Sir Thomas More. Birth of Palestrina.
1530	Cranmer and Anne Boleyn's father, now earl of Wiltshire, convey to the pope the opinions of the universities, and Henry's notice, that he will not admit any citation to Rome. Death of Wolsey, at Leicester Abbey, Nov. 28, æt. 59. Coronation of Charles at Bologna, as king of Italy, Feb. 22, and as emperor (the last crowned out of Germany), Feb. 24. Filibert, prince of Orange, killed in a battle before Florence; surrender of the city, Aug. 12, after a siege of ten months; Alexander de' Medici appointed chief magistrate for life, with the title of duke of Fenna; the office made hereditary in his family. The isles of Malta and Gozo, and the city of Tripoli, in Africa, given to the Knights Hospitallers, for the permanent residence of their Order, March 23. Charles decides in favour of the duke of Ferrara, Dec. 21, his long struggle against the papal claims on his States. Luther draws up the Articles of Torgau. The Confession of Augsburg presented by the Protestant princes, June 25, to the Diet held in that city. Final decrees of the Diet, Nov. 19, against the Protestants. Mendoza first viceroy of Spanish America. The duke of Savoy besieges Geneva, to restore the bishop, who had been expelled by the Reformers. Death of Andrea del Sarto, of the Florentine School, æt. 42. The poet Vida, who had been patronized by Leo X., is still favoured by Clement. Death of Margaret, governess of the Netherlands, æt. 50. Death of Sannazarus.

EVENTS AND EMINENT MEN.

- 1531 A parliament, Jan. 16; the attorney-general indicts the clergy for having infringed the "Statute of Provisors;" they throw themselves on the king's mercy, are heavily fined, and pardoned; in their supplication, they address him as "supreme head of the church." Katharine resists every effort made to give her consent to a divorce; Henry finally separates from her, June 14; she retires to Amptfil. Ferdinand, the emperor's brother, is elected king of the Romans; crowned at Francfort, Jan. 11. Clement resists the emperor's award till Oct. 12, when he gives up Modena to the duke of Ferrara, but from that time he begins to incline again in favour of Francis. Berne, Freyburg, and Zürich, compel the duke of Savoy to abandon the siege of Geneva. The Catholic cantons defeat the Zurichers, at Cappel; Zuinglius slain, æt. 47. Christian II., encouraged by his brother-in-law, the emperor, lands in Norway, and claims his lost throne. The Protestant princes unite in the league of Schmalkalden. Bullinger succeeds Zuinglius, and establishes the reformed worship in Zürich. Death of Occolampadius, æt. 49. Michael Servetus publishes a treatise on the Errors of the Trinity. Death of Louisa of Savoy.
- 1532 A parliament, Jan. 15, prohibits the payment of annats, or first fruits, to the see of Rome. Henry, again cited by the pope, refuses to attend or to send a proxy; renews his treaties with Francis, during an interview with him at Calais and Boulogne, Oct. 11; is married to Anne Boleyn, Nov. 14, by Rowland Lee, afterwards bishop of Coventry; appoints Cranmer archbishop of Canterbury; Sir Thomas More resigns the office of chancellor, May 16, which the king gives to Sir Thomas Audley. The Ottomans advance again towards Germany; the Diet of Nuremberg secures religious liberty to the Protestants, till the meeting of a Free General Council, and raises a large army to oppose the invaders; on the approach of this force Soliman retires. Definitive annexation of Brittany to France. The Florentines are persuaded by the historian, Guicciardini, and Baccio Valori, to surrender their liberties, May 1, and appoint Alexander de' Medici their absolute ruler and duke. Ancona treacherously seized by the papal general, Gouzaga. Clement arrives at Bologna, Dec. 8, to hold another conference with the emperor, who urges him strenuously to call a general council. Christian II. is captured by the Danes, and confined in Sonderburg till his death, in 1559. Albert, duke of Prussia, is put to the ban of the empire, but maintains himself against the German knights. John Calvin, or Chauvin, a native of Noyon, begins to preach at Paris. Conquest of Terra Firma; Porto Bello and Carthagena founded; mines of Zacatecas discovered. Christ-Church College, Oxford, additionally endowed by Henry. The Protestant clergy introduce the custom of attiring themselves in black.
- 1533 Appeals to Rome prohibited by act of parliament, Feb. 4. Archbishop Cranmer opens his consistorial court at Dunstable, May 10; declares Henry's marriage with Katharine unlawful and invalid, May 23; ratifies that with Anne Boleyn, May 28; she is crowned, June 1; birth of the princess Elizabeth at Greenwich, Sep. 7. The pope declares all Cranmer's proceedings null and void. Francis endeavours to mediate between Henry and Clement. The conference at Bologna continues to the end of February with little satisfaction to either the emperor or pope. Ambassadors from Portugal arrive there, accompanied by Alvarez, chaplain of Roderigo de Lima (see 1520), who, released from Abyssinia, misrepresents the sentiments of David, king of that country. Charles returns to Spain. Meeting of the king of France and the pope at Marseilles, Oct. 11. Marriage of Henry, duke of Orleans, second son of Francis, to Katharine de' Medici, Oct. 27. Death of John George, marquis of Montferrat, last of the family of Palaeologus; leaving no heir, great contentions arise for the succession, which are referred to the emperor's decision. Cortes conquers Cuzco and Quito, the capitals of Peru. Margaret, queen of Navarre, sister of Francis, avows heretical opinions; her mysteries, farces, and novels give a great impulse to the literary efforts of France. The Gargantua of Rabelais published. The writings of Henry Howard, earl of Surrey, and Sir Thomas Wyatt refine the English language, and inspire a taste for poetry in the higher orders. Death of Ariosto, æt. 39.

1555	Cardinal de la Pole recommends that the English Protestants should be mildly treated; Gardiner urges severity; his opinion prevails, and a court for the trial of heretics is opened under his presidency, Jan. 28. His first victim, John Rogers, a prebendary of St. Paul's, is burnt in Smithfield, Feb. 4. Ridley and Latimer suffer at Oxford, Oct. 8; seventy-two are sacrificed at the stake this year. The pope demands the restitution of church-lands and Peter's pence; Mary gives up all that are still held by the crown. The parliament, Oct. 21, refuses a subsidy, and rejects bills proposed for facilitating persecution. Death of Gardiner, Nov. 12. Heath, archbishop of York, appointed chancellor. Philip leaves London, Aug. 26; sails from Dover, Sep. 4; receives the Netherlands, by his father's resignation, Oct. 25, and appoints the duke of Savoy governor. The Diet of Augsburg, Sep. 25, confirms the treaty of Passau and the religious freedom of the Protestants. Death of Julius III., Feb. 8, and of Marcellus II., April 30; their successor, Paul IV. (cardinal John Peter Caraffa, founder of the Theatines and restorer of the Inquisition), although now æt. 80, begins to create general confusion by his arrogance and nepotism; despoils the Colonna family, gives their lands and dignities to his own relatives; and enters into a league with the king of France to take Naples from the emperor. Cosmo de' Medici, having assisted the Imperialists to take Sienna, in expectation of obtaining it for himself, is disappointed by Charles V., who gives it to his son Philip. Death of Henry d'Albret; Lower Navarre descends to his daughter, Jane, and her husband, Antony de Bourbon. Sternhold and Hopkins complete the version of the Psalms in English metre. Death of Polydore Virgil. John Knox with Calvin at Geneva.
1556	Crammer suffers at Oxford, March 21, æt. 67. The total number of Protestants burnt in England this year is 94; many others fined, imprisoned, or their property confiscated. Cardinal de la Pole appointed archbishop of Canterbury; is deprived of his legatine power by the pope. A truce for five years concluded between the emperor and the king of France, at Versailles, Feb. 5. Charles V. resigns Spain and all its dependencies to his son, Philip, Feb. 6. In Sept. he gives up the imperial dignity to his brother, Ferdinand, king of the Romans, and retires to the monastery of St. Just, near Placencia, in Spain. Paul IV. claims the disposal of the German empire, and deters the electors from acknowledging Ferdinand's title; he administers the government in his brother's name. The pope absolves the king of France from the obligations of the truce just concluded, and prevails upon him to renew the war, according to his treaty, for the conquest of Naples. Philip cedes Piacenza to the duke of Parma, and obtains his alliance; he sends the duke of Alva to invade the papal territories, the duke of Guise brings a French army to assist the pope, and induces the duke of Ferrara to join him. Death of Ignatius Loyola, æt. 65, and of Johan. Sleidan, the historian of the Reformation.
1557	Philip arrives in England, March 20; having obtained a declaration of war against France, June 7, he departs, July 7. The earl of Pembroke is sent to the Netherlands with 10,000 men, and joins the army commanded by Emanuel Filibert, duke of Savoy. Defeat of the French at St. Quentin, Aug. 10; their commander, the constable Montmorency, taken prisoner. To commemorate this victory, Philip afterwards builds the Escorial, and proposes to give the queen's sister, Elizabeth, in marriage to the duke of Savoy. Henry II. recalls the duke of Guise from Italy, and the pope is compelled to make peace, Sep. 14. Inquisitorial powers granted to Bonner for punishing heresy, are exercised by him with revolting barbarity; 79 victims perish at the stake this year. Congregation of reformers in Scotland. Deed of union signed at Edinburgh, Dec. 3. Ambassadors from Russia conclude a commercial treaty at London, May 1. Death of Anne of Cleves, in her palace at Chelsea, July 16, æt. 41. - the king of Sweden, for his son Erik. Bonner having condemned 39 more to the flames, is stopped by the death of queen Mary, Nov. 17, æt 43, and the accession of Elizabeth, who turns away from him when he is presented to her; she adds eight Protestant members to her council of state, and appoints Sir Nicholas Bacon lord chancellor, and Sir William Cecil secretary of state; releases all who are imprisoned, and recalls all who are exiled: orders the celebration of mass to be discontinued in her chapel, and the service to be read in English. Philip makes her an offer of marriage, which she rejects. Ferdinand I. is acknowledged as emperor, and crowned at Frankfort, March 14. Charles V. celebrates his own obsequies; soon after which, Sep. 21, he dies in his retirement, æt 59. The belligerents in Flanders agree to a suspension of arms, Oct. 17. Death of cardinal de la Pole, Nov. 18; a pestilential fever carries off twelve bishops. Death of the philologist Julius Cæsar Scaliger. The Salters' Company, London, founded.
- 1559 Coronation of Elizabeth, Jan. 15; the surviving bishops, all Catholics, refuse to officiate; the bishop of Carlisle is prevailed on to perform the ceremony. The pope denies her right to the crown: she recalls her ambassador from Rome. The Protestants greatly predominate in the new parliament, Jan. 25, and restore the religious institutions of Edward VI., May 8. Dr. Kitchen, bishop of Landaff, takes the oath of supremacy; all the other bishops refuse, and are degraded; Mathew Parker archbishop of Canterbury. Peace of Câteau Cambresis, April 2. Philip marries Isabella, the French king's daughter, who had been previously promised to his son, Don Carlos. Savoy restored to Emanuel Filibert, who marries Margaret, sister of Henry II. Return of Philip to Spain, leaving his sister, Margaret, duchess of Parma, governess of the Netherlands; he refuses the order of the Garter, sent by Elizabeth. Henry II., accidentally wounded at a tournament, dies, July 20, æt 41; his son, Francis II., husband of Mary Stuart, succeeds, æt 16; France is governed by his mother, Katharine de' Medici, and his wife's uncles, the duke of Guise and the cardinal of Lorraine. John Knox returns from Geneva, and promotes the Reformation in Scotland; the queen regent opposes it by persecution, and French troops are sent to support her; the lords of the congregation apply to Elizabeth for assistance. In Spain the Inquisition begins its reign of terror; the archbishop of Toledo is imprisoned; cardinal Granville, bishop of Arras, attempts to introduce the tribunal into the Netherlands; the resistance of the people is encouraged by William of Nassau, prince of Orange, and the count Egmont. The councillor, Anne Dubourg, the first victim of persecution in France, suffers on the Place de Grève, Dec. 23. The people of Rome break open the prisons of the Inquisition, set free its captives, pull down part of its palace, and destroy its records. The pope is compelled by the notorious vices of his nephews to banish them from Rome; he dies soon after this, æt 84, and is succeeded by cardinal John Angelo de' Medici, Pius IV. The Index Expurgatorius, or list of books prohibited by the council of Trent, is carried into effect by a papal commission. Cardinal Henry, regent of Portugal, allows the Jesuits to educate his nephew, and govern the kingdom.
- 1560 Elizabeth sends a fleet and army to assist the Scotch reformers. Death of the queen regent, June 10. Treaty of Edinburgh, July 5. The French evacuate Scotland, and stipulate that Mary shall renounce her claim on the throne of England. Mary and her husband refuse to ratify this treaty. Her subjects abolish the mass, and establish the Presbyterian church. Rebellion of Shan O'Neale in Ireland. Ascendancy of the House of Guise in France; league of Amboise against them; arrest of the king of Navarre and the prince de Condé. Death of Francis II., Dec. 6; his brother, Charles IX., succeeds, æt 10; Katharine retains the regency, and coalesces with the reformers to counteract the Guise family; the duke de Condé is saved, the constable de Montmorenci recalled, and the king of Navarre appointed lieutenant-general of the kingdom. Pius IV. acknowledges the emperor Ferdinand. Death of Gustavus Vasa, Sep. 29, æt 70; his son, Erik, succeeds him; his younger sons have Finland, East Gothland, and Sudermania. Death of Andrew Doria, Nov. 25, æt 91; and of Melancthon, æt 63. Birth of Arminius, Annibale Caracci, and Maximilian de Bethune, afterwards the duke of Sully. Westminster School founded by Elizabeth.

1561	Return of queen Mary to Scotland, Aug. 19; she is molested by John Knox and her subjects, for her adherence to the Catholic faith, and seeks the good-will of Elizabeth, but offends her by still withholding her assent to the treaty of Edinburgh. The wise government of Elizabeth lays the foundation of England's power and prosperity, and gives free scope to the spirit of the nation; she declines many proposals of marriage; lord Robert Dudley, a son of the late duke of Northumberland, becomes her favourite; she imprisons the earl of Hertford, son of the late protector Somerset, for having married, without her consent, Katharine, the younger sister of lady Jane Grey. The conference of Poissy inflames religious discord in France. The king of Navarre and Montmorenci join the Guise faction, obtain possession of the young king's person, and constrain the queen-regent to act with them. Edict against the reformers, now called Huguenots (see 1519); Condé and Coligny prepare to take up arms. The members of the Caraffa family, convicted of many crimes, are condemned to death by the pope, March 3, and the sentence executed. The council of Trent re-opened, March 10. Depredations of Dragut, the African corsair, in Sicily and Tuscany. Pius repairs the fortifications of Ancona, Civita Vecchia, and Rome. Cardinal Granvelle, created archbishop of Malines, thwarts the mild government of the duchess of Parma in the Netherlands. Naples harassed by the Spanish Inquisition. Gotthard Kettler, Livonian grand master of the Teutonic knights, converted to Protestantism, erects Courland and Semgallen into a duchy for himself. Esthonia and Revel are given up to Sweden, and the rest of Livonia to Lithuania. Death of Peter Martyr. Birth of Francis Bacon. Merchant Tailors' School instituted.
1562	Submission and pardon of Shan O'Neale. Elizabeth supports the Huguenots; is attacked by the smallpox. Edict of St. Germain in favour of toleration. Massacre of Huguenots at Vassy, March 1. Condé and Coligny collect their forces at Orleans; Rouen is taken from them by Antony of Navarre, who dies of a wound received there; arrival of English auxiliaries, Sep. 20; Havre de Grace given up to them. Defeat of the Huguenots at Dreux; the hostile commander, Montmorenci, is made prisoner by them, but their own general, Condé, falls into the hands of the adverse party. Jane d'Albret, on the death of her husband, encourages the reformed religion in Navarre, and educates her son, Henry, in that faith. The re-opened council of Trent begins its first session, Jan. 18. Turin and other towns occupied by the French are given up to the duke of Savoy; birth of his son, Charles Emanuel. Maximilian, son of the emperor Ferdinand, elected king of the Romans. Truce for eight years between Ferdinand and Soliman. Poland and Russia attempt to take Esthonia from Sweden. Discensions and dissensions of Protestant sects. The elector Palatine leaves the Lutheran for the Calvinistic creed, and introduces the Heidelberg catechism. Paul, son of Aldus Manutius, prints at Rome. Birth of Lopez de la Vega. Death of Lælius Socinus.
1563	Elizabeth evades compliance with the request of parliament, Jan. 12, for a settlement of the succession to the crown; they vote a subsidy for the payment of her troops in France. Assassination of the duke of Guise, by Poltrot de Méré, at the siege of Orleans, Feb. 24; compromise of Amboise between the two factions, March 19; they unite to take Havre de Grace from the English; the plague breaks out in the garrison; the earl of Warwick capitulates; his infected army brings the disease into England; Elizabeth concludes a peace with the queen-regent. Plans of the Guise family for marrying the queen of Scotland to some foreign prince; Elizabeth proposes her favourite, Dudley, now created earl of Leicester. Close of the council of Trent, Dec. 4. The citizens of Milan resist successfully Philip's design of introducing the Inquisition among them. Prejudiced against his son, Don Carlos, he invites the archdukes Rudolf and Ernest, sons of his cousin, Maximilian, to reside in his court; he begins to build the Escorial. Siege of Oran, by Dragut; the knights of Malta assist in repelling him. The duchess of Parma supports the complaints of the Netherlands against Granvelle's intolerance. War between Denmark and Sweden. Diet of Wilna and Synod of Pankow, in Poland; the Socinians establish a sepa-
